TO THOSE
NEVER CHANGE . . .

Man's most ancient and most recent attempts to formulate the concepts of his civilization have involved value systems in which certain allegiances have been inherent and unchanging: honor, duty, truth, and the intrinsic worth of the individual.

These values have been expressed in many ways, by many men, but to a naval officer the words of John Paul Jones stand above all others as a code by which to serve.

To these unchanging values this book is dedicated.

Henderslo

"It is by no means enough that an officer of the Navy should be a capable mariner. He must be that, of course, but also a great deal more. He should be as well a gentleman of liberal education, refined manners, punctilious courtesy, and the nicest sense of personal honor.

"He should be the soul of tact, patience, justice, firmness, and charity. No meritorious act of a subordinate should escape his attention or be left to pass without its reward, even if the reward is only a word of approval.

"Conversely, he should not be blind to a single fault in any subordinate, though, at the same time, he should be quick and unfailing to distinguish error from malice, thoughtlessness from incompetency, and well meant shortcoming from needless or stupid blunder."

John Paul Jones

IN THE MIDST OF TRADITION . . . CHANGE

The basic precept of science is that reality unrelentingly changes. A Greek philosopher expressed this by saying that a man cannot step into the same river twice. Change, however, is frightening only to those nations, groups, or individuals who fail to take it into account in planning for the future.

Change, certainly, is the overshadowing objective of the Naval Academy. To change and shape men is the reason for its existence.

And in this process, the Academy itself is constantly changed.

AND THE GROWTH OF NEW CONCEPTS

While the processes of change are generally considered to be gradual and inexorable, these processes are periodically accelerated. The four years of the class of 1965 represent such a period of accelerated change. This group of midshipmen, a small class by comparison with recent academy history, served as a barometer by which to measure the effectiveness of many new concepts in the shaping of a naval officer.

Such a group gains equally from the opportunity with which it is presented and the responsibility with which it is charged.

AFTER FOUR YEARS . . . A NEW BEGINNING

The profound influence of the Naval Academy is dominantly reflected in every graduate. Never in his lifetime will a man be unaware of the principles, the obligations, and the traditions which have become a part of his life.

Graduation as a naval officer, however, does not signify an end but a beginning . . . the beginning of a life dedicated to those unchanging values which have been made meaningful through change.

OFFICE OF THE SUPERINTENDENT
UNITED STATES NAVAL ACADEMY
ANNAPOLIS, MARYLAND

9 June 1965

Gentlemen of the Class of 1965:

My hearty congratulations to you on the successful completion of four difficult but rewarding and exciting years. Your graduation attests to your readiness to assume the junior officer responsibilities for which you have been so long preparing, and you now become the newest members of the proud group of men who are privileged to call themselves Naval Academy Alumni. Having had the honor of being associated with your splendid class during the past four years, I am supremely confident of the contribution that you, individually and collectively, will make in the years ahead to the service and to the nation.

Just four years ago as entering Fourth Classmen you faced a number of challenges including the major transition from civilian to military life. In the intervening years you have met and overcome many other challenges, and, additionally, you have participated in and contributed to some significant changes in the Academy itself which were designed to better prepare graduates for leadership responsibilities in the Navy and Marine Corps of the future. You can take pride in the realization that your class met all responsibilities and commitments laid on you in connection with these changes in a commendable manner. In the years ahead you can look back with genuine satisfaction on the role of the Class of 1965 in achieving improvements to the Naval Academy. In the final analysis, I could wish no happier fate for you than to have you leave every future assignment with the knowledge that your efforts played a part in making it a better billet for those who follow you.

We have shared many experiences during the past four years and I must confess to a feeling of sadness that my association with you as a class is now ending. But I look forward to future duty with many of you in other assignments, and you can be assured that I shall follow your careers with great interest. May you always have fair winds and a following sea.

FIRST BATTALION

Rick, as he is known to the Brigade, came to the Academy as a Marine junior, leaving behind him a year in Paris, and a year at the University of Maryland in Munich, Germany. Rick's amiable nature and intelligence made him an immediate success in Academy life. He began to work for the Log during plebe year. After showing his talent on the Layout Staff, he became the Log's Assistant Editor. Rick demonstrated his athletic ability on the Plebe swimming team, in football and water polo. During his four years, Rick encountered many girls and a new home in nearby Washington. In spite of a love for fun and frolic, and a little bright red sports car, "Hap" still managed to maintain Superintendent's List grades. He doesn't plan to follow the footsteps before him and is planning for further study and submarines. Rick is a diligent and capable worker and will continue to excel wherever he goes.

FREDERICK ARTHUR ADAMS

JAMES FREDERICK AMERAULT

ROBERT BUTNER AVERY

The "Ove", as he is affectionately known by his classmates, entered USNA from Reynolds High School in Winston Salem, N. C. Bob has made the most of his academic endeavor here at Navy as he is a triple overloader and he still maintained a Supt.'s list average. However, not all of his time was spent on academics as he took part in many intramural athletics such as soccer, basketball, and the newly initiated sport at Navy of rugby. In addition to academics and sports, "the egg's" interests were in females and sports cars. He was always writing to two or three young ladies at a time, but he never really landed one. Due to his intelligence, hard work, and likeable personality, Bob will surely be a success as a fine Naval Officer and a sincere friend to all his acquaintances.

As a rosy-cheeked seventeen-year-old fresh from Billerica Memorial High School in Billerica, Mass., Jim came to Navy prepared to tackle the task ahead. At Billerica Jim was outstanding on his football team and was captain of the track team. He brought these talents with him to Navy where he became an outstanding member of the Brigade Lightweight Championship Football Team his second class year.

All his talents are not in athletics. Youngster year he joined the LOG layout staff and worked his way to the top to become editor.

Showing a dedicated vigor in all tasks, Jim has made many friends at Navy who will not forget him soon.

JAMES LEE BENSON

Jim came to the Naval Academy directly from high school where he made an outstanding academic record for himself. His skill with the books has continued to provide him with many enjoyable Supt.'s List weekends. In the afternoons, he could usually be found around Hubbard Hall where he has given continuous service to the Varsity Crew as a manager since Plebe year. Being a loyal southerner, Jim's favorite book is "If the South Had Won the War" which he memorized Youngster Year, and he could always be counted on for a lively discussion on the matter.

Jim was highly impressed with flight training during Second Class summer and it will surprise no one if he starts growing a set of golden wings on his chest after graduation.

THOMAS JOSEPH BOVE

The "Tree", who hails from plush Palm Beach, Florida, came to the Naval Academy well prepared for military life. Keeping the Academy as his distant goal, he attended Riverside Military Academy, graduating with top honors. He received one of the few appointments to the Naval Academy available to outstanding graduates of military prep schools. Nor did his achievements stop there, for he has proven himself time and time again as a top flight Midshipman. Mild-mannered and soft-spoken best describe this tall, lean young man, with a flair for writing and impressing the girls. Being naturally talented at writing prose, he directed his efforts at writing for the Log which was culminated by his appointment as features editor. Perhaps he derived more practical benefits from applying his talents nearly as much to composing torrid love-letters to his many loves as he did to writing short stories. A man of leisure without leisure time, Bob could be found many an evening reading a good novel. Surprisingly enough, his studies never really suffered for his dalliance. Bob did not limit his endeavors to the field of leisure alone. Very active in all company business and sports, his prowess and determination in boxing won him the respect and admiration of all. With his keen sense of competition, lively wit, and military bearing he should go far in his chosen profession and be a definite asset to the Navy.

A wine sack and a loaf of bread symbolize one of our most popular classmates, Tom Bove. Obtaining his cosmopolitan outlook on life from Oak Hill High in Marion, Indiana (?), Tom has never failed to give those around him a little of his bright view of life.

Starting off his Academy career on the Plebe Crew Team, he has always shown a dynamic flair in all of the activities and sports in which he took part. His competitive nature is brilliantly pointed out on the squash court, where Tom is often to be found. Affectionately known as the "Little Flower", Tom has a deep interest in the Italian language and heritage. After spending his First Class cruise with the Italian Navy, he has taken an active part in the Italian Club activities and has completed a major in Italian.

No academic slouch, Tom is always ready with a quick smile and that little bit of "gouge" you need to pass that P-work, the next day. His warm personality and active mind insure Tom great success in any role in life.

ROBERT PORTER BUSH III

THOMAS POWELL CARSON JR.

Only hours after high school graduation "Kit" found himself here at the Naval Academy. Tom is one of those people who pledge they would never turn back to breakfast, but who bleeds blue and gold everytime he cuts himself shaving. With his stubborn determination to master anything that provides a challenge, Tom's enthusiasm showed in his academics as well as on the athletic field. His interest and activities in athletics on company and battalion levels brought in many winning seasons. Always well liked and the life of any party he attended, friends were nothing he was short of during those lovely four at Navy. If Tom continues to use his outstanding ability to learn and advance as he has during the past four years, he is sure to become a success in any field he chooses to enter.

FIRST BATTALION

Although descending from a long line of West Point graduates, John saw the light and chose to come to the Naval Academy. After attending the University of Florida for two years and Sullivan Prep School for one year, John reported here with a broad background and ready to give his all for the Navy.

One cannot say that John is a coaster, (He puts enough time in his studies to maintain an above-average grade.), but he has been known to favor the finer things in life. John starred on the fencing team during his plebe year and presently is the backbone and muscle of his company cross-country team.

John will go far in the service because of the ease with which he gets along among others with his easy-going, happy manners.

JOHN BODDIE COLEMAN JR.

JAMES NATHANIEL EDWARDS JR.

A great lover of the outdoors, Jim found the Naval Academy quite different from his life in the Garden State. He didn't have long to reminisce though, as Plebe basketball and crew soon occupied much of his free time. Although Jim was a standout in his Plebe sports, he decided not to participate in varsity competition, and his presence on numerous company and battalion squads has spelled the difference in many a contest. Handy with any gadget, Jim can always be found tinkering with his stereo or operating his well known chair zero, that is if he isn't escorting his O.A.O. about the yard. During his Second Class year, Jim used his extensive knowledge of firearms to help establish the Naval Academy Gun Club, of which he is a charter member. Youngster Cruise and prior experience with the fishing fleets of Long Island Sound have left no doubt in Jim's mind that the surface fleet will be his career.

WILLIAM JOHN ERICKSON

Bill was well known throughout the first company for his proficiency in several fields, especially ocean sailing, tennis, and developing the art of "padding out" to an amazing degree. However, even though he did spend a good deal of time admiring the "blue trampoline," he was never in danger from academics, always being comfortably sat, and rarely having to waste undue time studying. Bill claims South Pasadena, California, as home, and proclaims the glories of his state far and wide, to anyone who will listen. He had no steady girl while at the Academy, but he was famous for his willingness to play the field. A highlight of Bill's four years at U.S.N.A. was his participation, First Class Cruise, in the Kiel Festival, in Kiel, Germany. This included an international sailing race, in which Bill skippered the U.S. entry. It's hard to say which he enjoyed more—the sailing or the famous German hospitality. One thing is for sure, though: with his love for the sea, and his willingness to do new and unusual jobs, Bill is sure to be a credit to the Navy for many years.

Ted, known to his friends as "the woe", hails from Honolulu where he was president of his class in Kaimuki High School. Woe is a real go-getter and believes the only way is through action. His prowess in academics is evidenced by a high Q.P.R. and stars which he has retained from youngster year.

Sportswise, his physique speaks for itself. Woe rarely misses a chance to work out and may usually be found in the Field House weight room when he is not helping to push the first battalion rugby team to another victory.

However, Ted knows how to play also. His occasional social life on weekends always finds him as the life of the party where his humor and personality win him many friends.

The Navy will surely prosper from his diligent work, high sense of responsibility, and devotion as did the Academy during his four years here.

THEODORE IWAO HARADA

JOHN CHARLES HUDOCK JR.

Jack came to the Academy from the Hawaiian shores, and was always ready and willing to proclaim their glories far and wide. While at U.S.N.A., Jack developed an intense interest in weapons. Many an afternoon, he could be found either working on his own rifle, or across the river shooting. During his second class year, he helped to found the Academy Gun Club, of which he subsequently became secretary. One of the highlights of his four years here was ranking second in the class in weapons proficiency with the rifle and pistol. Being a Marine Corps junior, Jack is thoroughly sold on the Corps as a career, and it was always possible to hear a good argument almost every night, as he held forth on the virtues of the Corps vs. the Navy, the Army, and all other services. With his background and natural enthusiasm for the Marines, Jack should be a worthy asset to the Navy's amphibious arm.

DAVID RYLAND HUNTER

Among several of Dave's reasons for coming to Annapolis was his desire to play water polo. Southern California is his home so it is only natural he should enjoy water sports. While attending Lakewood High School he lettered three years in both water polo and swimming. His senior year there he was captain of each of the teams, and a member of the High School All-American freestyle relay team. In the last semester of his senior year at Lakewood, Dave also attended Long Beach City College for additional courses. His first year here Dave swam on the plebe team and has since been earning points for the varsity swimming team. He has played intramural water polo each year and was instrumental in leading his team to two brigade championships. One rarely finds Dave around the yard on weekends. During these times he may be away on varsity trips, practicing in the pool, or traveling along the north eastern coast with the Chapel Choir or the Glee Club. Dave's quick wit and light humor make him the life of any party, and his ability to make friends quickly marks him for future success.

FIRST COMPANY

FIRST BATTALION

Howie graduated from high school at a time when most of us were too young to drive a car. By the time he arrived at the Academy, he had a strong military background provided by 3½ years in the fleet. He was one of the few plebes to be older than his firstie. With his advanced age came wisdom and a nickname of "the old man". There were also handicaps associated with Howie's elderly state. He had to fight middle age spread and thinning hair while his classmates were at their primes.

Though he had been away from school for four years, Howie soon got the hang of academics and was constantly on the Supt's List. He used the extra liberty well and weekends found him nearly always with a companion of the fair sex.

From plebe year on, it was obvious that Howie was destined for big things. He was always an excellent leader and could be counted on to do the best job possible in anything he undertook. With his background and ability, he should make a fine addition to the Navy.

HOWARD EDWARD KOSS

DONALD LEE PILLING

FREDERICK GILLINDER PRICKETT

Fred hails from nearby Severna Park where he no doubt acquired some first-hand knowledge of the Academy before entering. He attended Severn School and was in the Reserves while at the University of Maryland before coming to Navy. Being from the Maryland area, Fred was a tremendous asset to the plebe lacrosse team as a high-scoring attackman and saw a lot of action with the varsity. He was also a member of the Ring and Crest Committee. His problem plebe year was not being able to drag, but he more than made up for it by dragging almost every weekend during his last three years at the Academy. Because of his desire to enjoy weekends and lacrosse, Fred had some close calls with academics—particularly Youngster skinny and Nav—and he never was in striking distance of the Supt.'s List. His goal is to be in some branch of Navy Air and his love of life and easy going manner will endear Fred to those he works with in any field he chooses.

Don, the Trident Scholar, was up into the wee hours all of First Class year dealing with the abstract abstractions of partially ordered systems. Thus, he topped off an Academy career of outstanding academic performance, while his aptitude for the service and his winning personality put him in the upper "greaser" echelons. This would be no surprise for those who knew Don back in Bayside, New York, for there he also excelled in academics and was a leader in student body affairs. Although Don's time was mainly taken up by his own studies and his efforts in tutoring his less gifted classmates, he did take part in company sports, in which he continually provided that oft' needed fighting spirit. Nevertheless, his record up to now is just the basis for a future in which the sky's the limit to success.

DONALD RAY RHODES

More commonly known as Dusty, Don graduated from high school in Boonville, Indiana, but since then his family has moved to Fenton, Missouri, a suburb of St. Louis. After graduating from high school in 1958, Don entered the Navy and served for three years as an enlisted man prior to entering the Naval Academy.

During his years at the Academy, Don has been a member of his company's cross country team in the fall, and for two years he participated on the battalion debate team. In the spring he can usually be found chasing a squash ball around the squash courts as a member of the company squash team.

Don studied Portuguese for his required foreign language and enjoyed it so much, he continued studying it as an overload. He has been very active in the Portuguese Club, and he hopes to go to Brazil in order to practice what he has learned of the language.

OSCAR DANIEL SCARBOROUGH III

A Navy junior, Dan is one of the few members of his family to serve on the Union side. He has lived all over the country, but claims Arkansas as his home. "Odes" spent a free wheeling year at Purdue before the Navy put a cramp in his style. Hopelessly in love most of the time here, especially after Youngster Cruise, he did manage to overcome this obstacle and acquire a physics major. He could always be relied upon to render an English translation of whatever language the Skinny Department speaks. Most of his spare time here was spent looking for a seven-foot mattress. If Dan makes it past an interview with "you know who", he would like to go into nuclear power. It's either that or try to find a cockpit he can fold into. Did you ever see a giraffe in an A4D?

WILLIAM MORRIS SIEGEL

Bill came to Navy after graduating from Will Rogers' High School in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Like every true "Okie" he majored in high school wrestling and then served a year on the Navy Plebe team. Bill participated heartily in the intramural program in Battalion wrestling and rugby.

Bill's interests also included working for the LOG magazine as an advertising representative. He also served on the infamous Actramid "Drum and Bugle Corps."

Taking time out from his busy schedule Bill managed to chalk up good grades and always showed a friendly face and winning spirit.

ROBERT CLINTON VAUGHAN

"Rusty" hails from Alhambra, California, and like most Californians he feels that it is the greatest place in the world. After arriving at USNA, he fitted into the routine like an old pro, taking plebe year with no trouble. "Rusty" has played in sports on the plebe, Battalion, and company levels, adding spirit and drive to each sport. He manages to have fun and enjoy the finer things in life and still keep his grades above the Supt's list level. "Rusty" is highly respected by all his classmates and has proved to all that whatever branch of the Navy he enters upon graduation he will certainly show his fine capabilities as a naval officer.

FIRST BATTALION

Ron came to the Naval Academy after attending San Fernando High School; however, he now spends his leave time in Potter Valley, California. (Rumor has it that he has been taking extra instruction in navigation to aid him in finding his home town.)

Aside from his bright red hair, Ron is also a standout in academics. His name has been a steady entry on the Superintendent's List. The liberty privileges associated with "star" grades have been diligently used by Ron in his activities with the Log advertising staff. Sports play a big part in his life; every team has benefited by his participation.

His ambitions show favoritism toward the Marine Corps; but no matter what direction Ron takes when our class separates, he will be an asset to whatever branch of naval service he chooses.

RONALD HOBSON WECHT

JOHN WILKINSON

A quick smile and a ruffle of abstract Math books announce that John Wilkinson is on the scene. Leaving an impressive academic and athletic record behind him at Hewlett High School on Long Island, John came to the Academy in the footsteps of an older brother in the Class of '63. His Plebe Year, John led his company to a Brigade championship in cross country and then sparked the half-mile combinations on the Plebe track team.

Coming to the First Company, "Wilk" was quick to establish a reputation as a quick wit and an aggressive competitor in intramural sports. Taking enough Math overloads to make Gauss look green with jealousy, he even found time to take part in an after class seminar in abstract algebra to further his background.

As John leaves the school where Admirals are born, he looks forward to a successful career in the Navy.

RAYMOND OLLON WILKINSON II

Ray will long be remembered for his work with the "Spiffies", playing lead guitar for that group during all of his four years at Navy. By no means limited to one field, however, Ray was a battalion crew coxswain and a varsity "sub-squader" each spring and kept a very popular column in THE LOG magazine. Ray is a Navy junior and came to Navy via Washington-Lee High School in Arlington, Va.

Short of stature, but long on spirit and truly a great guy to know, Ray was not what one would call a slash, but he found time out of his many activities to keep up a string of good grades.

The music world's contribution to the Naval Academy, Charles Michael Butterfield, an ex-white hat, hails from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. Mike, a Drum and Bugle Corps regular, has participated in almost all the musical organizations here at the Academy. Plebe year, he played trumpet for the NA-10 and the Concert Band. Youngster year, he shifted to the bass fiddle and he picked up the tambourine for the "Salvation Army Band." Since then he has also joined the Anchormen, the Sideboys, and the Annapolis Jazz Quintet. First Class year he moved to Leader of the NA-10.

Besides his musical activities, Mike has been Business Manager for the Popular Music Concerts, Company Honor Representative, a cheerleader, and a BAC member. Mike's quick wit and consistent sense of humor have made him very popular throughout the Brigade.

CHARLES MICHAEL BUTTERFIELD

JOHN BARRY CLODIG

A native of Gary, Indiana, John came to the Academy happy and smiling. Always well informed on world affairs, John has endeared himself to the English, History, and Government department known affectionately as the "bull" department. He has, however, not neglected his other interests which include judo, art, murder mysteries, and sports. As a member of the Public Relations Committee, John has announced almost every sport at Navy. Always ready to crack a joke or make a witty remark, he has always maintained his good nature and sense of humor; even through such trying times as youngster cruise! It seems Indiana failed to prepare John for the rolling waves of the sea and the gentle rocking of the ship which accompanies them. John's ship had no more than pulled away from the pier when he was seized by that dread plague known as seasickness. John made many trips to the rail that summer; but he never failed to do a good job. Determination and perseverance like this will make him a fine and long remembered Naval Officer.

JOHN EDWARD DALY III

The "old Dales" comes to us from Wilmington, Delaware, (and don't forget the Delaware) straight from high school where he was a letterman in Football, Basketball, and probably his first love, Baseball. An avid sports fan, John can be classified as an expert on either the Boston Red Sox or the Boston Celtics, whether it be averages, players, lives or records. Even though his letter-winning days didn't carry over here at Navy, John could be counted on heavily when it came to the intramural program.

The other major interests, besides sports, are John's studies and minor "speculations" in the stock market. He has been an eager student during his four years here and has taken full advantage of the new elective program. John's quick wit and sense of humor have made him quite popular with many of his classmates. John has never been one to turn down the chance to do a friend a good turn, and can always be counted on in a time of need.

Through his perseverance and determined dedication to his studies and education, John will surely do well in any field that he chooses, and should become an outstanding Naval Officer.

Coming to the Academy from Seattle, "Dobber" brought with him the spirit of adventure and ambition for which the West is famous. His tales of hunting and fishing achievements have provided all who knew him with the desire to join one of his camping trips. A persistent man, Ralph usually accomplished what he set out to do. Afternoons found him in MacDonough Hall, either boxing or managing the Brigade boxers. A member of the YP squadron for four years, Ralph is well-prepared for duty in the fleet. Usually quiet, when the occasion arose he was not one to miss the fun. Seldom did liberty call find him trying to decide where to go—he was already on his way. Ralph's quiet determination makes him a dependable man—one who is sure to succeed in all phases of later life.

JOSEPH DOMINIC FAVARO

RALPH PAUL DOBSON

After spending a year at Rockhurst College, Joe received his appointment to the Academy. Commonly known as "Fav" he was easy-going and liked by his classmates. Generally favoring the contact sports, he took an active part in the intramural sports of football and rugby, as well as excelling in attempts at golf and tennis. His extra-curricular activities included the Italian Club, Catholic Choir, and the Reception Committee. Academics did not come easy for Joe, but he compensated for this with his drive and determination. Regardless of what field of the Naval Service Joe enters after graduation, the Navy will be gaining a capable officer.

RICHARD PAUL GENET

Richard Paul Genet, a resident of Barrington, Ill., graduated from Culver Military Academy. Arriving here at the Naval Academy, Dick offered his services and experience to the Midshipmen's Sailing Squadron, where he became Skipper of the LIVELY youngster year. He has also Skippered SWIFT and the new fiberglass yawl FEARLESS. He sailed as foredeck captain for the ACTIVE on the Annapolis-Newport Race Second Class Summer and Sailing Master of the FEARLESS for the Bermuda Race First Class Summer. He also held down the job of Secretary of the MSS Second Class year.

Dick's other interests include WRNV where he was the Business Manager and D.J. for the folk show. He also formed and managed the Sideboys, a new folk music group. His interest in folk music includes self-taught lessons on the banjo, an instrument on which he has become quite proficient.

Dick's ready wit and sense of humor have stood him in good stead here at Navy.

John traveled from the hills of Pennsylvania to arrive at the Academy with quite a record behind him, having completed two years at Pitt. John has done well in all facets of Academy life—human relations at the top of the list. Thanks to his jovial temperament and unending patience he has risen high in the affection and esteem of his classmates. Being a gentleman in every sense of the word, John has been someone from whom all may learn. He will probably be best remembered by those who know him best for his unending trips to the Mid'n store to "re-stock" lost items. Much of his time was spent pursuing various activities among which were: Glee Club, Catholic Choir and Lucky Bag Staff. The drive and good humor of this fellow will carry him far in the Commissioned ranks of the Navy. He is certain to find the Naval Service a rewarding experience.

JOHN LEO GRADY

JOSEPH CERUE HARPER

Joseph Cerue Harper came to the Naval Academy from Hodgenville, Kentucky, where he graduated from La Rue County High School in 1961. While in high school he demonstrated considerable ability along academic and music lines, having been a member of the National Honor Society and the solo tubanist for his high school band.

At the Academy, however, Joe hasn't exactly been on the Superintendent's list, but he has managed to retain his proficiency on the tuba and is well known for his membership in the "Salvation Army Band."

Joe's diverse love life has been a constant source of amusement and interest to his classmates. For it seems as though he has fallen for a different girl every other weekend.

During youngster year he joined the Midshipmen's Sailing Squadron as Chief Cook and Bottle washer on the Yawl LIVELY. But, due to a few cases of ptomaine poisoning among the crew, he decided to give up the position.

Joe will probably be best remembered by his classmates and friends as being panic stricken throughout the examination periods.

JOHN PAUL HARRIS III

After a two year stopover at Virginia Military Institute, this son of Fredericksburg, Virginia, decided to trade in his marchin' boots for sea boots—what a disillusionment it was for him to discover that we had infantry drill here also. Virginia's loss became the Navy's gain though, as Jack quickly proceeded to excel in the classroom and on the athletic field. Academically, "the koala bear" or "raisin" continually bordered the Superintendent's List and finally pushed himself over second class year. But it was his willingness to arrange female companionship for his classmates that became a source of amusement for those fortunate enough not to be caught. His numerous and varied adventures with the young ladies and his incredible luck became almost legendary. It was even hinted that if Jack fell into a sewer he would come up smelling like a rose. It was our good fortune to have him as a classmate and friend and we are certain that those who come to know him in the future will share this feeling.

JOHN HYDE HOGGARD

Jack is known throughout his class for his easy going ways and amiable personality. Never having had even the least amount of troubles with his academics, Jack has carried overloads since the program began. Hailing from Wenham, Massachusetts, he has always excelled with the opposite sex and intramural athletics. He has caught many of the yard-gaining passes for the first battalion football team and is a consistent scorer for the company fieldball team. With perhaps the largest collection of country and Western music this side of Nashville, Jack takes a lot of kidding but always manages to win people over to his side with his ever-present smile and quick wit.

HUGH WYMAN HOWARD

Wyman, a dark, good looking, charming athlete (by his own admission) is the descendant of a long Navy line. In order to live up to the distinguished record attained by his father and grandfather in their midshipmen days, Wym had a special challenge to meet—and meet it he did. From the first, he appeared a "natural" for Academy life and found the adjustment an easy one. When it's time to play Wyman is the first to begin and hardest to play but when there is work to be done he's found there too, eager and willing.

Lacrosse and finding a June Week drag rank high among Wym's favorite pastimes though he has had considerably more success in the former.

The twinkle in his eye and his propensity for mischief have made Hughie a favorite companion of all. The great many friends which he has made at the Academy attest to his winning personality and fine character.

Anxious to begin his career, Wym is a sure bet to contribute well to the Navy and his country.

Jack, as he is best known, hails from Meridian, Georgia, as the Confederate flag on the back of his B-robe attests. Jack came to USNA from North Georgia College where he spent one year in preparation for the Academy. A very active young man, he is equally at ease in social circles or on the athletic field where Jack was a big help to his company's teams. His pleasing personality and quick wit make him extremely popular with his classmates.

Jack has put much time into academics during his stay here at the Academy. His academic accomplishments are accentuated by the stars that he proudly wears on his uniform. Jack's careful preparation in his studies should put him in good stead for the future.

Jack has always been noted for the "strain" that he takes in his appearance. He can usually be found behind whiskbrooms, Brasso, and Pledge cans when the time for formation nears. However, his military bearing and natural aptitude for the service should carry Jack far in his pursuit of a naval career.

JASPER BRINSON JOHNSTON JR.

JOHN CHRISTOPHER JUDD

Chris never had a chance, the Navy had him from the cradle—he was born in Norfolk. Though not a Navy junior his fate was sealed. Lulled by romantic and exotic recruiting posters, young Judd signed on the dotted line, and then it was anchors aweigh for San Diego, New London, Bainbridge, and, of course, Annapolis—but USNA gained no salt here, he had never been to sea! Both Cleveland, Ohio, and Denver, Colorado, are called home, but his heart belongs to the Colorado Rockies. Although never a polished academic apple, Chris managed to break through the Supt's List barrier several times. The German Department held a great attraction for him—a class mit Herr Roderbourg always made his day complete. It was seldom that Chris would play the same sport two years running. He wanted to try them all: Plebe Gym, Batt and Varsity Swimming, Water Polo, Winter Cross Country, and on the outside there was Mountain Climbing, Snow and Water Skiing, and even Skydiving—but whatever he did, he did well. He has high hopes for a successful and rewarding career with the Navy. PROSIT!!

RONALD EDWIN LODZIESKI

Ron, or "Ski" as he is known by most, is a product of Rocky River, Ohio. Having participated in football and basketball at Rocky River High School, he was well acclimated to the active life of a midshipman. Channelling his athletic abilities towards many different sports has done nothing to dull his keen edge of competition as is shown by his prowess in handball and boxing. "Ski" has taken a wide variety of electives to further his knowledge, mostly centered around literature, which fits his personality closely. He has always maintained a high academic average, as one who has checked the Superintendent's List can attest. Ron will be well remembered for his unique honesty and frank opinions, but even more he will be remembered for his sincere dedication to the Naval Service.

Born and raised in Chicago, Denny came to the Academy with a spirit of initiative and independence which have managed to reward him with outstanding academic achievements in the area of two majors. His easy going manner and willingness to help his classmates have marked him as a person on whom you can depend. Liberty-wise, he can always be found in the main body of attraction at the nearest "O" Club. Summer cruises have provided those who have associated with him a number of unforgettable experiences. During the winter sports season, he is usually to be found running for his life on the football fields of Hospital Point. With continued endeavor, tempered with his fun-loving nature, Denny should achieve success in any field of the service he enters.

DENNIS MICHAEL MORITZ

JAMES RICHARD PETROVIC

In keeping with the Navy tradition of his family, Jim also began his naval career by starting at USNA, after first putting in a year at San Diego State College. An ardent lover of water sports of any kind—stemming from his existence in the "warm California sun"—Jim found himself converted from a fish to a gymnast at Navy, eventually succeeding in gaining a position on the varsity gymnastics team. Being one of that rare breed to whom academics present few problems, Jim found himself with extra hours of freedom to spare in which he would indulge in his hobbies of "ray-soaking", "socializing", or conducting experiments in his "horizontal lab"—his blue trampoline . . . all of which never ceased to amaze his classmates. With the ingenuity and drive that Jim has proven he has, he will have no trouble carrying on the tradition of the naval service as he enters his chosen field of the Navy.

FREDERICK DAVIS REES JR.

Although Dave is one of Winter Park's outstanding citizens, he is not a true rebel, having been born in New Britain, Connecticut. Dave attended Winter Park High School and graduated from Columbia Military Academy. He is also a former Navy corpsman and a NAPS graduate, which is how he acquired the nickname of "Doc," and his fondness for an ever-present cup of coffee. True to his former trade, Doc recommends APC's and a piece of tape for anything from a tough weapons quiz to an ingrown toenail. However, on the track Dave is a ball of fire, having moved up to the varsity from the battalion and company teams. Dave's ever-ready wit has provided his classmates with many an enjoyable evening study period and it will be well received during his career in the Naval service.

CARTER BEAUMONT REFO

Carter Refo, affectionately known to the Brigade as "Reef", grudgingly left his beloved Virginia to become one of the "Men of Annapolis", thus following in the footsteps of his father and grandfather. Reef, however, wasn't satisfied to just live by the Bay—he had to live on it. It wasn't long before Reef felt the call of the sea and the need to breathe that salt air that every true sailor needs. I was never sure just who his roommate was, me or the mizzen. The Academy Sailing Squadron found a devoted sailor in Reef. And when the ground was frozen, the river iced over and the wind bitter cold, where was Carter then? On the cross country course, of course, hardy soul that he is! But Carter had another side that found expression on weekends. For Carter, College Park and the University of Maryland were the Elysium Fields where he thrilled to the sight of the pixie-like coeds that danced among the ivy. As for academics, Carter managed a creditable record, that is if we forget about Dago. Where he found the time to do all this what with cheerleading and various and assorted other activities was always a mystery. There's no room for doubt, Carter will give the Navy the best that he has to offer—and that's a lot!

This Southern gentleman came to the Academy from the "Heart of Dixie" and the "Cradle of the Confederacy", Montgomery, Alabama. He was always contented when he could expound upon the merits of the "Sunny South". Having little trouble with plebe year, Jim began immediately to absorb anything and everything the Academy could offer him in preparation for his commission in the Marine Corps. An ardent lover of the outdoors, he was always eager to return to the fields and streams of his home state at every opportunity. With his Southern charm and friendly smile, Jim will undoubtedly be a great asset to his chosen profession.

JAMES AUSTIN RUMBLEY JR.

JOHN LLOYD STRINGER

John Lloyd Stringer hails from Mobile, Alabama, where he graduated from high school in 1958 and shortly thereafter enlisted in the Navy.

While in the Navy he joined the Submarine service and worked his way to Engineman Third Class before going to NAPS.

At the Academy, John is best known for his ardent interest in the Midshipmen's Sailing Squadron. Plebe year he sailed on Highland Light and later transferred to the Dinghy Team. Youngster year he became a member of the foredeck crew aboard the sloop Norderney. With the arrival of the new Shields boats, John was quick to work his way up to Skipper of the Columbia, and has done quite well in competition since.

Besides sailing, John's major interests have been "liberty" and the "pad" and has logged as many hours as possible on each.

The image of John that we will best remember is that of the "Salty" sailor returning from the "sea" with his Nor'Easter on the back of his head, and visions of the "pad" on his mind.

Ernie settled down at the academy after having sampled Notre Dame, boot camp, and Naps. Plebe summer found him commander of the color Batt and he has been a striper ever since. A wrist watch was presented to him at Naps for academic excellence and he found that studies at the academy were fruitful also. Never has Ernie been without stars, but he would tell you that E H & G is the only decent department at the Blue Zoo.

After youngster year he considered going Ivy league but better heads prevailed and Mother Bancroft had him for keeps. Few could match him at squash; however, Navy had a coaching problem so he was content with tearing apart the Batt circuit. As vice-president of '65, he became known for his refreshing infallible logic which carried the class over many an obstacle which would have furrowed the brow of a lesser mind.

Ernie will excel wherever he goes and we wish him the best, be he on the inside or out.

ERNEST GLENN AMBORT

BARRY STANWAY BIRCH

Barry comes to us from the town of Tenafly in northern New Jersey fulfilling a life-long ambition to attend the Naval Academy and become a naval officer. Arriving from Maryville College in Tennessee which he attended for a year Barry easily adjusted to the academic challenge of the Academy. "Bags" has been a welcome addition to the Naval Academy Chapel Choir and Glee Club for four years with his musical background of three years in Tenafly's choir and two years in New Jersey's All-State Chorus. After lettering three years in tennis at Tenafly High Barry strengthened the Plebe tennis team his first year at Navy. On the weekends Barry is still to be found on the playing field . . . of romance, with always a charming and beautiful girl. During the 'Dark Ages', when he wasn't dragging or studying, Barry kept himself busy making the Musical Club shows a success through efficient acoustics with the 'Juice Gang'. Barry's acute desire to excel in everything he does along with a friendly smile and a biting wit will definitely enhance the fighting spirit and camaraderie in arms of the Navy's officer corps.

WILLIAM M. BLISS

Bill, known as Snoop by his classmates, entered the Academy after graduating from Deerfield Academy. A native of Jacksonville, Florida, Bill quickly adjusted to the Academy life, and became an active member of the track team where he won six letters. While at the Academy Bill was never known to really worry about academics and usually only studied the night before P-works, but he always managed to come up with Supt's List grades. The most familiar sight is to see Bill coming down the hall with a coke in his hand. No matter what he did, he always managed to come out on top. As for whatever branch of the service he may enter, he will undoubtedly be a success and a credit to the service.

Mike, originally from Columbus, Ohio, came to the Naval Academy from the USS Northampton. While serving three years in the fleet he attained the rate of Second Class Electronics Technician.

Mike has been very versatile here at the Academy, having played a different intramural sport almost every season. He also had a different girl just about every season.

Academics were a challenge to Mike, since he had been out of school for three years, but the extra weekends he took for being on the Supt's List proved that it was just another challenge he surmounted.

Mike missed "TRAMID" in Norfolk, third class summer because he was on the "Eagle". He also missed flight training in Florida because he was on the Plebe detail. However, neither of these bothered Mike because he was already sold on the "Mighty Fine" branch of the Navy. With his previous experience and his tremendous desire and liking for the Navy, Mike will probably be an outstanding 30 year man.

MICHAEL WILLIAM BORDY

Jim comes to us from East Chicago, Indiana, where he graduated from Bishop Noll High School. After starring for three years in football, Jim came to the Naval Academy and donated his services to the battalion team, where he continued his outstanding play. His two other main fields of interest while he has been with us are his studies and the opposite sex, not necessarily in that order. With his dimples and his winning smile, Jim has been successful with both of them, and promises to be successful in the future as well. Jim will definitely be an asset to the Navy in whatever capacity he may serve.

JAMES MICHAEL CARROLL

JOHN EVERSON CHUBB JR.

"Jette" came to us from Georgia Tech, where he was a brother in Sigma Chi. His ever-present smile and sincere character just naturally affect anyone fortunate enough to know him.

Jette is a Supt's List and star man in his own right and these have enabled him to graduate in the upper five percent of '65.

If you were looking for Jette, you might have tried the Class Improvement Committee or the Splinter Staff. Jette was Varsity Sports Editor and gave us fine sports coverage under his pen name of "Shelby Clovehitch".

Jette earned his letter as stroke for the Varsity 150# Crew, which rounds out completely the culmination of an admirable list of achievements at USNA. The Fleet could find no better potential for a really fine officer than in Joseph Majette Browne.

JOSEPH MAJETTE BROWNE

Hailing from Michigan, John moved around quite frequently prior to reporting to the Academy. He came in directly from high school, which he attended in Philadelphia and Detroit.

As a plebe, he was on the soccer team and as an upperclassman, was quite active in various intramural sports, providing always a spark of enthusiasm and drive.

Academics came very easy with John, who stands high in the class, and he proved to be a valuable asset to his classmates who experienced more difficulties with the books. In his spare time he dragged frequently and pursued various outside interests.

John's naturally friendly and helpful qualities will stand him in good stead throughout his life and he will undoubtedly encounter success in all of his endeavors.

STEPHAN DARROW CHUBB

Steve, the son of a Navy "skivvy Counter", came to the Academy straight from high school. He spent his plebe year in the terrible eighth company, where he learned well such arts as "shoving out", "clamping on", and "rigging knees". Youngster year he switched into the second company and soon gained fame as one of the stalwarts on the company's championship heavyweight football team. But he did not restrict his skills to the football field; he also excelled as a sprinter on the battalion track team; few managed to keep near him in the sixty yard dash.

Excellence in athletics, however, was only one of Steve's strong points. Second class summer he was a battalion commander at Actramid. (Word has it that he protected certain members of a syndicate who sold hot dogs and steamed corn, and gave haircuts. His price—free dogs, corn, and haircuts.)

In the academic world, Steve has taken a great interest in literature, but not so keen an interest in "steam-and skinny-like things." I wonder why?

Many will remember Steve as one who would willingly and cheerfully undertake any assignment to add something of value to the Brigade.

Joe came to the Naval Academy directly from San Francisco's George Washington High School. He brought with him a carefree attitude and a keen sense of humor. He never had any trouble with the humanities but maintained a running battle with the Skinny and Steam departments. Joe would use his free time for various activities. In the afternoon he could usually be seen doing some fancy broken-field running for the battalion rugby team, sunbathing on the rear terrace, or just logging in a few extra z's. Joe still found time to devote to the French Club and to any wayward plebe who ventured by. His ambition and desire to excel will help Joe on to a successful career in the Navy.

JOSEPH LLOYD CROTEAU

WILLIAM ALBERT FARNSWORTH JR.

"Farns" is a son of Gardner, Massachusetts, as his accent readily attests. After graduation from his hometown high school he spent a year at Bullis School and then began his career as a Naval Officer. During plebe year, he tried his skill at plebe crew, but the next year he found his real talents in battalion football and company fieldball. Bill has the phenomenal ability to listen to a radio, write a letter, read a book, and study, all at once. Since a visit to Japan after second class summer, he has set his mind to returning there someday as a destroyerman. Bill is one of those hardy sailors who really loves the sea. Well respected by all of his classmates, he is deserving of the best of everything.

JOHN JOSEPH FOY JR.

An Air Force Jr., John had seen much of the world before settling down by Severn's shores. Showing a zeal for Navy life despite his air force upbringing, J. J.—as he is commonly called—is anxiously awaiting the day he receives that lone gold stripe. To prepare for Uncle Sam's service J. J. is majoring in nuclear science. Not content to rest on his laurels as a scholar, John tears up the turf during the intramural soccer and rugby seasons. That big Navy "N" he wears is a reward for his keen eye and steady hand with a pistol. Rounding out what is left of his spare time, J. J. lends his talents to the Spanish Club and is a seasoned veteran of the D & B. Never too busy to help a classmate, John can always be counted on for help or advice. In John, the Navy has found a man who will go far in the naval service.

RICHARD WAYNE GARDNER

Dick came to the banks of the Severn after spending a year at Penn. State where he learned to cut Math class. In his usual easy manner he took Plebe Year in stride and embarked on his career as an upperclassman. Dick was an active participant in company sports and his outstanding abilities were the decisive factors in many a softball and basketball game. On Saturday afternoons Dick could be found at the golf course killing snakes in the rough with his trusty three iron. When the weather was too foul for the snakes to be out, you could find him at the bowling lanes attacking the 200 mark.

Dick's tremendous competitive spirit and great sense of humor have made him a fine classmate and big things can be expected from him in his future career.

VINCENT FRANCIS GARVY JR.

Blowing out of the Windy City, Vince spent a year at Loyola University of Chicago before coming to the Academy. Known to most as being a little on the quiet side, he knows when to express his thoughts at the right time. In athletics, Vince has been quite diversified, playing company softball, basketball and soccer, and running company cross country. He can also be found sailing on the Academy yawls or catching the wind on Lake Michigan when home on leave. Layout and writing a feature article for the Log were challenges enough to keep Vince out of the blue trampoline during his "free" hours. The academic departments have given Vince a fight whenever they have had the chance, especially the Engineering and Science departments, but Vince has managed to outwit them each time around. By the time Vince had achieved the necessary grade average to carry an overload, he discovered that his desired overload had been discontinued! The Navy is receiving a man who'll make a fine officer.

Bob left the jungles of New York City to see the world from the decks of the F. D. R. While a black box technician for the A3D, he decided that a commission would be more attractive. Bob had no trouble graduating from NAPS, and then embarked on the rigors of a character building plebe year. As an upperclassman, "Bull" was a ready source of professional knowledge for plebes who found him a walking Bluejacket's Manual. Also, classmates sought tips on the stock market from him, as Bob's knowledge of the financial world made him a sort of informal financial advisor. Through prodigious effort and much midnight oil, Bull successfully kept the academic departments at bay. Bob was a constant source of entertainment with his salty sea stories and wit. He was also a continual supporter of his company through intramural sports.

ROBERT H. HALSEY III

MARTIN RIDLEY HAMILTON II

A Southerner, "Ham" came to USNA after graduating from high school in Jacksonville. When not doing battle with the "skinny" department during his four years here, he could be found behind the scenes of the theatrical world, working with the juice gang and stage crew. Unpredictable and with an urge to travel, Ham could be found in just about any part of the world during his leave time. A Navy Junior with a love for the sea, Ham has pursued his sailing interests on board the Naval Academy's yawls in anticipation of the day when he hopes to go Navy Line.

JOSEPH JAMES LUCKARD

After graduating from De Witt Clinton High School, Joe spent two years at Bronx Community College before bringing his Bronx accent to USNA. Plebe year saw him out for cross country, track, and lightweight crew, which was his favorite sport during his four years at the Academy. He also loaned his voice to the Catholic Choir. After two years, Joe finally convinced the "Dago" department that he was not a French "slash" and cleared the way for work in the elective program for an engineering major and a future in either Navy Air or the EDO program.

Claude, affectionately known as C<sup>2</sup>, is one of Arkansas' finest contributions to the Academy's roster. Now hailing from Little Rock, Claude can boast a list of homes in such places as Germany, Japan, and California.

An enthusiastic leader in the intramural program he sparks the company cross country, volleyball and football teams. Perhaps the most memorable trait which C<sup>2</sup> displays is his constant smile and cheery "hi". In both the Fighting Fifth Company, where he endured plebe year, and the First Company as an upperclassman Claude has left his mark of fellowship. Enjoying his chosen profession as he does is surely to lead Claude to many successes in life.

CLAUDE CLEO LUMPKIN III

JOHN WAYNE MCKINNEY

A native of Pennsylvania, John brought to Navy a sharp wit and a pleasing personality with which to smooth the bumpy four-year road. Having more nicknames than fingers, he responds smiling at the sound of "Temperance", "Philadelphia Fats", or just plain "Mac". Although he has gained and lost many other titles, (he reports his opponents on the playing field call him "killer") these three are the most common. Putting his efforts into the intramural program of 150 lb. football, boxing, and gymnastics, he has proved his enthusiastic zeal for athletics. Off the playing field, John is active in the Spanish Club, the BAC, and the Antiphonal Choir. Not hurting for smarts, John amazes everyone with his ability to get by on the very minimum of book work. He spends most of his study time writing "little nothings" to his female admirers, or expanding his artistic talents. A true "Jack-of-all-trades" and a loyal "Navy Liner", John will prove a pleasant and valuable addition to his first love—destroyers.

NICHOLAS ALBERT PALDINO

Nick began his service career as an airman in the U.S. Air Force. From there he attended the U.S. Military Academy Prep School and then entered the Naval Academy. With this record behind him, Nick should be well on his way to becoming Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. His chest full of ribbons makes many a company officer wince. Nick has been a member of the Fencing Team and is editor of the 1964-65 Splinter. Add to this his frequent presence on the Supt's List and anyone can see that Nick has the background to go far in any branch of the service he chooses which from the look of his past just might be the Coast Guard.

When Bill arrived at USNA he immediately became an eager participant in a variety of academic, athletic, and extracurricular activities. Bill's first academic efforts qualified him for the Superintendent's list and he did not have much trouble with his later studies. Bill found his main sports interests on the waters of the Severn, each fall and spring, sailing in some fast moving dinghy races. During the winter seasons he was an outstanding player on the company lightweight football team. Many of us saw Bill performing the duties of acolyte during Protestant Chapel services. He also took an active interest in his classmates' welfare as a member of the class ring and crest committee.

No stranger to the service, Ric has spent most of his life "on the road", living on or near Naval bases from Panama to Rhode Island. A Navy Junior, he came to Annapolis to continue that way of life after turning down a chance to attend Yale, and he has attacked the challenge of the Academy with enthusiasm and fervor, maintaining a Supt's List average almost continuously. Ric is no stranger to the athletic field either, where his competitive spirit has brought him success in Batt wrestling, football, and rugby—an untimely injury being the only thing to keep him from obtaining eventual fame in the Brigade Boxing program. Not quite so adept at keeping his love-life completely organized, Ric is seemingly always having some kind of trouble with the many young ladies in his life, but his quick smile and warm personality, combined with the romantic legacy of his Italian heritage, make him almost as popular a figure with the girls as he is with his fellow midshipmen. His easy-going sense of humor and his ability to make friends, together with his determination to excel, make Ric a natural for a successful Navy career.

JOHN LEONARD RICCIO

PETER F. SCARDIGNO

As he hails from Highland Falls, New York, West Point lost a valuable asset when Pete decided to come to the Naval Academy, but you can't really blame him for choosing the best; "Ginzo" belongs with the best. To find a more conscientious person you would have to look a long way. Pete is not one to sit around. He's always on the move, be it on the football field—he was a starter on two Brigade Champion lightweight teams—or in the room, listening to Barbra Streisand, Brubeck, or Sinatra. Being an avid Jazz fan, Pete can usually be found with his ear glued to the nearest radio or phonograph. Pete will do his job well, whatever his choice of service.

Ron came to Navy straight from North Platte High School in the open plains of Nebraska and with a cheerful smile and an outstanding personality, he was a welcome addition indeed. Ron, always an avid sports participant, helped inspire his company and battalion intramural teams.

If the pad didn't call him, Ron could be found writing letters to various members of the opposite sex. There were very few weekends that Ron couldn't be seen dragging his O.A.O. around the yard throughout his four years along the Severn. However this didn't stop Ron from maintaining above passing grades at all times.

Despite Ron's avid interests in the "weaker" sex, he was continually waiting impatiently for the longer vacations when he could return to Nebraska and once again take up his hunting, fishing, and other outdoor activities.

An avid interest in the Navy and a professional pride in a job well done will prove valuable assets in Ron's career.

STEWART W. CALDWELL

If the south was well represented at the Naval Academy in the class of '65 "Big Stu" Caldwell from Royston, Georgia, certainly had a lot to do with it. This even tempered (except when plebes sang Marching through Georgia to him) red head certainly had his way with the girls. On any given weekend you could observe his six foot five frame strolling through the yard with a lovely creature. We lost a fine tackle from the football team when Stu was injured in spring practice of plebe year. When "the Horse" is around his wit and southern drawl make his company invaluable.

"Blinky", who was born, raised, and befreckled in the city of Bartow, in the central part of the sunshine state, is a perfect example of a true southern gentleman. He will undoubtedly retire to the land of Mossy Oaks, Azaleas, and Magnolias to sit and sip mint juleps. Len may be considered by some to be somewhat culturally oriented, some of his favorite pastimes being discussing politics, classical and semi-classical music, and other high-brow topics. But he is, as well, adept at all-around activities. Some of his other interests are tennis, academics, and (in keeping with the traditions of his native habitat) girls, aquatic sports, surf, sand and sunshine. He is a diligent worker, a loyal friend, and an honorable, courteous gentleman. We are all sure he will stand an alert and rigorous watch throughout his naval career.

WILLIAM ANTHONY DiPROFIO

Rooming with Bill has been both profitable and pleasurable. When the time for hitting books comes, the room is like grand central, with people coming in to get the gouge from Bill. Di-Prof has even been known to give a few profs the gouge. There is never a dull minute in the room when Bill is around. Between the unending rain of his Bostonian wit and the tap-tap-tap of his D.&B. drum sticks, Bill keeps any party hopping. His long list of interests is headed by one, girls; two, a mean game of squash; and three, playing the piano. Bill has worn stars since the day he got here, and he is a man of small stature and tremendous drive. Bill has the self-inspired ability to get the job done.

RICHARD CHARLES EMERSON

Dick, alias "Ralph Waldo", came to the Academy as a Navy junior with a list of sea stories that grows longer every year. Having a special knack for unsettling upperclassmen, Dick had a very eventful Plebe year. He waged war with the academic departments for his entire stay. Somehow he always managed to come out on top, although the issue was often in doubt till the bitter end. However, when it came to maintaining a military bearing and remaining physically fit, Dick had few equals—as his airborne wings and boxing awards can testify. He was named the champion Plebe builder in the company as early as youngster year and was never seriously challenged for the title. A decided and forceful individual, Dick will be an asset to any outfit he is assigned to.

WILLIAM MICHAEL GRAMMAR

Mike, an "Army Brat," rarely lived in any one place long enough to call it home. He had the dubious honor of attending about thirteen different schools on the way to receiving his high school diploma. This background must have agreed with him as it was always his intention to pursue a career in the Armed Forces. After spending a year in the University of Oklahoma, Mike had no problems with the academics at the Academy. He participated actively in intramural sports and insists that no one could have had more fun in the program than he. After giving his flight instructor a severe nervous condition with some rather original maneuvers during second class summer, he has decided his abilities might be more appreciated in the surface or sub-surface Navy. Whatever he chooses, we wish him the best of luck.

PAUL EDWARD GIRARD

Paul comes to Canoe U. from Christopher Columbus High School, Miami, Florida. In keeping with his heritage, sun, surf, sand, and casual living are an integral part of the life of this native of the Florida Gold Coast. P. G. brings his musical talents to Navy Tech via the Vanguards and the Crusaders, both drum and bugle corps in Miami. When not blasting a French horn for the Hellcats, P. G. can usually be found at his favorite pastimes—dragging, bowling, or engaging in free exercise on the blue trampoline. In spite of these many activities, Paul manages to maintain a star average. He will be a welcome addition to the officer corps of the naval service.

FREDERICK ARTHUR GRIMSHAW JR.

Throughout his stay at the Academy, the kid with the perpetual smile has been a constant source of inspiration to his friends and acquaintances. Anyone who has been exposed to his wittiness and easy going manner cannot help but enjoy his company. Even his mother likes him.

Fred hails from Braintree, Massachusetts, which is a suburb of Boston. The readers from that area will certainly remember the football victories of Archbishop Williams High School during the '60 season. One of the main reasons for its successes is right before your eyes—the Eighth Wonder of the World, whom the Boston papers nicknamed "The Shadow" and selected as a member of the South Shore All-Star Team.

His exploits in football have continued at the Academy, and he has proved to be an irreplaceable flanker back on Navy's 150 pound National Championship Football Team. He has not been limited to outstanding performances on the athletic field alone, proving himself to be an equally capable scholar.

We are quite certain that after graduation he will prove himself to be as big a morale booster to his men as he has been to his classmates.

Vultch, as Bill was fondly known, hails from Alexandria, Va. It was here as a freshman in high school that Bill became infatuated with the game of golf. One could always find him hitting the links with the team in fall and spring. When the weather became colder, Bill moved indoors to Dhalgren Hall with the company basketball team and did an outstanding job. A delegate to Boys State and president of the Student Forum of his high school, Bill carried these valuable experiences over to his Naval Academy career which made him a valuable leader. Among Bill's other interests are fishing, drinking, reading James Bond novels, and of course the fairer sex. Voted Most Popular in high school he had lived up to his reputation by having been the envy of his classmates on weekends. Along with all of these activities Bill worked hard at academics and was on the Supt's List for the not so easy first semester of Second class year. A good knowledge of Spanish enabled him to go on the Venezuelan cruise during first class summer. A man with a sense of humor and a strong spirit, Bill will be an asset to any naval command.

WILLIAM BAILLE HUNT

STEPHEN EDWARD KATZ

Although born in Boston, Steve has had an opportunity to live in many different parts of the country and Europe, as he is a Navy junior. He currently resides in Newport, R. I., where his father is attending the Naval War College. Steve came to the Academy from Washington and Lee High School in Arlington, Va., where he was active in Student Government work, soccer, track, and Thespians. Since coming to the Academy Steve has distinguished himself in Company sports, among them soccer, football, and squash. He has also found time to become active in WRNV, the Academy radio station, and he is a frequent contributor to the Log and Splinter magazines. His favorite pastimes include bridge, tennis, and golf; but even with all these activities he has maintained a good academic average. Steve's outstanding personality and easy-going nature have won him many long-enduring friendships at the Academy which should stand him in good stead as he pursues the life of a career officer. He will undoubtedly make an excellent one.

JAMES ARTHUR LAWIN

Mike comes to the shores of the Severn with a Mid-Western accent traceable to Freeport, Illinois. Upon first acquaintance, his friends are told to call him "Mike". But, after a while, they tend to believe this to be a misnomer. "Rip Van"—they all claim would be more appropriate. Despite his affinity for the blue trampoline, his grades have brought him close to wearing those coveted stars of academic excellence.

Mike has formed many close friendships while at the Academy. One of the many reasons for this is his warm and friendly personality. He has been a standout athlete on the Company softball teams. Whatever the sport, Mike is always playing with vigor and enthusiasm. Whether on the playing field or in Bancroft, Mike's dependability and readiness to lend a hand has been evident to all since that June when he first donned the uniform of a Midshipman.

With Mike in one of the Navy's supersonic aircraft cockpits the aggressor had better beware. He is out to win and has the skill and aptitude to do it.

Jim was born in Minneapolis but now calls bustling Long Prairie, Minnesota, his home. Jim played football for Long Prairie High School where he was an honor student. Jim has excelled in company sports since coming to the academy and has sailed on the Dandy in the Bermuda race for ocean sailors. He prides himself on his cooking aboard the Dandy and is often acclaimed the best cook in the squadron. He has developed into an excellent bridge player and bowler. Jim has still found the time to maintain an academic average worthy of the Superintendent's list. Jim's special interest is girls. He likes older girls, younger girls, but most of all lots of girls. With an ever ready smile and a good natured laugh, Jim is a loyal and true friend. His drive, determination and friendly manner should serve him well in his chosen branch of the Navy.

JOHN MICHAEL LUECKE

JOHN WILLIAM McKLVEEN

McK, as John is known to the world, came to the Naval Academy from Jackson, Michigan, directly after high school but didn't let that stop him from validating a year of math. In addition to maintaining a star average, McK helped many an upperclassman, as well as classmate, who were waging a battle with the academic departments. Despite spending many long hours at his studies, McK often graced the fairer sex with his ready smile, good sense of humor, and quick wit. Not one to let grass grow under his feet, McK decided that by being in Concert Band, he could get out of happy hours during plebe year. McK also demonstrated his musical abilities by playing "solos" during D & B concerts. McK's fulfillment of duty sparkled throughout his tour on the Plebe Detail and on the German exchange cruise, during first class summer. Topmost among his extracurricular activities was the German Club where his firm grasp of the German language and customs astonished all. With his desire to do every job well combined with his enthusiasm and easy ways, McK will be an asset to the Navy.

By the time that Al came to U.S.N.A., he was by no means unaware of the perils of academy life, since he had already spent a year and a half at the Argentine Naval Academy. Consequently, plebe year was a breeze for him, not to mention the next three years, during which he took enough overloads to get a major in mathematics. Besides excelling in academics, Al has been active in both varsity and intramural sports, including intramural soccer, gymnastics, water polo, and varsity gymnastics. His main interests have been girls, girls, and girls, in that order. In fact, he has proven over and over again that Latin Americans do have a way with the fairer sex. Among Al's other interests have been the Foreign Relations club, and the Spanish and French clubs, to which he has devoted much time and energy. After graduation Al will return to his country's navy, where he will undoubtedly serve with distinction.

ALBERTO FELIX ODDERA

JAMES PATRICK O'HANLON

The Livermore Falls (that's in Maine in case you didn't know) wonder boy, more affectionately known as "The Big 'O'," came straight from high school to join the big blue '65 team. Since academics seemed to come naturally, he was able to devote much of his time to other more challenging endeavors such as athletics, enjoying a zero slope on his blue trampoline, extracurricular activities, and chasing members of the fairer sex. While still a youngster, he was an officer in the Foreign Affairs Club. As Jim loved to run, he was naturally attracted to such sports as cross country, and Batt. track. He also played such contact sports as 150 lb. football, boxing, and rugby. Being popular and well liked among his classmates, he was elected, without opposition, to the Ring and Crest Committee and in addition, was Thirsty Third's Lucky Bag Representative. Other notable accomplishments include participation on the Eagle Cruise, Plebe Detail (where his squad got so fed up with being run that they made it a habit to throw him in the shower or reflection pool at least once a day), and frequent mention on the Superintendent's List. J. P.'s diversified background, many interests coupled with his dynamic "Irish" personality will make him a valuable asset in whatever he undertakes.

FRANK KENT PETERSON

After graduation from high school in notorious Chicago, "Friendly Frank" came straight to the Academy with salt on his tongue and sea foam in his eye. Never a dull man with his wit, it was not unusual to discover that without your realizing it until it was too late, F. K. had neatly pinned your ears back. His quick wit was equaled only by his academic agility. Frank was the individual who never sweated passing exams, but got gray hairs wondering if he'd even have to bother taking them. With the fair sex, his abilities were never known to be lacking as witnessed by the nickname "Dahleenk", which he picked up after one riotous weekend in D. C. For the most part, however, his athletics were confined to boxing, football and soccer, where he again excelled. An intense worker, who tenaciously tackles any job, Frank will easily guarantee his own success.

Not even the excitement of fabulous Las Vegas could change the serious personality of George Henri Robert, but the Mohave Desert developed in him a strong inclination for the sea. Joining the Navy ranks after two years at the University of California at Santa Barbara he managed to survive as a plebe, achieving every honor in the academic field the following years. This did not prevent him from enjoying plenty of time in the practice of his varsity sport, the blue trampoline, and intramural sports, which included sailing. A strong admirer of France, he had completed a major in that country's tongue midway through second class year, becoming also Vice-President of the French club as a result of determined and hard work. We are sure there could be no barriers in life which his energy and desire will not surpass and so we can predict for him fair sailing in the nuclear units of the Silent Service, whose ranks he hopes to join.

GEORGE HENRI ROBERT PETITJEAN

RICHARD WEAVER PIATT

Dick came to the land of pleasant living from Los Angeles, but can call almost any city home. After graduating from high school he joined the Marine Corps for a two year tour, spending four years here waiting to get back. After an almost losing fight with the chemistry committee, he was able to catch hold and gain a place on the Supt's list. Dick spent part of his spare time writing for the Trident. He was a varsity wrestler, but gave it up to play rugby. Back in the hall he was active converting everyone to the Corps. Making friends came naturally, especially with members of the opposite sex—he is one of the few who could drag two at a time, and get away with it.

JERRY NEAL ROACH

"The Littlest Texan" came to USNA after a brief but glorious career at Amarillo J. C. and he flatly denies the rumor that he was asked to leave town. Jerry took an active interest in the brigade, spending a year as varsity wrestling manager and being company honor rep. for his entire stay on Severn's shores. Jerry applied himself well in the academic field also; once he managed to overcome plebe German he had little trouble obtaining a spot on the Supt's list. The extra liberty he got for his high grades Jerry used to pursue various nefarious activities in the D. C. area. Jerry has a ready wit and when he's not using it to verbally destroy the enemies of the Lone Star State he uses it to add humor and a touch of common sense to his classmates' lives.

FIRST BATTALION

Having left his Illinois carpet bag behind him early in life, Robby came to the Naval Academy bringing convincing proof that Fort Lauderdale is where the men are. Despite a brief brush with the academic board, the gentleman from the deepest South established for himself an excellent record—morally, mentally, and physically. As an athlete Robby displayed remarkable prowess in football, holding down tackle assignments on both Brigade Championship battalion and junior varsity 150-pound football teams. An active member of the gun club, he participated in both pistol and rifle events, earning expert qualification as a rifleman. Having discovered the fairer sex before he joined us, Robby made a hit in society, with active participation in the flying squadron as experience toward choosing his service selection. Known for his easy-going nature and keenly analytical mind, Robby early attained qualities that will send him on extended voyage in the Navy.

WILLIAM NEAL LEE ROBERTSON

JOHN EDWARD RUTKOWSKI

Jack, a native of Cleveland, Ohio, entered the Academy upon his graduation from Chanel High School. His only complaint was that in entering immediately after high school, he missed the opportunity to partake of the frivolities of college life. Jack, who always strived to retain his individualism and remain a slight non-conformist, did manage to survive plebe year without an excessive amount of grief, and eventually found the correct mixture of individualism and militarism. Always a believer in the value of a good education, he proved himself adept in handling the diversified curriculum of the Academy. During his four year sojourn on the beautiful shores of the Severn, he participated actively in the intramural program, with a special interest in battalion football and company fieldball. Upon graduation, he desires to become a member of the nuclear-Navy, preferably, the sub-surface branch. Good luck, Jack.

ROBERT JAMES SULLIVAN

"Sully" arrived at the Academy from the thriving metropolis of Wallkill, New York. He immediately began to win friends with his easy-going manner and ready wit, although the latter was not always appreciated by the upperclass during the dark days of Plebe year. Bob's enthusiasm and will to win have benefitted many of the intramural teams ranging from fieldball to squash. His keen sense of humor has helped to relieve many a dull and dreary study hour; some of his exploits will be talked about for years after graduation. Although not a slush, Bob has managed to do well in academics and has found time to keep up with the news magazines. Any ship with Sully on board can look for a sharp increase in morale and efficiency. His mature outlook and sense of fairness make him a valuable asset to the service.

FIRST BATTALION

Tom came to Navy from Wyoming where he spent two years in a Junior College. Tom was always willing to get anyone a date for the weekend. Company sports were his meat. On the sports field he was always on the go, always with victory in his eye. In academics he fought a constant battle for two years with Dago. He won three out of four semesters but never with a large margin. Tall and easy going, Tom made you think of the cowboy from Wyoming, a place he was very proud of.

THOMAS JAMES COLYER

JOSEPH ALFRED DEITCH

ERIC RODHOLM ERNST

Eric came to the Naval Academy from Elkhart, Indiana. After Plebe year he decided to try working at his grades. Despite his studies he was always ready to take a weekend in D. C. or try his luck at poker. Between bad eyes and large size his service selection was pretty well made for him, which wasn't too catastrophic since he liked destroyers.

Joe came to USNA from Nutley High School with great ambitions in baseball and basketball. He started at shortstop, and led the Plebe team in RBI's. After third class year Joe's basketball and baseball careers were sidetracked, though not from lack of ability. Aside from his athletic ability, Joe has never had trouble with academics which gave him ample time on the blue trampoline. Not being an Olympic swimmer when he arrived, Joe has been one of the mainstays on the sub-squad all four years. His greatest asset is his friendly, affable personality which has secured him numerous friends, and upon meeting one could hardly forget him. On the Plebe detail Joe proved himself an exceptional leader. During that summer he found that his interest lay in flying jets. However, Joe's combination of wit, congeniality, and intelligence will enable him to succeed in any career he chooses.

RICHARD STEPHEN FARRELL

Dick, better known as the Fox, came to the Academy after graduating from Saint Peter's Prep School in Jersey City. At Saint Peter's, Dick was captain of the football team and he put this talent to work for the Plebe team. Dick was not only an outstanding athlete but found little difficulty with the academics. He had a running battle with the Executive Department second class year but the Fox emerged victorious. Dick could be found spending his free time running around Dewey field or in the weight room and because of these activities always remained in top physical condition. His pleasant personality and warm manner have won Dick many friends during his four year stay at USNA. These attributes will make Dick an outstanding Naval officer.

Bob, better known to his friends as "Goose", came to the Naval Academy from Phoenix, Arizona. Possibly destined to have been one of Navy's finest baseball players, he had to give up his sport after plebe year because of an arm injury. However, he did not let this deter him as an athlete, and soon became a standout on the company soccer and fieldball teams.

Bob had few problems with the Academic Departments for he ignored them, and they ignored him. It was a different story, though with girls. His ease and prowess with the fairer sex usually left him with a field of admirers wherever he went. Certainly, with this man, popularity will never be a problem. His sparkling personality, determination, and uncanny wit will carry him far in whatever career he chooses.

ROBERT ARTHUR GOSNELL

Richmond, Virginia, sent "Hoppy" to us, but only after a stint in the University of Richmond, an enlistment in the Navy, and a term at the Naval Academy Prep School at Bainbridge, Maryland. Being wise to the ways of the world from his roving days, "the hopper" soon showed he was well equipped to cope with the trials of a plebe year in "friendly fourteen." It was that spring that he first unveiled his talents on the company softball diamonds. Whenever information concerning future action was desired, "the pulse" was the man to contact. He always knew "what was shakin" on the circuit for the coming week. His friendly way, quick wit, sense of humor and love of athletics made him a friend to all who knew him.

JAMES ROBERT HOPKINS

DONALD CARL HOUGHTON

Nick comes from Georgetown, South Carolina. This becomes apparent the moment he drawls out a few words. Nick never was in a hurry about anything, especially when it came to opening all those books; but he always managed to stay ahead of the academic departments. He might have missed the reveille bell a few times but he never missed the liberty bell. Nick was always fond of sweet Carolina blondes who often accompanied him while he availed himself of a few of the more enjoyable facilities of Annapolis.

NICHOLAS WOODFIN GLOVER

Don came to the shores of the Severn after four very successful years at North Allegheny High School. He was not only an outstanding baseball player but also President of his senior class. During Plebe Year, "Hoot", as he was known to his buddies, was a slick-fielding shortstop on the Plebe Baseball Team. Don found little trouble with the academics and he had plenty of time to devote to extracurricular activities. An avid outdoorsman, he liked to spend time hunting and fishing in the hills of Pennsylvania during leave. Being a member of the Hop Committee, Don was never at a loss for a date and he was always the life of the party. His friendly personality and sense of humor made him a very popular and respected member of the Brigade and these traits will insure him of a very successful career in the Navy.

FIFTH COMPANY

FIRST BATTALION

Hailing from the corn fields of Illinois, Hammering Hank arrived here at the Academy with a slight weight problem. But after a gruelling plebe year in the fourteenth company he emerged as a physical specimen that Charles Atlas would be proud of. In high school Hank spent his fall days on the gridiron and the spring time would find him on the old cinder track. Hank amazed everybody with his ability to pull straight A's without cracking a book. I doubt if any of us will ever forget his extra instruction sessions for those of us who were lacking in mental dexterity. Hank was so impressed with our swimming program that he took extra instruction on the side stroke in the afternoons for two years. Henry always had an eye for girls, cars and food in just about that order. Henry was the subject of many jokes but he will always be remembered for his ability to laugh along with the rest of us. His good nature and academic ability will take him far in the world.

HENRY MARTIN KLEEMANN

DENNIS KEITH KRUSE

CHARLES CHRISTIAN MANGER

Denny came to Navy from the Great State of Indiana. He entered the Academy right after finishing high school, and he quickly adopted the navy way of life. He displayed his professional interest by his active participation in the YP Squadron, to which he devoted much of his time and a lot of hard work. Despite this devotion to duty, however, he never failed to take advantage of the extra liberty privileges afforded him by participation in the YP Squadron and many of his fondest memories are of these occasions.

Coming from Hawaii and being of a rather casual temperament, Chris underwent quite a transition upon his decision to enter the Naval Academy and its military regimentation. He brought with him from Honolulu a Punahou education and a yearning for the surf and the beach. While at Navy he established himself as a competitor on the football and lacrosse fields on an intramural level. During the week Chris spent much of his time devoted to the search for knowledge which was essential for him to complete majors in Mathematics and Nuclear Science. However, on the weekends his mind couldn't have been further from Bancroft Hall. This time was set aside for parties and relaxation so the next week's work could be met in a proper frame of mind. During the summer of 1964 Chris will get his first experience with submarines, which will determine where his fields of future study will be found.

ELROY ALLEN McALEXANDER

Skip came right out of Mayetta High into the Naval Academy. He brought his abundant athletic abilities and put them to use in the intramural programs. He was a leader in cross-country, light-weight football, and softball.

In the academic field of endeavor, Skip could really knock-em dead in bull, but could never get his head into studying the more scientific courses. Not having to study skinny and math, he always had time to bring happiness to the young ladies of the area. After each busy Saturday night, he could always be found teaching Sunday school. The thing that he will be remembered most for, however, is his capacity to be a friend and help anybody out whenever help is needed. His personality and determination will insure him success in his bright future.

Ed came to the Academy from New London where he excelled not only academically but also athletically. He left New London High School with many high jump records that remain to be broken. At the Academy, Ed continued his fine record as a high jumper, winning medals in such competitive meets as the Heptagonals and the Penn Relays. Academics posed no problems for Ed, although he studied and worked with diligence. Believing that there is a time to work and a time to play, he enjoyed his leisure with his stereo and idyllic afternoons in the pad. Always appreciative of the fairer sex, Ed's winning humor and personality left a lasting impression on anyone who associated with him. His ability, as well as his enduring pleasant disposition, will do much in making Ed a success in the Fleet's air arm.

EDWARD JAMES McLYMAN

Tim came to the Academy from Cadillac, Michigan, after a glittering high school career which centered around a guard slot on the Viking football team. During the winter he could always be found logging time on the slopes in Michigan as a member of the ski patrol. When "T.B." showed up in Annapolis, he brought with him an avid interest in all sports as witnessed by his participation in two plebe sports. Whenever there were any rock and roll sounds to be heard, "T.B." could always be found, ready to put down his steps. Tim always managed to stay one jump ahead of the academic departments, and this left him time to enjoy some of his favorite pastimes. In the middle of every week the first battalion "what's happening" man could be found completing the details for the coming week-end's party. With a glib tongue and a keen sense of humor Tim became a quick and lasting friend to all who knew him.

THOMAS BERNARD MEYER

Norm joined the Navy and left his hometown of Marquez, Texas, to see the world. He made ET3 before entering the Prep School at Bainbridge. He considers himself fortunate to have entered USNA before his twenty-second birthday.

NORMAN RAY PADGETT

GEORGE MAURICE STEPHAN

George graduated from Newington High School in 1961 and three days later entered the Academy. After a rigorous Plebe year he settled down to the routine of an upperclassman and maintained a solid C average in academics from there on out. Although by no means a skinny slash, he joined the ranks of the Midshipmen's Juice Gang during youngster year and worked his way up to being Chief Electrician, full of big ideas for First Class year. Much of his other free time was devoted to Ocean Sailing, and he participated in the Annapolis Newport Race during the summer of 1963. There were no limits to his curiosity and he could often be found prowling the depths of the Bancroft Hall basement. Another favorite pastime was twisting the regulation book to suit his own needs and he usually came out ahead of the game. George's interest in and devotion to whatever job he tackles should prove to be a valuable asset when he enters the Naval Service.

FIRST BATTALION

Jim came to USNA from Culver Military Academy with an outstanding scholastic record. He has had no difficulty in maintaining a high academic average here, having acquired a major in Physics, even though he frequently preferred to do other things rather than study such as dragging almost every weekend Second and First Class year. While at the Naval Academy he was a member of the Presbyterian Church party choir, the Annapolis Choral Society and the German Club. As for sports, Jim was varsity soccer manager and ran company cross country. He was also the Batt electronics supply man. A good guitar player, he frequently entertained his roommates whether they wanted to listen to his playing or not. A ready smile, quick wit and his good-naturedness won him many friends. Jim's attitudes and many abilities should carry him far in his Naval career.

JAMES STEWART FINLAY III

ANTHONY RONALD TESORIERO

BRIAN DOUGLAS UBER

Brian came to the Academy from Bridgeton, New Jersey, after a year at the Bullis School. He received his appointment through the Naval Reserve Program by scoring high among the quota, and has since met no problems with the academic departments. During the four years he devoted much of his spare time to bettering his professional knowledge with the YP Squadron, and also served in the percussion section of the Midshipmen's Concert Band. Aside from Youngster cruise on the carrier Forrester and First Class cruise on the destroyer Stickell, Brian liked to spend his summers going places, and visited much of the United States via military transportation. "Ubes", as he is known to his friends, thoroughly believes in getting the most out of life. He has a likeable personality and will surely leave his mark in the naval service both as an officer and as a man.

Tes, the old man of the company, came to USNA from Oswego, N. Y., on the shore of Lake Ontario. He was active in high school football and basketball, winning area honors in both. At the Academy he played company soccer, basketball, and softball and did well in all. Academics came easy for him and he spent his free time with Bull overloads or in the pad. When not on a Supt's list weekend, he could usually be found on the tennis court, listening to rock and roll records, or eating pizza at a relative's house. Being proud of his ancestors he was always ready to hear a new "Italian" joke. He will always be remembered for his cynical humor, electric toothbrush, and burning desire for Sub cruises. With his winning smile and friendly personality he should be as great an asset to the Navy as he has been to the brigade and the class of "65".

RAYMOND VINCENT WELCH

Ray really never got homesick here because he graduated from Gonzaga High School in Washington, D. C. After plebe year he really had a good deal, living inside the seven mile limit, although it was not always easy to get out there. Being stronger than the average bear, Ray devoted his time to rowing on the 150 lb. crew team. He sparkled when it came to academics, taking overloads, pulling high grades and sub cruises. In his room you could always hear an album of the Ventures or Chet Atkins. Ray was never a fool and thus did not waste his time trying to cope with a member of the opposite sex. His sense of loyalty and duty is unimpaired and will help him in his career. He will be remembered as the guy everybody wanted to pal around with.

FIRST BATTALION

Johnny came to USNA from the sunny state of Florida. He came directly to Annapolis from Boone High School in Orlando, Florida, where he was both an outstanding student and athlete. His academic prowess has enabled him to appear frequently on the Superintendent's List. Since Johnny is quite interested in electronics, he occupies most of his spare time tinkering with a remote control tape recorder which he built. Although quiet and very serious-minded, Johnny was always ready to drop everything for a weekend. During the summers, he enjoys water skiing and visiting those beautiful Florida beaches. This accounts for the deep, golden tan that he always brings back to Annapolis after the summer. Johnny's quiet, determined manner has made him a favorite among his classmates. Following graduation, this intelligent Floridian will surely be successful in whatever field he endeavors to follow.

JOHN GERALD ARIKO JR.

WILLIAM CARROL BARTUSEK

"Black Bart," hailing from Ottumwa, Iowa, came east after graduating from high school to see what water looked like. After his arrival at Navy he descended upon the Bull Department for a Social Sciences major. His fine legal mind, firm individuality, and sound logic make him a terror to behold in a heated discussion, while his continued market following has resulted in copious paper profit. Bill was also active in BAC and NAFAC, and participated in Batt. Tennis and Handball and Company Softball and Lightweight Football. Bill's drive and convictions will always serve him well.

WARREN WILLIAM BOLES

Bill came to the Naval Academy from NAPS, having had three years prior service in the Marine Corps and a short stretch at Tufts University. One of Bill's greatest assets proved to be his size and strength, as he finds his greatest pleasure in gliding over the waters of the Severn as a member of Navy's crew team. Most of Bill's weekends and summer leaves were spent at the working end of a big oar. This love of the water, developed by boats and beaches, may not be carried over after graduation if he can find any airplanes big enough to fit him.

Wendell came to the shores of the Severn from Orem, Utah. Since he entered the Academy his likable manner and Hollywood smile put at ease all those who were lucky enough to meet him. His hard work on the athletic field won for the "Thirsty Third" many first places on the cross country team, and Wendell was a continual inspiration to the volleyball team. Wendell also tried his luck in boxing and did an outstanding job. As a result of his excellent physical prowess he was given a "Mr. Body Beautiful" award by our plebes at a Sunday evening happy hour. Wendell was continually on the Supt's list, however studies took a minimum of time from letters to his "O.A.O." and reading James Bond novels. Wendell's aspirations to join the elite of Navy Air were enhanced by his "blacking out" his instructor while performing acrobatics in a T-28 trainer at Pensacola, Florida. Graduation for Wendell will be just one more step on his sure road to success.

WENDELL EARL BROWN

Pat came to Navy fresh from the banks of the Maumee River in Maumee, Ohio. While he was initially well known for his football prowess as a block-blasting fullback, he later was to become famed also as a super Lacrosse player, an "A" student and President of his class. The "Bear", one of the most popular men at the academy, likes nothing better than skiing and when not able to actually go skiing, contents himself with watching ski movies. When not studying or participating in athletics, this well rounded man could be found with some of his many friends taking part in Pat's favorite pastimes of movie going, and just "messing around."

WILLIAM PATRICK DONNELLY

WAYNE LLOYD HANSON

Jay, a native son of Pennsylvania, entered the Academy after graduating from Mt. Lebanon High School. Even though Jay had attractive scholarship offers to several universities, he decided that he would dedicate himself to a career in the naval service. Jay was well-suited for life at the Academy, and he seemed to thrive on the rigorous and demanding routine of Midshipman life. Immediately upon entering the Naval Academy, he decided to develop something new to him and he started to throw the javelin only to end up as one of the top-notch trackmen at Navy. Jay was never without a smile and a good word for anyone and he did much to promote Academy spirit.

JAMES CLOWSER CHENEY

Wayne migrated to Annapolis from Sunny California. While at the academy, he lived, breathed and slept athletics. Football, baseball and track all benefited from Wayne's ability during his stay at Navy. Wayne has been a living example of the results that can be achieved through determination, hard work and desire. A very popular midshipman, Wayne is by no means one sided. He is a "star" man academically, and can always be counted on to attack any chore with the same vigor and effort that he showed on the sports field.

"B. J." came to these hallowed halls from Muncy, Pa., directly after graduation from high school. He continued his fine record here both in academics and on the wrestling mat by making Supt's list and by pinning his opponent in exactly 52 seconds in his first varsity match. He has spent a great deal of time this last year working as an officer in the B.A.C.

Brian also plays as hard as he works; consequently he has come back from cruise each year with some pretty exciting sea stories and inevitably with a few more memories of the opposite sex.

With his inquisitive mind and abundant natural abilities Brian will be assured of complete success in any field of endeavor.

BRIAN JOHN KENNEDY

THOMAS OMAR KOCH

BRIAN FRANCIS LANTIER

Prior to entering the Academy, Brian attended a very unfriendly rival, the University of Maryland. To their misfortune he gave up his athletic scholarship, became the plebe lacrosse captain, broke the scoring record, and later gained All American recognition in his first varsity season at Navy. He also enjoyed consistently beating his former alma mater as an N winner on the soccer team. With his fraternity life stymied Brian had to settle for whatever he could get away with and maintained the philosophy that "everything happens for the best". Perhaps the only time this philosophy deviated was in respect to his weakness for women. His eternal social predicaments gave us many a laugh. Good-natured and fun loving, this misplaced collegian made a great many lasting friendships. His ability to pinpoint a goal and strive for success will surely lead to a future of prosperity.

Omar hails from San Diego, California, where he left the beaches to come to the Academy. He has a great sense of humor which has kept his spirits high while here at the Naval Academy. Omar is an enthusiast of all water sports which include surfing and water skiing. He was on the Plebe football and gymnastics team and has played Batt. tennis every year which shows his all around athletic ability and competitive spirit. He participates in as many extracurricular activities as his studies will permit. Tom's road at the Academy has not always been easy but he possesses that quiet determination to realize his ambitions. With this determination and attitude he will definitely be a credit to himself and to the service.

FREDRICK RUSSEL MARLIN

Fred, sometimes known to his friends as "plum head," is a living example of what determination and desire can do. He achieved his goal of attending the Academy the hard way. After graduation from Woodberry High School, he attended college a year, spent two years in the Navy and one year at Naval Academy Prep School before realizing his ambition. Luckily for the Navy. Fred pursued his ways, for he brought with him his fine football ability, becoming a leading guard, line backer and place kicker on the football team for three years and being elected captain of the team his first class year. Fred's academic ability seems to be exceeded only by his self-confidence as he is positive that he can get by on a minimum of study. Fred's personality and other attributes have made him a leading figure while at the academy and will carry him to a fine Navy career.

Tom McKay hails from West Virginia. Being a band member, a representative at Boy's State, and a guard on a 3-time state champion basketball team in high school, Tom proved he was well rounded enough to come to the Naval Academy. At the N. A. he has become one of the leaders in his class. He carried a Supt's List grade average, acted as a member on the working honor committee, and was chairman at the Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference. In addition, Tom can be seen dragging nearly every weekend. Tom's friendly and energetic attitude enables him to make friends everywhere. Coming from a large family, he learned the necessity of discipline and responsibility early. It is only natural that he should become a naval officer with such a background.

THOMAS JOHN MCKAY

Pete had a shorter trip than most to U.S.N.A., as he only had to come a short distance from Alexandria, Va. He came straight from high school, and brought his skill in crew and his winning personality with him. Although "Dago" was his favorite subject, Pete excelled in all academics and has been a mainstay on the Supt.'s list. Because of his Danish background, Pete was very conscientious about the "e" in the last part of his name, as most people manage to misspell it through force of habit. His cheerful outlook and winning disposition have won him many true and lasting friends.

Pete tentatively has his eye on the submarine service for a career after graduation. But, regardless of his service selection, the Navy's investment will be well rewarded when he joins the fleet.

RICHARD JAMES PETERSEN

ALLAN ALEXANDER PETINOS

Ken came to Annapolis after spending a most successful year at Georgia Tech. His easy going nature combined with a good sense of humor quickly earned him the respect and friendship of everyone, as well as a high position of leadership and responsibility in the Baptist Student Union. An avid sports fan, Ken always had an unlimited supply of sports questions to ask the plebes, and during the football season could be seen cheering violently for his two favorite teams—Navy and Tech. Although a serious minded and hardworking student, Ken was always ready to go on one of those "wild weekends." He possessed an uncanny ability for picking up excerpts from the radio and was always ready to break up any monotony with an "on the spot commercial." Foremost in Ken's mind (besides 9 June 1965) lay visions of owning a Jaguar XKE. We all hope that perhaps someday this dream will come true, as well as all his wishes, for he deserves the very best that life has to offer.

KENNETH WAYNE MEEKS

"The Greek" came to the banks of the Severn from the "big city" where he previously attended New York University for a year and a half as a business major. He spent his free time here participating in intramural sports, handball being the favorite. His hobbies included cars and he spent much of his time reading on this subject. His good nature and unselfish interest in others won many friends for him while he was here. Al was a home lover and it was not unusual to see him heading for Brooklyn for a weekend first and second class years. Though usually lighthearted, he still had his serious side and could be relied upon to do a fine job at any task. His hard-driving desire coupled with his ability to understand people could not help but carry Al a long way in the service of his country.

SIXTH COMPANY

FIRST BATTALION

"Robbie" helped to bring some of that renowned California sunshine to these grey walls of the Severn. Well-liked, he combines a warm smile with an outward personality which is hard to beat. Although previously inexperienced, his hard driving competitive spirit carried him to the top of the Battalion Handball team. Gary eased his way through the academic curriculum and often found himself on the superintendent's list. He was often found longing for the sun and sand of the southern California beaches, and was perplexed by the snow and rain of the long Maryland winters. Gary's many talents and love of fun will take him far, and his outstanding way with people will make him a credit to his service.

ROGER THOMAS STAUBACH

Rog came to the Academy from Cincinnati's Purcell High School after spending a year prepping at New Mexico Military Institute. An outstanding High School athlete and a Junior College All-American, he developed into the nation's best football player and one of Navy's all-time greats. With athletics and academics occupying most of his spare time, "Jolly" was limited to only one year of active membership in the Neuman Club, but he always found time to either attend or serve Mass in the early hours of the weekday mornings. Except for a mistake made by the 3/c Steam Department, Rog never had any serious trouble with academics.

Although he became a legend in his own time for his unforgettable performances on the gridiron, Rog will be remembered far longer by all of us for his humility, sincerity, and deep religious faith. The fine example that he set has given us all something to be especially proud of, and there is no doubt in any of our minds that he will be successful in anything he does.

Dick Smith, a common name when you first hear it, is a well known and popular name around the Naval Academy. Dick is a product of Pacific Palisades, California, and a real Californian at heart. His maturity stands out after spending two years at U.C.L.A. before entering the Academy.

Dick stands out in academics and aptitude. His grades and leadership rating have put him near the top of his class. He has earned quite a bit of respect from his classmates.

"Smitty" is a scholar, but not the type to bury his head in books. He has a keen interest in sports cars and motorcycles. Many a time other midshipmen have asked his advice concerning cars since he knows them inside and out.

With his appealing good looks, Dick has broken the hearts of many a damsel. He can't seem to settle on one girl and is quite experienced in playing the field.

Dick goes all-out in the intramural program and lets you know when he hits a homerun in softball or has a good day in volleyball.

It has been a real privilege to know Smitty and I know his leadership and popularity will carry him to the top both in the Navy and in whatever else he does.

EDWARD WHITMAN STILLMAN

On his first trip south from his Patterson, New Jersey, home, "Big Ed" was persuaded to join the Navy by way of USNA. He had many athletic interests in contact sports ranging from a slight indulgence in intra-company study hour wrestling to his favorite, rugby. Among his more enjoyable pastimes were parlor games in the messhall which were highly frowned upon by those senior to him. Ed seemed to experience a transition period while attending the academy and has emerged a man of the world. He enjoys feminine companionship greatly and never misses a chance to have a good time. World War II heads his academic interests followed closely by James Bond's adventures. Ed's level head should help him greatly in his career as a naval officer and will make his shipmates proud to serve with him.

John came to the Naval Academy straight out of high school from Port Chester, New York. With him he brought a great deal of athletic talent which soon showed up in the Brigade boxing competition. John won the boxing championship in the light-heavyweight division and thus became the first member of the Class of '65 to win the coveted "N" award. He also proved to be an asset to the battalion football and track teams in the fall and spring seasons. Being more prone to excellence with young ladies and athletics than in academics caused John to be a conscientious user of the books during study hour. But his will to win in academics was as great as his will to win both with the femmes and on the athletic field. Wherever John goes his winning smile and will to win will surely bring him success.

JOHN ANGELO SUMMA

Pete came to Navy from the sunny beaches of Florida and was one of the few to return from Christmas leave with a bronze tan. He came directly from high school and soon proved to be one of the top men academically, acquiring stars by the end of youngster year. Besides being a "slash", Pete was a good athlete playing both Navy Lacrosse and Basketball. Although Pete waged a continuous battle with the executive department, his persistent desire to do his best combined with his cheerful attitude enabled him to excel as a member of the Brigade. Besides being a member of the Academy Science Seminar he overloaded his schedule with additional electives, majoring in Physics and Mathematics. Pete hopes to follow his father as a Naval aviator.

Denny or "The Wede", as he is known to his friends, received one of 65's lowest initial travel allowances for his short trip from B-more and during his four years used all the facilities of his nearby home. Although small in stature he still excelled in Physical Education, standing in the top 5 in his class. He wrestled for the plebe team but soon turned all of his attention to Lacrosse. It was in this sport that he made himself known to both the Brigade and the crowd. Size, speed and skill made it apparent he was destined for All-American honors before hanging up the stick. Although most effort was devoted to Lacrosse, the Wede was always in favor of a party and good music. The little gentleman with quite a bit of poise will surely enjoy a future of success and prosperity.

PETER DOUGLAS TAMNY

DENNIS LEE WEKIND

WILLIAM FRANK ZUNA

Bill was an outstanding athlete in high school, but rather than attend one of the many institutions that offered him scholarships, he decided to find a challenge. He found one—the Academy—and he has spent four successful years proving that he is capable of meeting this challenge through his achievements in academics, service motivation, and in the realization that there is a little joy in everything one does. Bill has yet to allow the pressures of this life alter his personality or his convictions and he believes fully in the service that is to be his career. Bill was a graduate of Bishop McDevitt High School in Harrisburg, Pa., and his home is in nearby Steelton.

SECOND BATTALION

After spending a seventeen year blue and gold childhood as a Navy Junior our brainwashed friend decided to continue in the line of his predecessors and sign his life away to Uncle Sam. Never a star athlete, Wayne survived the rigors of the Navy Sports Program by filling in vacant positions on the Battalion Swimming and Tennis and Company Cross Country teams. Despite a two year concentrated attempt by the Russian Department to save the Navy from him, Wayne survived Navy's Academic schedule and majored in study hour bull-sessions with his friends. Weekends he could be found pursuing the fair sex, usually unsuccessfully, or participating in our vigorous social life and contributing to the wealth of the inventor of the tab-top can. Despite his love of "La Dolce Vita" Wayne has a serious devotion to the service which coupled with a distinct ability will make him a real asset to whichever branch of the service he chooses.

WAYNE ROBERT ALLEN

DAVID REYNOLDS BELL

JONATHAN PRESSMAN BROMBERG

Jon came to USNA after a year at Washington University in St. Louis, after deciding a career in the Navy better matched his well rounded talents. Plebe year he was a very promising sprinter on the track team until an injury forced him to give it up. However, he continued to excel as a member of the Batt Rugby team as well as other intramural sports. His driving enthusiasm carried over into the field of extracurricular activities as well. As a Brigade Activities Committee representative he was designated second class year, as the man to design and supervise the construction of the Army game float which ended up as the backbone of the Beat Army Bonfire. First class year he was elected to the office of President of the B.A.C. which he put to good use in getting the brigade all those "good deals". His other endeavors included the Ring and Crest Committee, Concert Band, and the notorious "Salvation Navy Band". Perhaps Jon will be best remembered for his awesome financial wizardry and his famous byword of "such a deal I have for you".

Dinger, as we affectionately called him, hails from Fargo, North Dakota, and a man prouder of his home state one could never find. He entered the academy after a brilliant high school career well prepared for the hardships of Plebe year. He soon became known as the man to get the job done. He excelled in academics, athletics, and extracurricular activities. Not only was he constantly on the Supt's list or wearing stars, but he was also a varsity gymnast and the president of the chapel choir. Dave was one of the hottest pitchers to ever hit the intramural softball league. He became famous for his blazing fast ball and looping curve as a plebe and for four years instilled fear in the hearts of the batters he faced. Dinger never lived up to the fable that gives a sailor the right to have a girl in every port. "To one girl be true" was his motto. He is the only person that I have ever known that would get up before reveille to write a letter to his sweetheart. There is no doubt that he will win as many friends in the fleet as he has made at the academy and is destined for an outstanding career.

DAVID MORRISON EATON

Dave came to the Naval Academy from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, after spending a year at Bullis Prep School. He had always shown an avid interest in the Navy and distinguished himself as a member of the YP Squadron and devoted much of his time to its activities. Dave was happiest on the bridge of a YP, but for sports he devoted himself to rugby, cross country, and SCUBA Club. While never known as a slash. Dave also never had any difficulty with the academics. A friendly and outgoing person. Dave always had time to sit and discuss the world. He made friends easily and his spare time was carefully allocated between the pad, novels, and his many drags. His SCUBA qualification, his careful preparation at USNA, and his active interest in the Navy will allow him to make a smooth transition into the Naval Service.

GEORGE THOMAS FORBES

Tom, commonly known by his classmates as "Jessie", hails from Suffolk, Virginia, and he is no newcomer to boats. "Jessie's" main interest, besides his professional attributes, are hunting and fishing, and it wouldn't be surprising to see him during leave out in a boat with a chaw of tobacco staking out the fish. During his four years, he participated in extra-curricular activities such as dragging, the Newman Club, and the Business Staff of the LOG. Although studying wasn't one of his favorite pastimes, he did fairly well, especially in the military-professional area. Tom was a definite credit to the Brigade because of his friendly attitude and winning personality. His officer-like qualities will guarantee his success as an officer.

COURTLAND PRENTICE GRAY III

Out of the misty swamps near Monroe, Louisiana, "Courts" made his way to U.S.N.A. straight from high school. He immediately undertook the task of leaving his mark on the record books at the academy. Although he constantly maintained fine academic marks, the real records were the ones he set while high-stepping the hurdles. He broke several records while on the plebe squad and as soon as youngster year rolled around he easily slipped into the varsity squad and continued his outstanding performances. Although hampered second class year by injuries, he still turned in good times and provided incentive for his teammates. His sparkplug attitude and popularity gained him the enviable position of varsity track captain during the indoor season first class year—another addition to his already decorated B-robe. Courtland will undoubtedly carry his abundant supply of leadership abilities with him into the fleet and continue to produce fine performances.

OSCAR EDWARD GRAY III

Ed came to the Academy thoroughly indoctrinated in the Navy way of life, as he is a Navy Junior. Never bothered much by academics (he has been on almost every Superintendent's List) he has had much time to devote to his first love, Hi Fi, and his second love, reading. Spare time will usually find Ed deep in an electronics catalogue or a Graham Greene novel. With his broad knowledge of many subjects and his natural ability in all things naval he will be a welcome addition to any wardroom.

SEVENTH COMPANY

SECOND BATTALION

Fred came to the Academy after traveling over most of the Eastern coast of the United States as an Army brat. In spite of the handicap of his Army upbringing he has shown an exceptional nautical talent. Whether on the bridge of a Y P or playing company heavy-weight football Fred shows a great deal of enthusiasm. After some initial disagreement with academics plebe year he has constantly improved. His only problem is now remembering whether Starboard is left or right. Serious in all endeavors, yet ready to have fun when fun is in order. Fred will be a welcome addition to the fleet.

FREDERICK LAURENCE KOBERLEIN

"Big John" arrived at the Naval Academy via Elder High School and Bullis Prep School. He played football, basketball, and baseball at Elder and was a member of the all-city basketball team of Cincinnati. John decided to concentrate on basketball while at Bullis, and he led the team as they finished the season with only two losses.

Plebe year rolled around and once again John was a stalwart on the basketball court, as the Plebes lost only one game. The big scene was set for the Army-Navy game of John's Youngster year. He scored eight points in the last seven minutes to ice the game for Navy.

Second Class year was another good year for John as he averaged better than ten points a game. He did very well with the books, too, and he was on the Superintendent's List. (That extra weekend was really nice!)

John has developed a good habit of always being on the winning side. His tremendous competitive spirit and his sundry natural talents will surely lead him through a happy and successful life.

Bob came to the Naval Academy directly from high school in upstate New York, where he was a stand-out football player and an all-around athlete. The hard knocks he absorbed on the athletic field stood him in good stead as he faced the rigors of plebe year.

As plebe year came to a close Bob embarked on Youngster cruise aboard a destroyer. It is rumored that he spent much of his time on the leeward side of the ship while learning the realities of Navy life.

Bob pursued his interest in sports at the Naval Academy by playing 150 pound football and rowing 150 pound crew. This is certainly a demonstration of will power as his normal weight is in the vicinity of 180 pounds.

With Bob's personality and fierce competitive spirit he should make an outstanding Naval officer.

ROBERT JOSEPH MARTIN

ARNOLD WILFRED McKECHNIE JR.

JOHN EDWARD KRECHTING

Arnie hails from Coronado, California, but has lived in a number of different places as a result of being a Navy Junior. He came to the academy from one year of college at the University of Wisconsin, a year of prep school at Bullis Prep, and a high school education split between Kodiak, Alaska, and Coronado. A natural outdoorsman, Arnie's main interests lay in hunting and skin diving. He gave up one summer's leave to attend the Navy Underwater Swimmers School in Key West to get his diving qualification and the nickname "Scuba". Arnie was a valuable asset on the intramural teams and seemed to have a natural ability to be able to succeed at anything he attempted. Arnie spent a little extra time in the Scuba Club and Photo Club activities. His great sense of humor and easy-going manner should serve him well in whatever branch of the service he chooses for his career.

Coming to USNA after three years of college life in his home state of Colorado, Pat had little trouble adapting to his new surroundings. His three years of college served him well while he was here so that he never had any trouble with the academics. Chemistry is his favorite academic pursuit and he has received a major in it.

Pat is also very interested in German, and although his academic workload in chemistry wouldn't allow him to take German after his youngster year he continued to study it on his own and during summer leave first class year he toured Germany.

He is a soft spoken, mild mannered person and easily makes friends. He is very conscientious and worked hard for the company both in sports and on the parade field.

Pat will make a very fine officer and is certain to go far in the Navy.

PATRICK NOLAN MOORE

GORDEN MCGLOHON NICHOLS JR.

Nick hails from Aiken, South Carolina, and never failed to defend the homeland against verbal "Yankee aggressors". Although not from a seaport, he came to the Academy with a keen interest in things nautical. This interest led him to spend many spring and fall afternoons with the Y P Squadron, his major extracurricular activity. Nick also passed many hours with a solder gun in hand engrossed in the construction of his stereo rig, which helped to make his room the source of the finest sounds in Bancroft Hall. Other hobbies included model airplanes, record collecting and James Bond. With his good sense of humor and personality and well grounded knowledge of the Navy, Nick will be a welcome addition to the service.

JOHN SHERWOOD ODOM JR.

"Tijohn" is one of the Cajun Country's representatives to Navy. A dedicated Southerner, John entered the academy directly from Baton Rouge High School, rejecting the party life at L. S. U. for a more serious education. His decision apparently paid off as he is a frequent member of the Superintendent's List as well as standing high in leadership. Perhaps John's greatest attribute is his ability to make friends easily and to get along with everyone, providing he doesn't see them too early in the morning. Tijohn will always be remembered for his rabid consumption of coffee throughout the day and night, a habit he will undoubtedly carry into the Navy. His actions on the rugby field and in the boxing ring speak well for his competitive spirit.

SECOND BATTALION

Paul, better known as Robbie, more affectionately known as "Cheeks," came to Annapolis with an outstanding military school record ready to set Navy on fire. His enthusiasm in Plebe Year, on Youngster Cruise, and as an upperclassman was surpassed by none and his smile was famous throughout the Brigade. After his Navy career, gymnastics and the guitar were his first loves. His performance in varsity gymnastics equaled his excellent physical strength and stamina and his guitar playing and singing caused more than one young innocent darling to lose her mind. The academic departments may have given Paul a run for his money, but he excelled in all other respects. As a member of the Chapel Choir and the Glee Club he got in a lot of that singing that he loved so much. Being a member of the OCU and president of the NACA, he set an example admired by all. His personality, moral courage and enthusiasm will add to every unit of which he becomes a part. Paul's love for the Navy will lead him on to a great military future.

PAUL MATTHEW ROBINSON

RAYMOND HOWARD SETSER

ROBERT CLAUD SHEPHERD

Hailing from Fort Worth, Texas, "Shep" joined the Brigade after a year of fraternity life at Iowa State University. His name could usually be found on the Superintendent's List although he preferred athletics to academics. A true competitor, Bob displayed his prowess in the manly art in the Brigade Boxing tournaments, as well as participating in other contact sports such as lacrosse and football. His outstanding leadership abilities and love of challenge were evidenced by his performances as company commander at Little Creek and completion of U.D.T. training third class summer. After leaving his mark on the entering plebe class, he spent the remainder of second class summer completing Airborne training in Fort Benning, Georgia. Good looks and an affinity for the opposite sex resulted in many frolicsome weekends for him. His drive and initiative will make him a fine officer in his chosen career.

Ray, better known to his friends as "Mouse," came to Navy from the sleepy little railroad town of Shelbiana, Pike County, deep in the mountains of Kentucky. Although the only water Ray had seen in the mountains was when the creeks overflowed their banks, he readily adapted himself to Navy's ways.

Surviving the rigors of the Savage Sixteenth as a plebe, Mouse went on to distinguish himself in academics and won many friends through his avid interest in sports.

Ray will always remember his many experiences of world travel afforded him by Navy. Between an oiler on youngster cruise and a submarine for first class cruise, he squeezed a trip to Colorado for Air Force exchange weekend, and a spin in the T-34's at Pensacola, which left him a little green for the time of year.

Mouse's drive and friendly personality will be remembered by all of us privileged enough to know him.

PAUL DENNIS SHUMAN

Denny, affectionately known as "Ghost" to his classmates, came to USNA from the wilds of Juneau, Alaska. Life at Navy is never a snap but after surviving plebe year in the "Savage Sixteenth" and always keeping two or three seconds ahead of the swimming clock. Denny managed to make the most of the four years of preparation at Navy. Always a tough competitor, Denny was a welcome addition to the athletic field of battle in almost any intramural sport. This competitive nature was equally apparent in academics as he won many hazardous battles with the likes of Skinny and Weapons. His main interest in this area was in the EH&G Dept. and the results of "Bull Overload" grades will verify this point. After a week or two of battle with Navy a quiet evening with a member of the fairer sex was a sure morale builder. Denny never lacked for hard work, desire, and determination and he will be a welcome addition to the Naval Service.

GEORGE CALVIN STEWART

The "Governor" came to USNA from the great state of Alabama. A graduate of Sylacauga High School, where he was valedictorian and star fullback on the football team, George was always a good student and an avid competitor in the intramural program. His extracurricular activities concerned chiefly music. He was a member of the Drum and Bugle Corps, director of the band, and a mainstay with the "Salvation Army Band". George took everything that he did seriously, and was dedicated to doing every job that he undertook to the utmost of his ability. As for the ladies, George preferred to play the field, leaving many broken hearts in his wake. With his dynamic personality and quick smile, George will be a valuable asset to any duty to which he may be assigned.

Pat came to the Naval Academy from the state of Minnesota, leaving his fourteen brothers and sisters at home. "Pucky" as he is known by all of his friends was an outstanding athlete in high school before coming to the Academy. He passed up many football scholarships to pursue a naval career. Pucky suffered through the rigors of Plebe year like everyone else, but on the football field he caused the suffering. When spring rolled around that first year Pucky was on the football field again. By the completion of spring drills, he was listed on the varsity and on his way to stardom. But then misfortune struck and has continued to plague him ever since. He aggravated an old high school shoulder injury in practice youngster year. The injury required surgery and he was advised by the doctors not to risk permanent damage by playing again. It was a severe blow to Pat not to be able to play the game that he loved, but being the outstanding person that he is he did not let it get him down. He continued to be his happy and likeable self. Pat is one of the most well liked men in his class. He always has a cheerful word for everyone he meets. Athletics was not the only field that Pat excelled in. He was constantly on the Superintendent's List, and held a very high ranking in the Brigade organization. With Pucky's great personality and drive to succeed in anything that he does, he cannot help but become an outstanding naval officer and a credit to his country.

PATRICK GEORGE VARRIANO

GLENN ERNEST WELCH JR.

Like all other Navy juniors, Glenn knew many skylines, but he claimed Bermuda as his home. In fact, every summer leave was an exodus to his "island in the sun." Known better to his classmates as "J. B.", he was the typical big little man. His struggles with the academic departments, skinny in particular, often gave him cause to worry, but his determination pushed him through and was an inspiration to his many friends. Also while at the Naval Academy he participated in several intramural sports, the most rewarding being knockabouts. As a four year member of the antiphonal Choir, the "Ace" looked forward to the choir trips with unequalled enthusiasm. Lucky enough to have destroyers on both youngster and First class cruise, Glenn plans to continue this proud tradition with the backbone of the Navy.

SECOND BATTALION

After two fun filled years of fraternity life, "Willie" decided to follow his father's footsteps and come to the Naval Academy. The transition would have been more difficult had he not brought with him a fine sense of humor and an easy going personality. One of Willie's main interests while at the Academy was sports. Although he was never on a varsity squad, he was an avid follower of all types of sports and participated in several on the intramural level. Willie's experiences were usually of the more spectacular variety; for instance he was the only midshipman to ever catch pneumonia in the middle of June in Mayport, Florida, while on Youngster Cruise. In addition he was probably the only person in the history of the Academy to ever suffer from a torn knee ligament as a result of a punch in the nose in a boxing class. His ability to get along with people will insure his success in whatever branch of service he decides to enter.

RICHARD CLAGGETT WILLIAMS III

CHARLES HENRY WOLF JR.

A native of Bellmore, New York, Chuck came to the Academy straight from Mepham High School on a Presidential nomination. The transition to the rigors of Academy life proved to be no hardship for this level-headed young man. With the help of a regular letter from his O.A.O. and his easy-going nature, Chuck has always been able to muster up a smile. To add to his well-rounded life at Navy, our hero participated in the YP Squadron, company soccer and battalion rugby. Academics never came easy to Chuck but a glance at his marks would never show it. To use layman's terms, Chuck is a hard worker who does not give up easily. With his many qualifications, Chuck will surely be an asset to the Naval Service and to his country.

JOSEPH CARLO YACHANIN

Leaving the campus of Penn State and the brothers of Sigma Nu, Skip traveled to the banks of the Severn, found it to his liking, and decided to stay. Never having had any trouble with academics, he frequently maintained a Supt's List average even though he devoted most of his time to "the good life". An individualist, his interests range anywhere from sports cars to oceanography, and he pursues them all with equal enthusiasm. Although he participated in several intramural sports, the majority of his afternoons were divided between fencing and sunbathing. Still considering many career choices, Skip has the ability and background to prove a credit to any branch of the service.

SECOND BATTALION

Mike arrived at the Academy soon after his High school graduation after making the choice between West Point and USNA. An all-state football player in his native New Mexico, Mike played a considerable amount on the Plebe and Varsity 150 lb. teams until injuries cut short his career. Since then he devoted his strong enthusiasm for sports to the intramural boxing and softball programs. Possessing a quick wit and a very amiable personality, Mike was a constant source of amusement to his classmates. He was also somewhat renowned for his ability to win out over the Academic Departments despite a minimum of study time. Day or night, he usually could be found sleeping, writing his one-and-only, or breezing through the latest best-seller. Although never one to miss a good laugh, his ability to make friends coupled with a sense of responsibility and a great deal of determination should stand him in good stead in every future endeavor.

MICHAEL LEE ARTERHOLT

WALTER BURKHART BAYLESS JR.

GARRY WALDRON CAMPBELL

Garry, a native of Arkansas, came to the Academy via Phillips Exeter academy in New Hampshire. A very diligent worker, he found the academics here no problem and included himself among those taking overloads. Besides his academic ability, Garry has a talent for playing golf, and he excelled in the sport here at the Academy. Depending on our wonderful weather, Garry could usually be found on the golf course every spare moment. He also lent his support to the company basketball team when the cold weather arrived. Golf and everything else were second best when it came to dragging. Diligent as he was, Garry would always allow himself the pleasure of a young lady's company. A well mannered fellow, Garry has the ability to get along well with anyone. He will make a fine officer and ought to go far in the Naval Service.

Doug Bayless reported to the Naval Academy immediately following an active and very successful four years in high school. During Plebe year he continued his excellent performance by maintaining a high academic average, which he has maintained throughout the entire four years. "Bay's" favorite pastimes have been his work as a member of the Amateur Radio Club (W3ADO) and his interest in working in the computer lab. Being a fierce competitor in all things, Doug was a welcome addition to both company and battalion sports teams, earning his class numerals as a member of a championship company football team. His aspirations are directed toward either Navy Air or the Nuclear Power program. Doug's high standards and exceptional desire to achieve a job well done will make him an obvious asset in any service he enters.

JOHN L. CAMPHOUSE

A usually reserved guy from Oak Park, Illinois, who's always ready to give academic help to anyone, Jack brings with him an intellect that should stand him in good stead for a successful and prosperous future. This is exemplified by his active participation in the electives program and by his willingness to give "extra instruction" to members of the under class. "Campy" puts his limited study time to efficient use; he completed his major in Engineering by the end of second class year. "House" always completes what he begins as ably as he can, sometimes with determination and often as a perfectionist. Jack competed as a plebe and varsity diver, later becoming a mainstay of the Sixth Company volleyball team and trying his hand at cross-country, squash, and soccer. He is a challenging competitor in many fields besides sports—Monopoly, bridge, cribbage and chess. Jack has many nicknames normally associated with the last half of his name. Some of them are far "out".

ROBERT ALEXANDER FINLEY

Bob came to the Academy immediately upon graduation from Bullis Prep. He is a Navy Junior and considers Alexandria, Virginia, his home town. He has participated in a variety of sports which include crew and company sports. He was a top member of the Naval Academy rifle team. He was the company and battalion WRNV representative third and second class years respectively. He loves to design model, radio controlled, aircraft and sinks much of his pay into them. He has had no trouble at all with academics and takes a great interest in Naval History. He should do very well in the Fleet and we wish him a highly successful career.

JAMES WILLIAM FOLEY

As the last days of June, 1961, rolled around and the class of 1965 began pouring into old USNA, there were a few among the many confused souls who were already squared away. One of those persons was "old Fols". After a year's worth of ROTC while attending Brooklyn Polytechnical Institute, Jim already knew how to put leggings on, put a clean cover on his combination cap and spit shine his shoes! More importantly, Jim maintained his headstart gained at BPI in academics, as he made frequent appearances on the Supt.'s List, a position requiring diligent study and a lot of hard work.

An active participant in company and battalion sports, "Flatbush Foley" was also a regular member of the "weekend-movie club"—that is when he wasn't making a "B-line" up to New York for the day and a half at home. Well liked by everyone with whom he came in contact, Jim's agreeable personality made an indelible mark on all the friends he made at the Naval Academy.

LYNN FRANKLIN GARST

Rolling in from the depressed Ozarks, "the Hog" instilled in the occupants of Bancroft the fear of the Razorback. As the fortunes of the Razorbacks rolled so rolled the Hog and incidentally, after second class winter hibernation, he could literally have rolled out the main gate. Study hours were a perfect mixture of study and Hog-play. Lynn knew when to hit the books and when to hit the pad. Time for sleep was short, however, as Lynn developed his great interest in athletics, working hard at the pleasure of playing varsity soccer and helping win a regimental championship in softball.

Lynn came from a squadron of A3D's via Bainbridge, Maryland, and definitely had leaning toward the air. Before entering the Navy, Lynn graduated from Little Rock High School in Arkansas.

Lynn was always ready to help out a friend and this among all his other qualities was the most appreciated.

EIGHTH COMPANY

GEORGE MURRAY GILTINAN

George first came to the Naval Academy from that gateway to the West, St. Louis, Mo., in July of 1959. Having decided on taking the "extended course" here at USNA, he took the following year "off" to acquire some worldly wisdom before returning in the Fall of 1961. No greenhorn at this military life, George spent his high school days at Christian Brothers College, a military high school, where he majored in football, track, and soccer, and where he acquired the ambition of "some-day owning a distillery". Though his future in distilling seems doubtful, he continues to hope. He has traded those other "sports" in for one pretty rugged one, Rugby, and has the distinction of being one of the founders of the sport here at the Academy. His other hope is to cop top honors academic-wise in the bottom quarter of the class and from all indications he just might exceed that wild expectation. George brought with him one of the greatest senses of humor seen in these parts in a long time, not to mention a personality that has brought a great deal of fun and life to his many friends. George's present ambition leans toward the wild blue.

Jere Harper, who grew up in Pittsburgh, Pa., is a happy go lucky sort of a fellow. He's always friendly and keeps his friends on their toes with his sense of humor. Jere, a sports enthusiast, was a member of the plebe swim team, and later diversified into volleyball, fieldball, water polo, and track. He is unusually conscientious in whatever he does, whether in sports, academics, or his life's work. One of Jere's most admirable attributes is his sincere Christian faith. He participates in the Naval Academy Christian Association, Officers' Christian Association, and is Editor of the "Guide-On". Jere is an outstanding individual who leaves a good impression with everyone he meets. It's always a pleasure to know and be with him.

JERE L. HARPER

RICHARD NEIL HARRIS

While visiting the shores of the Severn for four years, Dick has never let it be forgotten that he is a true "Lone Star" man from Corsicana, Texas. Before entering USNA he spent a year at Texas Tech, living what he considers a completely different type of college life. Anyone who knows Dick realizes that he exemplifies the traditional Texas friendliness, courtesy, thoughtfulness, and wit. His is an outstanding athlete, excelling in company football, softball, and volleyball. He intended to play Varsity football but an injury received during Plebe football ended his chances for the "big-time". Aside from his athletic ability he also stood high in his class in academics and in aptitude. Dick was never hard to find, one would only need to look at his desk, in his beloved pad, or in any one of the Annapolis movie theaters. No matter what goal he pursues, Dick will never run into an obstacle too large for him to overcome.

ROBERT M. HOGENMILLER

"Ole hoge" came in on the last train from Tyler, Texas, in June of '61 to become known to us as the "lean, mean Texan". It always seemed that Hoge had that edge on us in maturity which may well have come from two years at Tyler Jr. College and then a try at Reserves Officer's School at Newport, R. I.

He falls into that select category of the few true academicians who study for the love of learning.

If the reader is questioning the term "lean, mean Texan", the answer lies in the fact that for the first year and a half here he tried his hand at Batt boxing, but gave it up to insure an intact brain lining upon graduation.

It could be said of Hoge that his two main attributes are an acute sense of tact and a valuable quality of constant dependability.

In these days of dynamic conditions it is difficult to place a great deal of stock in far distant plans, but Hogie has often been heard to explain how much he loves the far reaches of the sky.

Chuck came to the Naval Academy from the Maine North Woods after spending a semester at Maine University and a short time in the enlisted Navy. Cute girls and french apple pie have remained tops among his "likes". Since the Plebe Summer talent show when "Humph" first unveiled his nimble fingers and guitar, he has shared his keen interest in folk music with many, pausing often, but not really breaking stride, to take a short study break. Russian is his favorite subject, and he has studied it in one form or another all four years. Winter afternoons found Chuck crunching bones on the fieldball field, and when the weather got warm he shifted behind the plate to catch for company softball. Never content until a job that needs to be done is complete, Chuck will bring the Navy a great deal of ability and incentive.

CHARLES ELIHU HUMPHREY

BRIAN VINCENT KINNEY

Brian came to USNA from the rolling plains of Illinois. Having a love for running, he was on company cross-country and battalion track teams and could be seen almost every day of the year running around Farragut or Dewey fields. For variety, he also tried his hand at battalion and plebe gym, volleyball, water polo, and company lightweight football.

As one of Navy's "five-year men," he spent much of his free time studying, as skinny and steam did not come easy to him.

His love for Naval History sent many a plebe looking up questions.

He always did something unique during the summer, such as going to the Navy's Escape, Evasion and Survival School.

Brian plans on making the Navy a career and if he works as hard in the fleet as he has at USNA, the service should receive a fine and dedicated officer.

EIGHTH COMPANY

SECOND BATTALION

Jon came to us from the wild and woolly hills of San Francisco. Being an honor student in high school he was well qualified to enter the Academy following his graduation. His major interests during those early years were basketball and swimming and he spent two years as a cheerleader. The highlight of his first trip east of Reno was his entrance to USNA. With him he brought a sense of humor, a good natured personality and a loyalty to the Giants (which cost him $30 in the '62 series). "Lazz" has fared well during his years at Navy as illustrated by his good, but ever improving, grades and by "copping top honors in conduct" as a home town newspaper once read when they found out that he stood first in the class Youngster year in that field. There were no "honors" Second Class year but Jon had a good time and, needless to say, sometimes at the expense of the Executive Department. His present ambition leans toward aviation but no matter in what capacity, he will make an excellent addition to the fleet, both as an officer and a friend.

JON ANTHONY LAZZARETTI

PETER JOHN LUMIANSKI

Once having met him, none of us will ever forget the crazy antics and "happy hours" put on by Pete—conservatively described as hilarious. Whether it was for one of the foreign language clubs or simply a company party, his act would always be an Oscar-winning performance and uniquely Lansky, Lewmens, Lumeninian, Lumianski.

To go along with his vivacious personality, Pete has also shown the academic departments a lively intelligence by maintaining an enviable grade average. Being the son of an English Professor, it should be appropriate that the "Bull" department would be his forte—and that it is. He validated our plebe English course and took elective courses in literature and philosophy and logic, proving in both a propensity toward the humanities.

Pete, claiming the large metropolis area of Mason, Michigan, as his home, is an avid sports enthusiast who showed his agility with lacrosse, a football, a baseball or softball, and good stamina on the cross-country course—not to mention his near perfect aim with a water balloon or water pistol—all having been noted by his company officer. Throughout our careers and beyond, Pete will always be a welcomed team mate, whatever the circumstances, with a guarantee of good times and a job completed.

LARRY JAMES McMURRY

A native of Sterling, Illinois, Mac was the first of his family to follow the sea. Relaxing for a year at Cornell of Iowa before coming east to the loving arms of Mother Bancroft, he girded himself for the academic battle ahead but never ran into any serious difficulty in that line. Although he didn't decide to get on the ball and shoot for the Supt's List and Stars until second class year, Mac proved his worth to the company in other fields, notably squash, volleyball and heavyweight football. Not a participant in varsity sports, Mac nevertheless was and is the most avid rooter the Blue and Gold is fortunate enough to possess. "Lyndon J." as he was sometimes known, will be best remembered for his love of the pad and an all-consuming hatred of whistlers. Whatever he chooses to do, Mac will be sure to succeed.

JOSEPH MOLISHUS

Saturday evenings often found Joe enlightening his classmates to the joys of the fleet in general, and the Med. in particular. After graduating from high school, he spent three years in the service, making RD3, before entering NAPS, and thence the Academy. Joe was familiar to the entire Brigade as the head and two arms projecting from behind the bass drum in the Drum and Bugle Corps. This activity took much of Joe's free time, but gave him the extra trips he craved. Although usually easy-going, Joe could be serious when the situation demanded it, and his maturity and understanding were always appreciated. After a slow start Plebe year, he soon established himself as a permanent fixture on the Supt's List. When a classmate felt depressed, Joe was always ready with a few laughs to straighten him out. Nothing ever seemed to bother him—with the possible exception of swimming and winter cross-country. A solid performer in every endeavor, Joe's thoughtfulness, ambition, and talent will make him an asset to the Navy.

VAN STEPHEN MONROE

After completing a very successful four years of academics and sports during high school in Jacksonville, Florida, Van entered the Naval Academy. Upon completion of Plebe year, he decided to subject himself to more punishment by participating in the rigorous Airborne program at Fort Benning, Georgia. Van's natural prowess in athletics is excelled by few. His participation in fieldball, softball, and gymnastics has proved to be a welcome addition always. Not to deny himself a fine education, he has applied himself to a difficult overload program in the fields of physics and mathematics. Van is looking forward to a career in the Marine Corps, and with his tremendous personality and determination he will, without a doubt, be one of the finest officers the Corps will ever have.

THOMAS EDWARD MORRIS

Tom, a Navy junior, came to the Naval Academy from NAPS, after having graduated from Wheaton High school, Wheaton, Maryland. At NAPS he began playing lacrosse, a sport which he continued and excelled in during his stay here at the Academy. His athletic ability also extended to the squash courts and lightweight football, where he was always depended upon as the mainstay of the team. Academics have never been a problem for Tom; a Superintendent's List seldom appeared without his name on it. He could always be counted on for a helping hand in the basic or overload courses. But he never let the athletics or academics hold him down when it came to dragging. So you always knew he would be ready for a date with your girl's friend, that is, if he didn't already have one. Able to get along well with anyone, he should go far in the naval service and make a fine officer.

EIGHTH COMPANY

JOHN BRUCE MOUW

Coming to the Naval Academy fresh from Maurice-Orange City High School, Bruce brought with him an outstanding academic and athletic record. A star man, Bruce was willing to help those who were less endowed, academically, than himself. His determination and ability made him a standout on the company basketball and softball teams. A fanatic sports fan, Bruce's knowledge of even the most obscure bits of sports information has never failed to be a source of amazement. His interest in sports and literary talents enabled him to do an outstanding job as the sports editor of the Log. Bruce's ability to recognize a goal and work to reach it will insure him success in whatever field he chooses.

Following a varied and exciting life as a Navy Junior and a year of "preparation" at Severn School, Charlie entered the confines of USNA with much enthusiasm and anticipation. Although academics were not his forte, Charlie loved athletics. After playing plebe football, he turned his attention to plebe and varsity crew, where his strong back and team spirit were a vital asset. In company sports he was a stalwart of the 6th Co. football team and many opponents will long remember his aggressiveness. Other than academics and athletics, Charlie stood high in aptitude and his "uncanny luck" earned him only five demerits in conduct. His unique smile, sense of humor, and willingness to lend a helping hand made him one of the best liked members of his class. Those needing a haircut could always count on the experienced clippers of the "phantom barber". A confirmed destroyer man, Charlie will be a vital asset to Navy Line and will be sure to continue an impressive career which he began at USNA.

CHARLES ROYAL STEPHAN

GEORGE JEROME WEBB JR.

Since he was a Navy Junior, George "Spike" Webb had no trouble at all adjusting to the Navy way of life here at the Academy. He always knew what to expect and was consequently a jump ahead of everybody else in the class. This was most evident during his Plebe year while he was breaking broad jump records on the Plebe track team and later on, as a broad-jumper for the varsity track team.

Always anxious to go to a party and have a good time, he was also anxious to contribute to making the gathering more enjoyable with his accordion-playing and on lonely Saturday nights, you could follow the accordion sounds to Spike's room.

"Blue and Gold" clear through, Spike will always be a Navy man and will always complete his jobs in his own way—the Navy Way.

Having already established an excellent High School record in Panama City, Florida, Reeves has continued to do outstanding work at the Academy. His dedication to the service is evidenced in his efforts to produce the best academically, athletically and socially to reach his overall goal; to receive his own command someday.

For academic achievement he has been included on every Superintendent's List while here and worn Stars for just as long. Athletically, his endeavors have been devoted to the Varsity Fencing team, with time off in the spring to join his classmates on the softball field. Continually ranked high militarily in his class, Reeves has sought rather than shirked the responsibilities of his vocation, as shown in his ascension into the high-striper realm.

For the past a "well done," for the future may he always find reward in his work.

HUGH REEVES ADAIR

LEE HOWARD ANDERSON

Tom came to the Naval Academy out of the Naval Reserve after spending an eventful year at Columbian Prep School. From the very first, Tom became one of the outstanding leaders in our class. Tom's major assets are his friendly smile, quick wit, and pleasant attitude. As for sports Tom has done well on the Academy golf team. He made the traveling team his Youngster year and got his N-star too. In the winter he can be found on the field ball field. Even though he is one of the sand blowers in our class, it is said that he can usually be found in every pile-up on the field. Academics have never presented a very big problem for Tom. At times he has made the Supt's list and even took the big step into the elective program. Tom takes a profound interest in those around him and is always willing to help when the need arises. Youngster Cruise on a DLG convinced Tom to go Navy Line all the way.

Lee Anderson came to the Naval Academy from the woods of New Hampshire. He was a quiet young man with a penchant for that New England specialty, lobster. Andy is still a quiet young man but his horizons have increased a great deal. He still has that penchant for lobster, but he also has it for anything edible. This is why, among other things, people who know Andy look for something big in his future. Seriously, Andy has the attributes necessary for future success as an officer and as a person. He has perseverance and pride, tempered by generosity and a good sense of humor. Above all, he has an unerring sense of personal integrity. This is why I, and anyone else who knows him well, respect him and feel secure when depending on him.

THOMAS ANTHONY BARRY

Al came to Navy from good old Brooklyn after graduating from Brooklyn Tech, and even living with a westerner and a southerner never phased that accent. Academics were no sweat for Al, and he somehow found time to pursue two majors. Although a little small, Al is endowed with outstanding athletic ability and was the mainstay of many varied intramural sports, including handball, softball, lacrosse, and even batt. football (can you imagine a 5'4", 150 pound linebacker?).

Al's love life has been a continual source of amusement to his friends, for he always has a new and lasting love after every leave, which usually lasts about three or four weeks or until the next leave, whichever comes first. His wit and humor are always with him, and have won him many lasting friends. Whatever he does, he does well, and the service, whatever he chooses, will be no exception.

ALAN ROBERT BECKER

Ken came to Navy from the glorious state of Wyoming, and he never tires of singing the praises of his home state. His small size was no detriment. He turned it to an advantage and became a coxswain with the lightweight crew team. Ken went on to win his Navy N as a second classman. Academically he was never in any trouble, achieving high grades with as little effort as humanly possible. Always easy going, Ken was well liked by all his classmates. His weight-losing campaigns every spring in anticipation of the rowing season were always a cause of concern. In mid season form he had to carry extra books to class for ballast if the wind got too strong. Ken kept in shape by making running jumps (very frequently) into his top pad. His easy way of making friends and his sense of humor will make Ken welcome wherever he goes.

Joe Clare, better known as "Hosey" or "Zeke", is one of the larger men in the battalion in three ways; physically, mentally, and spiritually. Physically Joe keeps his hulking torso in excellent shape by his daily voyages up the Severn with the varsity crew team. Mentally his acumen enables him to maintain a considerably high QPR. Spiritually he is preparing for the "harvest" through his daily attendance at Mass.

Few people who are acquainted with Joe know that he is from the thriving metropolis of Batavia, N. Y., where he was an all around athlete at Notre Dame High, playing football, basketball, track, and baseball for the Little Irish. Spice all this with a boyish and Polack partisaned personality and you have ol'e Joe Clare—he's a flip.

KENNETH M. CASTELANO

JOSEPH F. CLARE

WILLIAM LEE COVINGTON

A "fine southern gentleman" is a good description of Bill Covington. He brought a very likeable personality to the Academy from Rome, Georgia. Bill attended Darlington School, a fine private school, before entering the Academy. In his four years in Annapolis, he has been a very active member of the Brigade of Midshipmen. In his plebe year he competed on the swimming and tennis teams and continued his athletics on the varsity swimming team each of his upper-class years. A lover of music, Bill found time to sing in the Naval Academy Antiphonal Choir and served as choir president in his first class year. He also became quite an able guitarist. Among his other activities were the Honor Committee, NAFAC, and the International Relations Club. Bill's fine record of achievement over his first three years earned for himself a foreign exchange cruise with the Danish Navy. By taking many elective courses during his four years of study, he was able to major in literature.

NINTH COMPANY

SECOND BATTALION

Ed, sometimes referred to as "Big Ed" because of his tremendous size, came to the Academy from the metropolis of Ashland, Pennsylvania, where he was valedictorian and lettered in three sports. Known for his quiet, easy-going attitude, he spent many a week-end slaving over his books, preparing for his major in electrical engineering. Ed's biggest loves are outdoor sports and women. When persuaded to part from his books, which isn't often, he usually heads for his stomping grounds of Pennsylvania for a little outdoor life.

With "Big Ed's" famous voice he's sure to be a standout anywhere he decides to make his presence known. Whether or not he receives his first choice of aviation, he should do well anywhere fate should send him with his ability to adapt to any situation.

EDWARD RUSSELL ENTERLINE

THOMAS YOUNG EVERSOLE

Tom came to the Academy from Pocatello, Idaho, via Idaho State College and NAPS, after deciding that the Air Force was not for him. A very, very busy boy during his four years here, Tom's acting and singing ability found him in the Catholic Choir, the Masqueraders, and the Musical Club Show, of which he was director first class year, and his organizational ability found him in many other various activities. Somehow, though, he still found time for his beloved pad. Academically, French gave him a little trouble but other than that he got by all right and he was always willing to give any help he could. He has a great sense of humor which he always keeps at hand, and it takes a lot to get his dander up. His humor and natural abilities will serve him well in whatever he chooses to do in life.

GERALD FRANCIS FRANZEN JR.

Portland, Oregon, took the best man it could find and sent him off to Navy in the form of Jerry Franzen. Jerry is a true son of the great Northwest and constantly applied himself to all the activities in which he participated. He is best remembered for his tremendous sense of humor and magnetic personality in addition to his outstanding prowess as a wrestler. Jerry was always carrying on two continuous battles, one with the academic departments and the other with his appetite in an effort to keep down to wrestling weight. One fight he never could win was the battle with the pad, the only place he frequented as much as the wrestling loft. Jerry's warm personality and unique ability to make friends will make him welcome no matter where he should travel.

Hailing from Glendale, a small town near Cincinnati, Ohio, Sted comes to us directly from high school where he was a standout swimmer. It was to be on the water where Sted found his place at USNA also. Here he turned out to be a mainstay on the Navy crew which captured the National championship in 1963. Sted, a quiet, "big man", can usually be found in a deep political or financial discussion when he has returned from his daily trip up the Severn. His perfect image is the Supply Corps Officer who spends a minimum time at sea, is surrounded by beautiful femmes, and drives a hot little sports car. Thanks to Sted's "sharp eyes", he at least should be headed in the right direction after graduation.

CHARLES STEDMAN GARBER JR.

JONATHAN THEL HOOKS JR.

Thel came to the Naval Academy after a rigorous plebe year at the Citadel in Charleston, S.C. He brought with him a sunny and amiable disposition from his Smithfield, N.C. hometown, and he quickly became noted for his ready smile and willingness to help those he could. His plebe year here at Navy, Thel excelled in basketball and as a pole vaulter on the plebe track team. He devoted his practised eye and natural athletic ability to basketball and softball in his years as an upperclassman, becoming an indispensable man on the hardwood for the old Fighting Fifth. Thel augmented the Antiphonal Choir with his soothing baritone, and his magnetic personality brought him a position as a choir officer during his first class year. Being a man of varied interests, Thel never let academics interfere with his pursuit of music and good books, but he still managed to maintain a high academic average. The Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference benefited from Thel's participation in 1965, and all those who knew him benefited from association with this truly warm and friendly person.

M. THOMAS JUENEMANN

"Middie Tom", as he is known by his cohorts, came to the Naval Academy from Central Catholic High School in Canton, Ohio, where he starred for the "Crusaders" in football. But alas, Tom injured both his knees plebe year, as do so many young athletes here at USNA; thus he has had to go lightly in the contact sports ever since the plebe year mishap. He spends most of his time now trying to raise his QPR and playing peek-a-boo (a neat little game he devised one exciting evening in Crabtown).

The Naval Academy has done wonders for this young man. After drawing him from a farm near Canton, it has made him into an outstanding young man who has fallen in love with the islands of Hawaii after visiting them for three years during his stay at Canoe U. He leaves us all with his unforgettable motto, "I'm no pushover, but . . ."

NINTH COMPANY

SECOND COMPANY

DOUGLAS JOE McCARTY

Doug hailed to the Academy from the land of sun, surfing, and beautiful women; San Francisco. On his way to the East, he put in a year at New Mexico Military Institute; orientating his military genes. On arrival to Annapolis, Doug's athletic talents found him a place on the Varsity Basketball and Varsity Football teams, while his ready smile and sense of humor found him many friends among the Brigade. Although academics occasionally reared their head Doug could usually be found in the evenings using his artistic talents; deep in a drawing or his vocal talents; deep in a discussion with friends. During the freedom of weekends, Doug was not to be found in Bancroft, usually re-appearing three minutes before formation, with a contented smile on his face. With his warm, congenial personality; Doug will succeed in whatever the future holds for him.

Arriving at USNA from the fun and frolic filled waterland of Michigan, Big John put his athletic efforts into tennis, and since his arrival has hustled his way onto the varsity team. Scholastically, Big John's main interests turned to the field of Social Sciences after a brief introduction and some experimenting with the pipes and wires of the Engineering courses. Plagued only by plebe year, German, and an intense dislike of Navy barbers throughout his stay at Mother B., John, through his determination and easy going manner managed to overcome all obstacles thus diverting his attention to his one great desire, to hit the fleet. Big John's interests include a great variety of sports, an appreciation of fine music, and a growing interest in the opposite sex. Known best for being a constant source of laughs, and a connoisseur of fine food and wine, John will go far in any field of endeavor he chooses to enter.

JOHN ALDEN NELSON

CRAIG MITCHELL RASMUSSEN

Craig came to the Academy from the ski slopes and beaches of California. He quickly made himself known throughout the class with his ready wit and sense of humor. Never one to worry about academics, Craig keeps a star average while spending most of his evenings making popcorn or in the pad. Weekends, he can usually be seen dragging or playing his favorite sport, soccer, in which he won his letter. Craig has his sights set on submarines and Nuclear Power School, but I'm sure he will be a success in whichever field he chooses.

RONALD L. RINKER

Ron hails from Merriam, Kansas. He attended Kansas State Teachers College for three years and won honors in one meter diving by breaking the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Conference record. He later contributed his last year of eligibility to Navy by taking first place in the Army meet and winning his N star. His active interests here at school included scuba, Glee Club, and Chapel Choir.

Ron is always on the go and seems to have the energy of three men instead of one. There is usually something exciting taking place in Ron's life daily. He has an easy going friendly manner with everyone he meets and takes pride in himself, his school, and the Navy. His strong sense of duty, friendliness, and inquiring mind will make him an asset to the service.

Bob was born and raised in New England. He spent a year with the Pershing Rifles of Providence College before deciding that the military life was definitely for him. While Bob has been at the Naval Academy he has established an excellent record both in academics and in sports. His aggressive spirit and outstanding natural abilities have made him a valued member of the ocean sailing squadron as well as intramural volley ball, cross country and squash. His warm and jovial attitude has won for him many friends both here and away. Although he denies it, the number of broken hearts he leaves behind him would indicate he's a ladies' man. Bob has successfully proved that any "system" can be endured if you ignore it. His perseverance and drive will make him a valued addition to any organization.

ROBERT J. SHAW

ROBERT W. B. STODDERT

Bob entered the Academy from the land of gently flowing rivers, misty mountains and softly spoken women; Virginia. Having already lived through the rigors of a military upbringing, he was inclined to look on the positive more loose interpretation of USNAR. Weekends were very, very seldom spent in the hallowed halls of Bancroft; and never a slacker, he usually found his way to any party then in progress. Academically, he was average, more one who enjoyed his courses for the subject's sake. Looking for something new and interesting in life, Bob devoted his athletic abilities to the varsity crew team and plans to try out his flying abilities with Naval Aviation after graduation. Bob, usually quiet and reserved, had a solid and appealing personality under his conservative exterior. His ability to call a spade a spade won him many lasting friends, and he will be a welcomed addition to any wardroom in the fleet.

GERALD JAMES VAN HORN

Gerald, a Navy Junior, came to the Academy straight from high school. Being a Navy Junior, he has lived in many places, but he has always claimed San Francisco, California, as his home town. Gerry was easy to get along with and his extracurricular activities included the Gun Club and his several "loves". He was a member of the Varsity Dinghy Sailing Team for four years and managed the team for his last two years. He participated in intramural sports during the winter. He did fairly well with his books, and we feel that he will do well in the Fleet and wish him a successful and rewarding career.

Bob graduated from Peoria High School and reported to the Naval Academy fresh from the plains of Illinois. While at the Academy he has participated in Ocean Sailing and Ocean Races to Newport and Bermuda. He has specialized at spending time in port and dragging. The yawl "Dandy" was commanded by "Vasco", his first class year and his first class cruise was with Operation Sail 1964. His good nature and love of the sea will make him a welcome addition to the fleet.

ROBERT A. WAHLFELD

THOMAS ROBINS WEINEL

Tom came to the Academy from Lake Oswego, Oregon, via Millard School. An avid sports car enthusiast, Tom is the local supplier of various sports car magazines and information on any car mentioned in any race, anywhere. Academics here at USNA never gave Tom much trouble, that is if we exclude his four year battle with skinny, and he could usually be found on the bay sailing or in his beloved pad. He has been the mainstay on the ocean sailing team and was one of the first men chosen to crew the new Shields Racing Sloops. Tom has a great sense of humor and this coupled with a ready wit have won him many long lasting friends. Always ready to help his fellow man and quick to take the lead will stand him in good stead and make him a valuable asset to the Navy.

Edward came to the Naval Academy from the sunny islands of Hawaii, where he graduated from Kamehameha School for Boys, a military high school. He readily adjusted to the rigorous demands of the Navy, maintaining Superintendent's List grades and running on the varsity track team. A very easy-going fellow, he was soon given the nickname "Pineapple" by his classmates. Winters were quite a problem for Ed, and though he never quite adjusted to the cold weather, he managed to survive. When Edward returns to Pearl Harbor, he will find that his outstanding ability and high personal standards are more than enough to ensure him his goals.

EDWARD CLARKE ALEXANDER

STEPHEN BAINES ALLMAN

PAUL P. DAULERIO JR.

Paul came to Annapolis with a fine high school scholastic and athletic record followed by an even more successful one year stay at Drexel Institute of Technology in Philadelphia. Here at the Academy he has continued his fine work. During plebe year, Paul was an outstanding member of the plebe soccer team. His ability in this sport was distinctly brought out by his advancement to a first string position on the varsity team his youngster year. Paul climaxed his soccer career at the Academy by being elected varsity soccer captain for the 1964 fall season. Academically, Paul has done exceptionally well, being on the Superintendent's List nearly every semester and wearing stars his youngster year. Paul is very interested in submarines and hopes to make his worth known in this field upon graduation.

After spending a year as a fraternity man at the University of Michigan, Steve came to the banks of the Severn to follow the call of the sea at the helm of the Academy's racing yawls. Having a keen eye for the sails and a steady hand at the helm, Steve became one of the Academy's outstanding sailors and Rear Commodore of the Sailing Squadron. Although sailing seemed to be Steve's first interest, the luck of Tecumseh was always working for him when grades were posted in the hall. Because of his sense of humor and interest in others, Steve gained many friends among, not only his classmates, but in the other classes with which he associated. As sailor and classmate, Steve has done well and should have full sails in the future.

VINCENT JAMES DeNICOLA JR.

Jim's deep love of water sports and the sea led to his decision to come to the Naval Academy. After graduating from Archbishop Molloy H. S. in Jamaica, New York, he entered plebe year and encountered rough sailing but emerged proudly to stand ready for other tests the future might hold. Jim adopted the motto, "You can do anything you set your mind to." and proved this both in his studies, and in his athletics where he twice anchored his cross-country team to the championship. It was hard to see how Jim could have had time for girls with his various activities such as Catholic choir and the Lucky Bag, but there were few festivities where he could not be found. Jim could be best characterized by his deep personal pride and perseverance which earned him the respect of all who knew him. Somehow plagued with one southern roommate after another, this New Yorkan survived their jesting about his accent to take the reins of the Brigade with his classmates. This same determination predicts a bright future for Jim wherever he may go.

PRESTON HODGES FITZGERALD

Fitz was a Floridian, but he could tell you a half a dozen stories about Fort Hamilton in New York City or the night track meet he ran in while attending high school in Pittsburgh or the conditions of post war living in the Philippines. It was easy to tell though, that Boca Raton, Florida, was his favorite home. Fitz's career followed that of his father and brother in the Army until he decided to enter the Academy. While spending his college days at USNA, he devoted his best efforts to academics and athletics. He had to give up varsity cross country after a competitive plebe season in order to concentrate more time on his studies, but Fitz proved to be a valuable asset to the company's cross country championship. With the completion of each successful season the "old man", a nickname that he rapidly acquired, vowed that it would be his last, but he would return the next year not only in cross country but also in basketball and softball to add spirit and drive to the team.

Before entering the hallowed halls of USNA, Mike spent a leisurely year at Columbian Prep School. Ever since school days Mike has been striving to become one of the boys in "green"; and he may be seen decked out in fatigues and campaign hat any winter afternoon on the rifle range. Always a tough competitor, Mike has worked the third battalion lacrosse team from three time losers into a winning group. Although he gets run for being so conscientious, Mike is always there to lend a hand when troubles arise. During the week Mike spends many a frustrating moment trying to keep all his girls in line and trying not to have more than one down for the weekend. No one need ask what service selection Mike will make, because he probably knows as much about the Marine Corps as any person here. The Corps will get a fine officer and a determined worker in Mike Hester.

MILTON JENSEN HESTER

LAWRENCE PAUL KING

"KINGER" came to the Academy straight out of high school. From the first he had no trouble with academics, however, his easy-going personality often ran contrary to the "good plebe" notion. Weathering plebe year with no ill feelings Larry developed into one of the best good natured critics of the system found in the brigade. After classes "Kinger" could always be found excelling in company sports or logging time in the pad. Weekends usually found him running to D.C. to catch a plane for a quick trip to Ohio and his O.A.O. Upon graduation the Naval Service will gain a sincere and dedicated officer.

SECOND BATTALION

After spending a year at the University of Michigan, Gary tired of the gay campus life under the NROTC program and jumped into his blue, double-breasted suit. After bringing his YP in for a perfect landing and receiving the hardy congratulations from the "Screaming Eagle", Gary was convinced that the Navy life was for him. Being consistently on the Supt's List, Gary was never plagued by deficiencies in academics. Thus during his first two years, he had ample time to spend working on his hi-fi equipment. Second class year, his hobby took a back seat when Cupid arrived with a hundred and sixty pound package. Gary's heart quickly shifted from mother Bancroft to downtown Annapolis. During the intramural sports season "Red in the Head" would be found burning up the cinders, running over hill and dale or defeating numerous squash opponents. Gary is efficient, dependable, and quite interested in a Navy career. He will go out of his way to help one in need no matter how he is pressed for time. With these assets, Gary will undoubtedly progress far in his Naval career.

GARY REED LAUGHLIN

JEFFREY LEE LEWIS

Jeff came to Annapolis with quite a varied background. Being raised on the Navajo Indian Reservation in Holbrook, Arizona, Jeff soon established quite a reputation for his athletic prowess in football, basketball and track. Upon graduation from high school, Jeff attended the University of New Mexico for two years where he played football, underwent ROTC training and earned a reputation as a man to be reckoned with at any party. Jeff found the transition from college to Academy life easy with the exception of the lack of parties which he made every attempt to make up for on weekends. Never allowing himself to rest on his laurels Jeff could be found on many weekends hard at work trying to decipher Steam and Skinny, both of which gave him troubles. Jeff spent his free time when not studying, managing the varsity pistol team and reading books on his favorite subjects, politics and philosophy. It will be hard for anyone who knows him to forget Jeff's cowboy boots, ready smile, and easy going personality as he leaves us to join the men in white.

EDWARD ANTHONY MAYER JR.

Ed will be remembered by all who have had the opportunity to know him for his ready smile and winning ways. Always willing to help a classmate who may have been having trouble with academics or any other subject on which Ed had a passing knowledge. Ed was quick to make friends. Ed's constant cheerfulness also won him many friends. Though his forte was "Bull" he was no slouch when it came to the rest of the many courses studied here at Navy. He was also a tough man to play against in sports as those who ran into him while playing Batt Football can well testify. The well rounded combination of ambition, initiative, self-confidence and his winning ways will serve Ed for many years to come and will be a welcome addition to any command to which he is assigned.

KENNETH RANDALL MYERS

Randy, hailing from nearby Baltimore, came to us via two hectic years of preparation at North Carolina State College, majoring particularly in party-going. Luckily for us, this has been carried over and I am sure all of us who knew him will remember those wild parties at Randy's house in B-more. His ever-present joking and capacity for making anyone laugh has done much to make life much more pleasant for all of us. Randy's athletic ability has made him well respected on the intramural fields, especially on the badminton courts where he has become one of the better players in the Brigade. His main interest though lies in the femmes, and few weekends go by that we find him without a pretty young companion. A true gentleman in every sense of the word. Randy looks forward to making a career of Navy line.

After graduating from Newport Catholic H.S. in Newport, Kentucky, Pat came to the Naval Academy not knowing the bow of a ship from its stern. Since that time he has excelled in both professional knowledge and mathematics, his first love which he hopes to teach someday. When Pat wasn't studying he could be found playing basketball, his favorite sport. He was also quite a runner, having run in plebe, varsity and intramural competition. Singing was among his other interests, and the showers were often heard reverberating to his folk songs. Pat's Irish wit and sense of humor attracted many sweet young things to the Academy, and it was an unusual occurrence when there weren't several letters from his admirers on his desk in the morning. With his determination and positive outlook on life, Pat should perform an outstanding job in whatever duties to which he may be assigned.

PATRICK HOWARD NOLAN

TERENCE EDWARD RICHARDSON

Born a Canadian, Ed decided to come south for the California sun. There he discovered his true love, the sea. After a detour to ET school and NAPS, Ed arrived on the banks of the Severn. Consistently on the Supt's List, after a stiff plebe year, Ed had time to take up varsity fencing which, with his "gung ho" attitude, he easily mastered. Ed's major in Portuguese should well qualify him for overseas duty. In his spare time, when he wasn't hitting the books or shooting the breeze, Ed could be found writing a letter to his OAO with that ever constant and well known smile. His ability to adapt to new situations and to learn quickly will make Ed a definite asset to the Naval Service and his commanding officer.

JAMES ROPER SCALES JR.

Jim, a resident of Pasadena, California, comes to us as a Navy Junior. After managing his own electronics repair shop and earning just about every award possible in scouting, Jim found his love for the sea in sailing and followed his father's footsteps to the Academy. Since Jim's arrival here, he has been active in sailing, swimming, and body conditioning. There are few who know "the scaley one" who will soon forget his bootlegging radio operations out of his room after taps, or his infamous plots to get people to go sailing with him come rain, sleet, or snow. Jim, always one to have a good looking drag at his side, enjoyed fully the lighter aspects of academy life. With his warm personality, constant willingness to help people out, and ready smile, Jim will be remembered as a man to have around when the going gets tough and when a true friend is needed. Jim will be a definite asset to any command to which he may be attached.

This "never-say-die" rebel from that section of the Deep South known as Bush River, South Carolina, came to USNA by way of the NROTC unit at the University of Kansas. He had his job cut out for him Plebe Year when he entered the Academy with the intention of convincing the upperclass that the South not only produced the best warriors, but also, the prettiest girls. Jim's self-confidence and determination to do what he sets out to do have won him many friends here at the Academy and caused his name to appear on lists ranging through such things as Ocean Sailing, Plebe Crew, Dinghy Sailing, Batt Debate, Co. Football, Co. Squash, the Italian Club, and the Superintendent's List. However, his name is conspicuously missing from the confirmed bachelor's list. It looks as if "that-girl-back-home" has more determination than he does. Upon graduation Jim will fall in with the long line of newly-commissioned officers and will undoubtedly make an outstanding officer and gain the respect of those who serve under and with him.

JAMES ROY SEXTON

CHARLES EDWARD SLOAN JR.

When South Carolina sent this tall, friendly, Southerner with the big smile to the Naval Academy, she sent her finest. Most of the time Edward could be heard expounding on the South or his latest love. He used his weekends to develop his theory that the mission of the Naval Academy was not only to develop men morally, mentally, and physically, but socially as well. Edward's ability to laugh at himself and his sense of humor have made many friends which he will keep through life. He always claimed that the reason he could help others with their problems was because he didn't have a problem in the world. Edward possesses a deep personal pride, and self-confidence which placed him on the Superintendent's List and gave him that "little bit of extra drive" on the athletic field. These qualities will continue to make him a success regardless of the path chosen from here.

JOHN JOSEPH SMITH

Joe, having a name that is easy to forget, has a personality that keeps you smiling from the minute you meet him. After graduation from high school in Lynbrook, New York, he spent four years in the U. S. Marine Corps. Included among his previous duty stations is Hawaii, where he spent much of his time burning up the roads in a Sprite convertible. Coming from the service, Joe had no trouble adjusting himself or his Plebe Summer roommates to Academy life. Joe's talents as a runner and as a writer went to good use during his stay at Navy. When he wasn't writing for the LOG Feature Staff, Joe was helping the company cross country and battalion track teams win championships. Joe plans to return to the Marine Corps where we are all sure he will do a superb job.

After graduating from high school in Fresno, California, Bobby spent a year at Fresno State College before entering the Naval Academy. Being the outdoor type, Bob has channeled most of his athletic ability to Varsity Cross Country here at Navy. He is also a strong competitor in company softball and football. When not on the athletic field, Bob devotes many of his off-duty hours to the children in his Sunday School Class. Academically, Bobby has worked hard for every grade he receives. This is evidenced by his ever-increasing good marks. With his many abilities and strong religious faith, we are sure that Bob will continue to be an asset to both the Naval Service and his country.

ROBERT DEAN STEVENSON

HAROLD WILSON TEASDALE

Harry, or "Teaser" as he is sometimes called, is a native of that great land west of the Mississippi River, even though he achieved this distinction by a scant 100 yards. Coming straight from high school, Harry plunged into plebe academics and plebe swimming, emerging as a winner in both fields. Harry soon had an outstanding record in academics and aptitude, but he encountered an enemy in our dreaded conduct system. His famous troubles returning from leave did not go unnoticed by the Executive Dept., for Harry soon acquired the coveted "Black N". Although much of his free time was taken up by the Drum and Bugle Corps, Harry still found time to think up countless gags and practical jokes to spring on unsuspecting friends. His skill in squash and fieldball contributed to many victories for his company. An easy-going manner, keen wit, and an unmatched skill with hair-clippers will assure Harry a successful career in the service.

Gene followed a somewhat devious route coming to the Academy and an even more devious one in coming back for a second try, working in one year of prep. school and a half year of college. After a busy plebe year playing plebe lacrosse, he took up company sports. These were soon replaced by a much more satisfying and exacting activity, seeing how many hours per day one could actually sleep. Liberty, with Gene, was another matter as some of his "good" times were infamous. Trimp's boyish looks made him the type of Middie that tourists love to take pictures of and the girls love to take home and show the family. His love life was known to be full of ups and downs but he always seemed to come out on top. Plebes were often seen standing up in the mess hall voicing the comments of "Mr. Trimpert". His easygoing personality fitted in well at the Academy. Gene will be able to serve the Navy in whatever branch he chooses . . .

EUGENE CHARLES TRIMPERT

WILLIAM K. VIZZA

Bill willingly gave up the freedoms of being Joe College at West Virginia University to join us on the shores of the Severn. However, four years in the Navy have almost completely obliterated any fond remembrances of the good old college days. Bill did carry over some of his old traits and managed a pretty fair career at the Academy. During this time he was a member of the Glee Club, was an outstanding fieldball product and was a trusty member of several national champion varsity lacrosse teams. Bill also known as "Willy" is looking forward to the time when he can either pin on the wings of an aviator or the dolphins of a submariner.

GERARD J. ZOPF

Hailing from the big city of New York, Jerry quickly adapted to life here at Navy. Always ready with a friendly word and a quick smile, Jerry had little trouble making many friends while here. Being one of the boys with stars, Jerry found plenty of time to devote to many and varied extracurricular activities; with sailing occupying much of his free time, enabling him to become well acquainted with the ways of the sea. Always willing to put forth that little extra effort, Jerry will be a welcome addition to any command throughout his career.

After graduation from high school, where he was an honor student and three-sport athlete, John brought his ambitions and talents East to become a member of the class of 1965. As a Fifteenth Company plebe, John's high school sports interests were temporarily set aside while he rowed on the plebe crew team. Youngster year found him in the Eighth Company where he once again returned to his high school sports on a company level, enabling him to devote more time to overload for an engineering major. His basketball ability helped spur the company team to unexpected heights. As an upperclassman, John devoted many hours to coaching classmates in academics as well as to his duties as a striper. In keeping with his record as a high school honor student, John attained a star average with his sights set on a career in nuclear power. A man who has time and again proved his ability to manage any task presented to him, his spirit, enthusiasm, and leadership will be remembered by those fortunate enough to serve under him and with him.

JOHN CHARLES ALLEN

DONALD GORDON BARGER JR.

Although Don claims Hamilton, Ohio, as his home town, he has, as a result of being an Army brat, the right to also claim many other parts of the world as home. Don's army background inspired him to thoroughly develop his military potential by not only meeting the challenge of Academy life but also by participating in such extra activities as Survival, Escape and Evasion School and Airborne Training. Don's enthusiasm for life at the Academy was not limited to the area of military training, but more often than not, he could be found behind a book, earnestly pursuing his academic endeavors. He did not limit himself to the basic academic program but broadened his education by actively engaging in the over-load program offered by the bull department. The real joy in Don's life, however, came from his participation in the Christian activities around the Academy. His enthusiasm and dedication to the academics and to the military was his way of witnessing for the Lord. Don's Christian beliefs and activities enabled him to always do his best in everything that he undertook.

JOHN EDWARD BISHOP

John came to USNA via NAPS after spending a year with the fleet. Before this time he was an outstanding student engaged in athletic as well as academic activities at Wyandotte High School in his hometown of Kansas City, Kansas. While at the Academy, John excelled in the racket sports, lettering in squash and participating in tennis. During the fall and winter months John could be found in the field house squash courts, perfecting his game. When not playing squash or tennis John could be found studying or taking an active part in the programs sponsored by the Chapel. Notable among these activities were The Naval Academy Christian Association, the Officer's Christian Union, and the 1730 Chapel Service. In all of these organizations, John witnessed to the importance of placing Christ first in one's life. We all appreciated the contribution that John made to the programs whether in a formal capacity as Vice-President of NACA or informally as a leader of discussions on Christian beliefs.

Ron, being from the oil fields of Oklahoma, readily accepted the challenge of life in a new environment on the Severn. Coming straight from high school, where he excelled, he plunged right into plebe year both in academics and sports. He set out to make a mark for himself with the academic departments, and participated in company basketball and softball. His quick reflexes and ability to hustle made him an asset to the B-ball team, and his wit and good natured personality make him well liked by all. Ron's spare time was taken up by his work with the B.S.U. and helping anyone who came to him with a problem. The record he has established during these four years predicts his success in the future.

RONALD FLOYD BISHOP

Ira "Bud" Gaston hails from Indianapolis, Indiana. Bud graduated from Pike Township High School before coming to the Naval Academy. During high school he attended Butler University for special classes in college courses which kept him in good stead at the academy. Bud has studied very hard, worn stars and been on the Superintendent's List since coming to U.S.N.A. All the same Bud likes to enjoy himself in free moments. He is an avid sports fan and played plebe soccer and golf as well as intramural sports. By majoring in engineering Bud has had to study quite hard, but I am sure that this extra effort, along with his ability to enjoy life, will allow him to go far in the future.

IRA GASTON

JEFFREY ALLEN GAUGUSH

Barney hails from the land of steel mills and deep snow. After graduation from Meadville High School with honors, he came to the Academy to find a completely different way of life than that of home. He learned quickly, and soon became active in the Brigade Activities Committee. Since he enjoyed this extra curricular activity, he pursued it further and became a vital part of the Public Relations Committee, of which he eventually became Chief Announcer. His keen sense of humor brought him many friends and will be a big asset in his career. Barney never had much trouble with academics or with having a good time.

EDWARD JAMES BROSS JR.

Jeff commonly known as "The Bouncing Gush Bear", hails from the Windy City. He entered the Naval Academy after attending Mendel High and Bullis Prep. While attending Bullis Prep, Jeff decided to further his education at the Naval Academy. Jeff, being a natural athlete, played football for two years before retiring his jersey to devote most of his time to personal conditioning and rugby. Besides being an excellent athlete, "Gush" is also an avid sports fan for all the Chicago teams. His devotion to the Chicago teams is exemplified by the Bill George tee shirt he wears at times, and his knowledge of all the players on the Chicago teams. Having a relatively easy time with academics "Gush" devoted much of his spare time in broadening his education by reading many novels. Knowing a little about everything and a lot about sports has enabled Jeff to become a very competent conversationalist. Jeff will always be a valuable asset to the Naval Service.

RICHARD MANSFIELD HAMILTON

The Naval Academy became the recipient of a versatile and talented individual when Rick left Philadelphia, Pennsylvania to pursue his education at the Academy. As a serious student he realized the importance of a broad education and chose history as his major area of study. His thirst for knowledge was equaled only by his desire to communicate, and he was eager to contribute his ideas and thoughts to conversation. Rick's personality won him many friends and those friends will remember him most for his spontaneous humor, social grace, and interest in his fellow classmates. During his career at the Academy, Rick achieved a high level of excellence in every undertaking. He truly possesses the qualities and attributes that will lead to a richly gratifying life.

Dan came to the Academy from NAPS after serving for two years as an enlisted man. The time that Dan spent in the fleet helped him to mature a great deal with the result that he was able to fully accept the challenge presented by the Academy. Dan contributed much to the Academy through his artistic abilities and talents. His participation in the art contest helped to strengthen these programs which gave the midshipmen a chance to develop and demonstrate their abilities in the fine arts. We all owe a lot to Dan for the ideas and work that he contributed which helped to make our ring dance such a memorable occasion. Athletically, Dan devoted his efforts to the company and battalion sports program, avidly pursuing such sports as squash and handball. In spite of all his activities, Dan always managed to find time to relax by reading or developing his interests in the fine arts.

DANIEL DAVIES HILL

L. JEROME KIMBALL

Lynn came to the Naval Academy with high goals set for himself and during his career as a midshipman achieved most all of them. As the son of an Air Force Colonel he found the military life quite agreeable and took advantage of every opportunity the Academy presented. As an athlete he was a vigorous competitor, participating in company football, cross country, soccer, and battalion track where he was undefeated in his event. As a student he placed high importance upon academic excellence and consequently stood high in his class. As a friend he was understanding and reliable, dependable, and interested in the well being of his classmates. Lynn achieved a foundation at the Academy that will insure him an impressive and inspired career in the Naval Service.

PAUL FREDRICK MICKELSON

Mick came to the Academy from the "Land of the Ten Thousand Lakes", Minnesota, bringing with him his quick smile and witty humor. Adding these to his easy-going manner, Mick soon won the friendship of all with whom he met. A varsity athlete and outstanding scholar in high school, Mick easily took to Academy life. A fierce competitor, he held down key positions on the battalion football, water polo, and company field ball teams after foregoing varsity athletics for his academics. He was the frustrating type, holding down double overloads, continually receiving Supe's List grades, and forever practicing the horizontal on the blue trampoline. Liberty call always found him raring and ready to go, whether he was chasing or being chased by the fairer sex. Never lacking a place to go, Mick was a charter member of one of Annapolis' local key clubs. He is sure to be a welcome asset to the fleet.

FRANK DANIEL MITCHELL JR.

Danny, destined for a career in destroyers, entered the Academy from Baltimore. An ex "Poly" boy, a fact which he constantly reveals to friend and foe alike, he has stirred up things on the Varsity Lacrosse field during the Spring and Fall. Besides his value on the athletic field Danny has been noted for his "excellence in Engineering", always willing to give a hand whenever a rough problem was encountered. The "old Eighth" owes its gratitude to him and is certain he will make an easy transition to the life of a "brown bagger" due to the experience gained from his many weekend cake and cookie runs to Cochran Avenue. Always on the move, a gentleman with sharp insight and a ready smile, "Mitch" will be a welcome addition to the service of his choice.

EDWARD THOMAS NAPP

After graduating with honors from high school, "Snapper", as he was known to his friends, spent a year at the University of Akron before coming to the Academy. Capitalizing on his college courses, Tom took advantage of the validation program and was thereby able to pick up some additional credits. During his youngster year Tom spent many an afternoon sailing on the Chesapeake Bay as a member of the sailing squadron, which led to his participation in the Annapolis-Newport Ocean Race during second class summer. Tom was traditionally known to be quiet around the Hall; however, his radiant personality shown forth at several post-game parties. One of his favorite pastimes was tinkering with Hi-Fi gear, and his room usually looked like a Hi-Fi shop. We're certain that Tom's sincere attitudes in dealing with those around him will be one of his major assets in whichever facet of the Naval service he selects.

PAUL FRANCIS NOE JR.

"The Noe" came to the Academy from the fleet via NAPS. Surviving plebe year, he spent much of youngster year in the pad as did the rest of us. He was active in Brigade boxing, soccer, and company softball, but more often than not could be found curled up with a Mickey Spillane thriller or a pillow. Never one to shirk a good time or adventure, Paul spent two summers abroad, one in Europe, and the other in WestPac. Paul was born on September 22, 1941, and hails from Harrison, New Jersey. He brought with him to the Academy a friendly nature and happy go lucky spirit which will long be remembered by his classmates and will serve him well in his future as an officer. "PF" has vowed to make every liberty call for the rest of his career.

John has spent most of his life in southern Nevada, but now calls Sun Valley, California his home. He received his strong academic background while attending four years of high school in Ireland at Clongowes Wood College. John is a great sports fan and played plebe soccer and participated enthusiastically in intramural soccer and rugby. John has been a member of the French Club and Newman Club, has earned stars and has made the Superintendent's List from time to time. He has been busy in taking additional electives in science courses and in majoring in French, but all the same has always found time to help others in any kind of difficulty. John is good-natured, intelligent and certain to be a credit to whatever branch of the service he enters.

JOHN JOSEPH O'DWYER

GORDON LeROY PETERSON

In June of '61 'Gordie' put away his boots and saddle, hung up his guns and left Texas for the Naval Academy. He had a hard ride ahead of him, but he met the challenge with flying colors. While at the Academy he participated in company football, volleyball and cross-country, sang in the Academy Choir, and sailed with the Yawl Squadron. He had a keen interest in academics which was only exceeded by his avid desire for the pad. This was no big problem for him because he compromised and always studied in the pad. Gordie's friendliness and open-mindedness made him a welcomed friend in any group. Hard work and determination have never been obstacles to him, so his only limits in the future are the desires and goals to which he sets his heart.

CHARLES ARTHUR SALDARINI

After graduation from Glen Rock High School where he demonstrated his athletic ability by lettering in football, basketball, and baseball, the "Hooch" directed his attention toward the shores of the Severn. He started his plebe year in the First Company, and it wasn't long until he became a bosom friend of the "Gruders". His fine athletic ability and keen competitive spirit can be attested to by all who came in contact with him on the intramural field. Academically Chuck stood in the upper half of his class all four years and was always willing to lend a helping hand. His friendly, unselfish and warm personality, his understanding and respect for all hands has gained him many friends during his four years at the Academy. Not to go unmentioned, is the "Hooch's" enthusiasm over a good party, and the magnetic personality which always endeared him with the opposite sex. "The Terror of Greenwich Village" was always in favor of everyone having a good time. Although undecided as to his future, with his loyalty to the service, forthrightness, and conscientious efforts, Chuck will be a welcomed asset to the Navy and to all around him.

RICHARD STEPHEN SIROTA

DICK came to the Boat School immediately after graduating with honors from Emerson High School in Union City, New Jersey, and had little problem adjusting to the rigors of the U.S.N.A. routine. Many will remember him for his keen sense of humor which carried them through their unhappy moments. Managing the Lacrosse team took much of his time, but Dick could always take a few moments to chat with his friends, who made his room a center of activity. Academics were never any problem for Dick, but swimming and the opposite sex rendered him hours of anxiety. A good mystery or party were particularly to Dick's liking, and he pursued both zealously. His interests for the future lie in Navy Line, and he will surely succeed in his chosen career.

WYNNE ALLAN STEVENS

Wynne Stevens, or Wazzy as he is known by his friends, has lived in Hawaii and came to the Naval Academy via Annandale High School where he was graduated in the class of 1961. After having difficulty with academics plebe year, he has settled down and ranked well above average since. He has used the elective program effectively and because of his good background from high school was also able to use the validation program. Wynne is about as unsuccessful in following academy regulations as he is successful in the academic field, having spent numerous weekends restricting and amassed countless demerits during youngster and second class years. He is a versatile athlete, having rowed battalion crew, played company football, volleyball, and cross country. In addition to these organized sports, on weekends he is frequently seen playing tennis with a member of the opposite sex. With his fine academic achievements, hard work, and dedication to the Navy, he should be a successful officer.

FURMAN EWAN THOMAS

Furman is a Virginian by birth, but he claims Miami, Florida, as his real home. Before joining the Brigade, he attended Southwest Miami High School and Sullivan Prep School, Washington, D.C. He was always a solid student and participated in intramural 150# football, water polo, and the Sailing Squadron. Sports cars are his hobby and owning a Corvette his dream, for when he was relaxing from regular studies, he could always be found examining the intricacies of some automotive component. Being dedicated to a career in the service, he will be a fine officer and leader. Furm's combination of a warm smile and a helping hand for everyone will mark his passage on the trail to success in everything he undertakes.

Al came from the rolling plains of Nebraska to USNA and the Chesapeake Bay. He was more at home on a tractor than on a yawl, but he has adapted himself well to the sea and has become a true sailor. A good singer, Al was in the Catholic Choir and the Glee Club, which has enabled him to make the claim of having an address book that read more like a geography book. He has been a member of the Musical Clubs Show every year and his talent on the trumpet gave him a place in the Concert Band. Al's enthusiasm for the outdoors and hunting led to his being a charter member of the newly formed Gun Club. In spite of all his activities, Al managed to find some time to devote to academic pursuits and he even managed to take a few overloads. His numerous activities have enabled Al to make many lasting friends at USNA, and we all know that his many talents will enable him to become an outstanding Naval officer.

ALAN JAMES WAISS

JAMES HIRSCH WILSON

Jim came to the shores of the Severn with the blessings of Palmyra High School and Lebanon Valley College. Palmyra has good reason to be proud, for as outstanding as Jim was in scholastics and sports while in high school, he continued to do quite well during his years as a midshipman. An outstanding student, having a major in mathematics as well as one in physics, he quite often discovered his name on the Superintendent's List. Jim's devoted interest to brigade activities and studies never precluded his giving a hand to any classmate in need of extra help. He is envied by all for his carefree attitude and his charming personality. He is certain to excel in anything that he attempts after graduation.

SECOND BATTALION

Hailing from the thriving metropolis of Gladstone, (in the U.P.) Michigan, Terry spent two years in the Marines before receiving a fleet appointment to the Academy. With his Marine Corps experience and his likable and easy going personality Terry soon established himself as one of the leaders of his class. This leadership was carried, likewise, onto the intramural field where he became a valuable asset to the Eighth Company athletic teams. The academic dept. never phased Terry and those not so fortunate could always turn to him for assistance. On weekends he could be found in an interesting discussion on sports, in particular those Detroit Tigers, or out pursuing the fairer sex. With his quick mind, pleasant personality, and smart appearance, Terry will certainly be an asset to the service.

TERRENCE E. ANDERSON

FREDERICK EDWARD BAKER

Freddy "Boom Boom" came to us from Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin where he excelled in high school academics and athletics. His interests were centered in the maths and sciences and his ability in these areas enabled him to earn a major in mathematics via the elective program. Never finding the Academy academic routine overly demanding, he could always be counted upon to engage in extra curricular activities not normally condoned by the executive department. An avid water skier, Fred always managed to spend more time at the beach than he spent under instruction during summer cruise programs. An easy going, likeable personality along with an unwavering concentration upon a goal will make Boom Boom a successful officer.

WILLIAM GRAND BURD

Bill, who is known to his classmates as the "Birdman of Annapolis", comes to the Naval Academy from Coral Gables, Florida. At Coral Gables High Bill was an outstanding athlete in both football and track. After high school he enlisted in the Navy and went to the Naval Academy Prep School in Bainbridge, Maryland. At the Academy, academics never posed much of a problem and Bill devoted much of his time to athletics. He played football for two years and pole vaulted for the track team until they no longer had a pole strong enough to support him. When Bill was not on leave or liberty, he could always be found in the Field House playing with a few hundred pounds of weights. After graduation Bill hopes to head to Pensacola.

Mike is a Navy "junior" who has been around quite a bit and didn't really settle down until he came to the Naval Academy. After getting off to a slow start in academics, he buckled down and pulled up his grades to the point that his uniform was adorned with academic stars first class year. Although he put a lot of time into his studies, Mike still found time to develop his social etiquette, and could always be counted on to have a good-looking drag and subsequently a good time at football games, hops, and parties. In fact, a testimonial to his good times at parties remains inscribed on the side of his cheek, though he claims it is a football scar. Mike was a stalwart on the batt football team for three years, holding down the number one quarterback slot the last two. During the other two seasons of the year he managed the varsity track team.

Mike is friendly, easy to get along with, and well liked by his classmates, as well as those of other classes, because he will go out of his way to do a favor for someone. He is a dedicated, hard worker, and his perseverance and conscientious efforts will insure his success as a Naval officer.

MICHAEL THOMAS COYLE

After a year of college in his home state of Mississippi, "Butch" came to USNA well prepared for the first stage of his naval career. He decided to forego his love of football in order to concentrate on academics. Active in the intramural program, soccer, volleyball, and heavyweight football occupied many of his afternoons. A sincere student with an occasional flair for the pad, Butch has consistently improved his class standing since Plebe year. His easy-going nature and ability to take a joke make him a popular and much respected person by all who know him. Hunting, fishing, gun collecting, women, and southern cooking form his main interests and give him a lot of variety during his summers.

Dudes had the great fortune of learning the English language under the tutelage of the U.S.N.A. EH&G department. He came from Trieste, Italy, five scant years earlier and became a citizen of the U.S. just one day before being sworn in as a Midshipman thus losing his newly gained privileges of a full-fledged citizen overnight. The biggest part of his plebe indoctrination was convincing him that wine would not be served in the messhall. However, his indomitable spirit was not dampened as can be seen from his record here at the Academy. He earned his letter for his outstanding ability as a defenseman on the soccer team. He put his proficiency in foreign languages to good use first as vice-president and then as president of the Italian Club and as secretary of the Combined Language Clubs. Thinking of Dudes one cannot help but to recall his many care packages—continental style—and his bountiful information on the ways and customs of the European people which helped make his classmates' cruise so much more enjoyable.

FABRIZIO M. DUDINE

RUFUS OBIE EDDINS JR.

JOE NEWTON FRAZAR III

Coming from a state where superlatives abound, Joe found it easy being the happiest person in the brigade. Always ready with a witty remark, constantly smiling, Joe was never at a loss for something to brighten up a day at USNA. Long will the memories last of midshipman 4/c Frazar's messhall antics. Meal after meal Joe kept the first Regiment in laughter as he loosed upon those designated 1/c such humorous verbal ridicule as 4/c have never dreamed of. The background Joe received from his training at New Mexico Military Institute served Joe in good stead at the Academy. With a pleasant personality and a firm appraisal of right and wrong Joe practiced leadership daily. Although Joe didn't burn up the academic record books with his marks, he always felt he was in a position to join a weekend excursion party. The mention of a fair maiden's name or the flash of a skirt sent the happy rebel scurrying to the Batt office for a weekend chit. Joe also found time to take part in a masquerader's production. Uncertain as to his future, Joe's sense of humor and drive will make him a success in whatever field he chooses.

TWELFTH COMPANY

SECOND BATTALION

Bruce came to USNA from the sunny state of California. After a harassing Plebe year in the old 8th company, Bruce settled down to the demanding life of an upperclassman. He quickly demonstrated his ability as a capable student, and was on the Superintendent's List. In his leisure time, Bruce could always be found in the "blue trampoline." An active member of the intramural sports program, he could always be counted on for a winning effort. Bruce's hobbies include skiing and hunting. His sincerity and his many capabilities will go hand in hand to produce in him a rewarding success as an officer and a gentleman.

BRUCE LEONARD FULLER

ALLEN WAYNE HOOF

"Hooper" has hailed from many places, at present from #3 Porter Road. Allen was graduated from Wheaton High School, and a month later dipped into the cauldron of Plebe Summer to emerge a midshipman of top notch quality. A man of diversified interests, he is equally as skillful on the chess board as on the Soccer field. He has always made a discouraging roommate since he conquers academics and athletics with ease. Al's deep love of fine art is shown in his good taste in music. If you ever hear a Gilbert and Sullivan Operetta blaring, rest assured that the Hooper is near. Deeply imbedded in him is a military soul, and a fine sense of discipline. He is always willing to win or to take the next objective, and shows promise for a great career in the Naval Service.

ANDREW R. KISH

Andy, commonly known as "Indian", hails from Lucerne Mines, Pa. Before coming to Navy, he spent a year at Indiana State College, Indiana, Pa. where he lettered in football. During his stay at USNA, Andy directed most of his extra time toward Varsity football and academics, however, in the spring his fancy inevitably turned to an unequalled passion for sun-bathing. Consequently the deep tan he always acquired brought along with it the nickname Indian. Andy's outstanding trait is his "never give up" attitude. This along with his warm cheerful personality should help insure him a happy and successful future.

GEORGE DURANCEAU KOREN

A true Californian in the best sense, "Turk" was constantly extolling the virtues of his home state. After a carefree year as a NROTC'er at Oregon State, George quite ably weathered the abrupt transition from college life to that of a USNAY midshipman. Easy-going and likeable, George won many friends, not only among his own classmates, but also with the underclass. His vigorous participation in sports covered many fields, ranging from ocean sailing to company lightweight football, perhaps his favorite being numerous workouts on his blue trampoline. An avid music lover, George's musical interests extended considerably beyond the top ten of WCAO. Turning his face skyward, George aspires to follow in the wake of his older brother, and to one day wear the Navy Wings of Gold.

GARY WALTER MacLEOD

Mac was born in San Diego, Calif., but being a Navy Junior, he never settled long in one place. After one year at the Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, where he joined Sigma Nu Fraternity, Mac followed in his brother's footsteps and came to Navy. His quick, witty, and sarcastic humor soon endeared him to all. An active supporter of intramural sports, he played football, baseball, and ran cross country between separated shoulders and Sitz baths. Academics were never much of a problem, always pushing Supe's List grades. But, as Adam had his troubles with the apple, so did Mac, particularly while applying the principles of terminal ballistics. "Losing" his lighter on Youngster Cruise proved costly, it leading to the loss of his Pin . . . several times. Mac's enthusiasm for the Navy, along with his intelligence and sense of humor will be valuable assets in his career as an officer.

MICHAEL GLEN MALONE

Mike came to the Academy straight from the campus of the University of Southern California where he became a member of Delta Sigma Phi Fraternity. While at the Academy, he majored in history, but he still found time from making Supe's List grades for many outside interests. Mike showed spirit and determination on the 150 Pound Crew as a Plebe and later as an upperclassman on various intramural teams, including football, volleyball, softball, and crew. He was the "organization man" for entertainment during liberty hours and if there was a party, he was sure to be in on the planning. His crowning achievement was the Second Class Company ring dip party for which he procured twenty blind, but beautiful, drags for his classmates. Being a charter member, Mike spent many of his weekends at one of Annapolis' more famous or rather infamous key clubs. His keen interest and determination should carry him far in his career.

TWELFTH COMPANY

SECOND BATTALION

Dave came to the Naval Academy from Garden High School in Oakwood, Virginia, where he lettered in three sports. Although he played no varsity sports at Navy, he was usually a stand out in intramural basketball and softball. Spring afternoons, Dave could usually be found working out with the sunbathing team. Actually his favorite pastime at the Academy was sports, either participating or watching. Dave never had any trouble with academics; his grades were always about average. As we all knew, although he vehemently denied it, his favorite courses were swimming and weapons; however his best grades were usually in the humanities. Dave has a strong affection for the deep south, especially Florida and Naval Aviation. His ability to get along with people and his natural enthusiasm should insure him success in whichever branch of the service he chooses.

DAVID LEE MILLER

EDWARD FRANCIS O'CONNOR

Ed attended high school in Brooklyn, N.Y., and within a few months of graduation enlisted in the Navy. After a short time in the Navy, Ed became interested in the Naval Academy and attended the Navy Prep School at Bainbridge. Never having been a varsity athlete, Ed confined his efforts to the intramural program. He started out plebe summer as a boxer, but because of his nose (it was broken) he found that his efforts would be more rewarded as a handball player. Ed was also an effective soccer and softball player. Between dragging and trips to Brooklyn, Ed managed to log in some study time; he had little trouble with academics, taking numerous science electives and being on the Superintendent's List all four years. Actually, the secret to Ed's success was that he spent so much time showing his classmates how to do problems that he learned by osmosis. Ed was also a member of the Spanish Club and was selected to serve on the class improvement committee. Ed hopes for a career as a line officer and with his high class standing he is a shoo-in for the nuclear power program.

PATRICK J. PHILBIN

Pat, more affectionately known as the Whale, came to the Academy from Columbian Prep School after spending his high school days at St. Francis Xavier High School in New York City. He is easily recognized by his Irish red hair and boyish freckles. Pat can always be found with a crowd for his jovial personality just seems to draw friends. Pat may not be known by the rest of the Brigade, but most of us will remember the Whale's jarring tackles on the football field and quick defensive stick on the lacrosse field as Navy downed many an opponent. Pat, barring any physical disability, plans to fly the big birds for the Navy after graduation. Good Luck, Whale! By the way, there's never been a flying whale in the Navy before.

Upon the completion of his four years at the Academy, a little scrutiny will show that "Ole Plummer" has accomplished much in the first twenty-two years of his life. As a grad of Plainfield High in New Jersey, Jerry set out to make Columbian Prep aware of his presence, but after a year there, the Blue and Gold call became too much for him and he entered the Academy. His performances there have been admirable with Jerry excelling in academics and sports alike. He has contributed much to his company in providing warm friendship and a competitive interest in all aspects of company life. Naval aviation will benefit tremendously from his talents after graduation as will the lucky female who latches on to his warmth and sentimentality. If the past is any indication, indeed much lies ahead for Jerry in the future to help round out a highly successful life.

JERRY PLUM

DOUGLAS R. POWELL

"Boog" hails from Inglewood, Colorado where he was known for his athletic prowess. He wrestled at the Academy for two years, and could often be seen giving several of his classmates a little wrestling E.I. in the corridors, often at inopportune times. He also participated in various intramural sports and could always be seen giving his best cheering loudly for the team.

Doug was also a hard worker in academics. He majored in engineering with particular emphasis in the nuclear field. His pleasing personality and ear-to-ear grin won him many friends for life. He will be a welcome addition to the Fleet in whatever field he chooses.

NORVALD JARL REPPEN JR.

Jary, better known to his friends as Reps, could well be described as a bright spot in the life at Bancroft. His innate good-naturedness, sense of humor and outgoing personality brightened the darkest of Dark Ages for many of his contemporaries. Thinking of Reps, one cannot help but bring back to mind the phrase "He was born with a sense of laughter and that the world was mad." He entered the hallowed halls of Bancroft after graduating—with moderate distinction—from high school in Dallas, Texas. Impressed at first sight by the Academy, he decided he should excel in some field of endeavor. Discarding the idea of being "Anchor Man" after extensive research, and limiting his athletic career to his favorite sport of rugby, he decided on excellence in a field outside the academic-athletic realm. He was extremely successful in being a jovial, congenial, witty, and terribly friendly person. Reps will always be remembered for his misplacing "Bill the Goat" at the Cotton Bowl game and for his reluctance to separate with his class pin. The future should be waiting for him with open hands and plenty of success.

TWELFTH COMPANY

GARY LANCE REZEAU

Gary came to the Severn's shores from Park Ridge, Illinois, with a keen interest in naval aviation and a fine academic background, which he received at Maine Township High School East. This enabled him to validate three first year courses and also qualify for Superintendent's List. While here, in addition to finding much time for books, Gary took part in the amateur radio club, gun club, and a variety of intramural sports.

Always willing to help out those with a problem, Gary will best be remembered for his friendly and pleasant manner. Be it air, surface, or submarines, whatever branch of the Navy Gary makes his career, the Navy will receive a fine man and a hard worker.

Dave came to the shores of the Severn with the blessings of Baltimore Polytechnic Institute. Baltimore has good reason to be proud, for as outstanding as Dave was in scholastics and sports while in high school, he continued to do quite well during his years as a midshipman. An outstanding student, having a major in mechanical engineering and nuclear physics, he quite often discovered his name on the Superintendent's List. Dave's devoted interest to brigade activities and studies never precluded his giving a hand to any classmate in need of extra help. He is envied by all for his carefree attitude and his charming personality. Dave is certain to excel in anything that he attempts after graduation.

DAVID HOWARD SHIPLEY

ARNE PAUL SODERMAN

The shores of the Hudson have produced one of the most likable and colorful figures ever to sail the Severn. His easy going and friendly ways have established him as a leader among his classmates as well as the life of every party he attends. Due to ill-timed encounters with the Executive Dept. the pride of New Hamburg, N. Y. is only an occasional member of the Supt's List but he is always willing and able to assist those in academic trouble. Arne's athletic talents are welcomed by his company basketball and softball teams. He is a self-confessed Bernard Baruch but has nothing but a stack of old Wall Street Journals and his confession to show for it. With his offhand manner and quick wit, Arne is bound to be a great success in the service.

JOHN MICHAEL SZUBSKI

Marshall, or Mike as he is known to his friends, came to the Naval Academy two years after graduating from Moultrie High School in his hometown of Mt. Pleasant, South Carolina. His preparation for the Academy included six months in the Marine Corps and attendance at the College of Charleston and Millard Prep School in Oregon. Mike had no trouble getting through plebe year and made many friends due to his friendliness and keen sense of humor. During third and second-class years, Mike's fun loving personality blossomed as he became an active participant in many parties and pranks with his classmates and, while a few of these escapades cost him a considerable number of weekends restricting and countless demerits, he has been able to use the extra time pursuing his high academic standards. Besides the knack for getting into trouble, Mike is a gifted athlete and has contributed greatly to both company and battalion sports. Because of his friendliness and casual manner, Mike will most certainly liven up any outfit to which he is sent.

"Szups" came to the Academy from his home in Garfield Heights, Ohio, and Cleveland's Benedictine High School, with a definite desire to associate himself with the sea and ships, which he has not lost during his four years at the Ensign Factory. Although John participated in sports along with everyone else, and had an especial liking for Water Polo, it was not in the realm of athletic endeavour that he left his mark. Every fall, his football posters, urging us to beat our various opponents, emblazoned the trees around the Yard. As well as being a skilled artist, "Ivan" is a connoisseur of fine music, and one can be fairly sure that the Chopin echoing throughout the Hall is emanating from the home of the Tall Pole.

Very active in the Newman Club and in the Naval Academy Sodality, John is a thinker and has refused to allow himself to be stereotyped. He always searches for reasons behind anything he does, and as a result, is one of the few Midshipmen who can claim to understand the "system." His ability to see the "big picture", his knack for knowing the important and not worrying over the insignificant, as well as a deep-seated dedication to God and Country all combine to make him a definite asset to the Navy.

MARSHALL JACKSON WILKES

FRANCIS EDWARD WILSON

Known affectionately as "the old man" among classmates, it was with good reason as Frank was one of the "oldest" members of the class. Born in nearby Baltimore, he quit Baltimore Poly at the end of the Sophomore year and entered the Navy in search of adventure. After three and one-half years and advancement to second class IC electrician, he decided to become a career officer so he attended NAPS and became a midshipman at USNA. After early struggles with academics due to his long absence from them, Frank became a member of the Supt.'s List during second class year. He participated in company squash, soccer, and softball and his enthusiasm was a valuable asset to the teams. He maintained special interests in Rhode Island and frequently headed north for leaves and weekends. With his ability to instantly make friends with everyone and his natural leadership talents, Frank will be a highly successful officer.

THIRD BATTALION

Jim came to USNA after three years at Texas A&I located in Kingsville, Texas, his hometown. Academy academics were never any problem to Jim being a Supt's lister ever since plebe year. The pursuit of math, physics, and nuclear science majors wouldn't leave too many people time for extracurricular activities but Jim was a member of the Trident Society and was also a debater. Jim, a true Texan, had a smile for everyone and if he wasn't whistling some of Slim Whitman's country style music, he was singing Johnny Cash's latest hit. Jim kept everyone guessing how he obtained so many local telephone numbers. Almost every week-end he was dragging some new, cute little Annapolis school teacher. Jim's ambition and endless store of energy will insure him success in whichever branch of the service he selects.

JAMES EVANS COLEMAN

DAVID W. DRIVER

From a small clearing in the woodlands of upstate New York came a huge bundle of talent by the name of David Driver. His fine high school record both in athletics and academics paved the way for what Dave had expected to be four years of leading the brigade. Since the books had never presented much of a challenge to Dave, most of his free time was spent in pursuits of higher types of activity; the pad. As he had been a high school All-Star quarterback Dave decided to try his luck on the gridiron at Navy but was waylaid on the way to the field and spent the next four years rowing a boat up the Severn. Beside his many days on the river Dave also found time to participate in Company sports, run the traditional football pools, play cards, harass the first class and maintain his "star" academic average.

PHILIP ROBERT ELDER

Hailing from Valdosta, Georgia, Bob and his southern drawl came to us after one year of mellowing at Georgia Tech. Always on top in a crowd, Bob's lanky six foot four frame could always be seen as the focal point of all manner of strange and stirring yodels be it party, football game, or manning a port oar in a Navy heavy-weight crew shell. Bob was always so full of spirit that he never failed to instill a spark into his comrades whether they were on top or far behind. He often said that he got the greatest satisfaction from being the underdog coming up than from being on top all the time. Bob's determination and good character are sure to see him through to any goal he might set.

Andy arrived at the Academy after attending George Washington University for a year that was used as a stepping stone to follow his father, a 1932 graduate of the Academy. During plebe year Andy contributed to the success of the swimming team, but since then he has been using these talents mainly on the beaches of California. Throughout his four years at the Academy, the winters found Andy snagging passes for the company lightweight football team while the springs saw him roaming the outfield for the softball team. His desire to excel on the athletic field naturally carried over into academics where his efforts were equally successful. In his spare time he helped edit the Reef Points of the Class of 1966 and also was a member of the Lucky Bag staff. Andy will undoubtedly be a successful career officer in whichever Service is fortunate enough to gain his talents.

ANDREW WILSON FAHY

ROGER F. FASTING

After spending 18 years in the heart of Brooklyn, and two at the University of Rhode Island, Rog decided to give his talents to Navy for four years. Despite a few problems with the rigors of plebe year, he found things more to his liking with the opening of basketball season. After starring for Erasmus Hall High School in Brooklyn and the Rhode Island freshman team, Fast quickly broke into the starting five on the plebe team, combining excellent playmaking with some high scoring throughout the year. The coming of youngster year found Rog's thoughts drifting towards the pad and a deck of cards, both of which he quickly mastered. Never one to have any trouble with academics, he continued to give his athletic talents on the intramural fields, being one of the top softball pitchers in the Brigade. His happy-go-lucky attitude and sharp intellect are sure to bring him success in the Fleet upon graduation.

CHARLES HYLAND FEHRS

Chuck hails from Wolcott, Connecticut, a not too small town of several thousand in the heart of beautiful New England. At least he thinks it's beautiful because he has never been west of eastern Pennsylvania. Chuck came here directly from Wilby High School, where he was affectionately known as "Chuck". Here at the academy he has picked up several other nicknames, and no one really knows how to pronounce his last name even as short as it is. Now he is not even sure. But most of the time he is known as "Charlie", which reflects upon his characteristic good naturedness that has won him many friends. He has a remarkable quality for getting along with people and everyone enjoys his company. Chuck has a strong will to work, and, despite the efforts of the navigation department, has plotted his course for an exciting and rewarding career. He is truly a responsible and dedicated person and will contribute a great amount of enthusiasm to any endeavor he undertakes.

THIRD BATTALION

MICHAEL ROY GOODWIN

Mike entered the gates of U.S.N.A. after an auspicious career at Paragould High School, Paragould, Arkansas. While there, Mike lettered in both football and track and, with this as a background Michael soon became an outstanding participant in the Brigade intramural program. Mike soon mastered the mysteries which pour forth from the academic departments here at "Canoe U." and, after weathering the storms of plebe year, he assumed the role of a full fledged "youngster" by taking advantage of the dragging privileges which came with his new stripe. While on Third Class cruise Mike was exposed to the "Greyhounds of the Fleet", destroyers, and he was definitely impressed by the way of life. With this as a goal and, with Mike's innate ability to "get the job done" he is certain to be an outstanding member of the Navy and a credit to the ship he will serve.

Bill came to the Naval Academy from Central Bucks High School in Doylestown, Pennsylvania where he was President of the Senior Class. With him he brought a sparkling personality, an excellent attitude, and a well rounded athletic ability. He participated in Plebe soccer and Plebe tennis. Later he used his talents extremely well in company softball and battalion tennis. Bill's favorite subjects were those that dealt with people—in fact he was always at his best when it came to dealing with people. He was ready for a friendly chat or to help anyone at any time. His sharp personal appearance and helpfulness won the admiration and respect of all those who knew him. His cheerful voice and smiling face helped brighten many drab days. When the weekend rolled around, Bill could always be seen dragging his favorite girl. Success will come easily for someone as outstanding as he.

WILLIAM LEWIS GSAND III

LEON FLEMING KING JR.

Many an evening would find the halls of Bancroft ringing with that boisterous laugh which distinguished its southern owner. Born in Virginia and raised in Alabama and Louisiana, Leon, or Lee, as he is known to some, spent his high school days at Fortier High in New Orleans. After one year at Tulane, Leon enlisted in the Navy. Two years later he was at NAPS, preparing to enter the Academy in the summer of 1961. Being an "old salt", Leon found that he could devote most of his time to academic work, with the result that his name on the Superintendent's List has been a familiar sight to all. With his natural ability in sports, Leon fit in well with the sports program, and almost any afternoon could find him putting his lacrosse stick to good use or, as befits his slow, easy-going nature, in the rack. It is this same easy-going nature, along with his sincere interest in others which has won Leon many friends and will continue to do so in whatever career he decides upon.

JOSEPH JOHN KLOCZEK

To begin his Navy career with Plebe Summer, Joe had to arrive at Navy two days before his graduation from Richmond Hill High School. Always able to keep ahead of academic pitfalls, he turned to other activities. An increasing interest in skin-diving led him to the Navy's Underwater Swimmer School at Key West, and finally all the way to president of the USNA Scuba Club. Other interests kept Joe busy, too. Many an afternoon would find him at the helm of a Luders yawl on the Chesapeake. His knowledge of poster design helped him become the vice-president of the Brigade Art and Printing Club. In addition to these activities, he also found time to participate in such intramural sports as cross country, squash, volley ball, and gymnastics. Joe's plans for the future include much time underwater via the Nuclear Power Program or UDT. When he joins the Fleet, Joe will be continuing a fine service record and we can all be sure that the Navy is receiving a well rounded contribution to its officer corps.

Boyd, an Air Force junior, decided early that the ocean's deep had more to offer than the Wild Blue Yonder. He has settled down considerably since his earlier years as the international playboy of two continents. As a matter of fact, he collected $25.00 from some of his friends who felt he would never adjust to the staid and stoic life of the Naval School. Boyd's loss to the civic, social and sports world of Wiesbaden High School in Germany has been a welcome addition to our Company and Battalion teams, especially Heavyweight Football and Track. Monday evenings found him practicing with the Antiphonal Choir and his last two years were spent on the Working Honor Committee. Boyd was never one to be caught short on sleep, yet his frequent appearance on the Superintendent's List indicates that he seldom neglected his studies. Boyd's sense of humor and friendly nature will make him popular in any wardroom and his competence and ability will insure confidence on many a bridge.

BOYD KENYON KNOWLES

LAWRENCE JOSEPH MACK

Larry, known to various groups in the Academy as "Butch", or "Lenny", came to Annapolis by way of Morton High School in Cicero, Illinois. At Morton, Larry had achieved an enviable record in football, basketball, and baseball, and even made the pages of "Sports Illustrated." During Plebe Football season, he suffered a serious shoulder injury which could have ended his athletic career. However, through determination, he worked his way back to earn berths on the varsity baseball and basketball teams. He was also elected captain of the basketball team First Class year. Larry also established an outstanding record in academics, particularly in math, and his name was frequently found on the Superintendent's List. Larry will be remembered for his fine sense of humor and jovial personality. He will be a welcome addition to whichever branch of the Naval Service he chooses.

THIRTEENTH COMPANY

THIRD BATTALION

George hails from Pittsburgh, Pa. where he attended Knoch High School. An outstanding student and athlete while he was in High School, George had no difficulty in adjusting to the life of a Midshipman. It was apparent from the beginning that the Sciences were his favorite and George plans to use this knowledge to become a part of the Nuclear Powered Navy. George was strictly a Company sports man where he excelled in many, among those were football, softball, volleyball and bridge. Although very popular with the other sex George seems to have been caught and a June marriage may be in the cards. George has been a great help to all in academic trouble and it will be this willingness to help and work that will make him a fine officer and gentleman in future years.

GEORGE T. McLAUGHLIN

KENNETH KINARD MILES

Having been raised in the true tradition of the military way of life, Ken has had many homes during his early years. He has a well known preference for the west and now resides in a picturesque Danish town in sunny California. Having developed a sharp sense of humor, it has been put to good use during the past four years. Never one to let any situation get the better of him, Ken has proven himself in every phase of academy life which is due largely to the easy-going manner that has always been his way. An avid sportsman, western music lover, and a great companion, Ken has made many lasting friendships during his stay on the Severn. His sparkling personality and enthusiasm will make him a fine addition to the field of his choice.

EDWARD ANDREW ORR

Skip came to the Naval Academy from Chaminade High School, Wantagh, L. I., N.Y., where he was an outstanding scholar and athlete. During plebe year Skip played football, basketball, and baseball, but later dropped basketball in favor of company sports. When the 1963 football season opened, Skip was Navy's #1 flankerback and later he set a Cotton Bowl record for number of passes caught in the New Year's classic. During the baseball season he was found out in left-field. Skip was also our class secretary. When he wasn't at classes or playing sports, he was found either with Roger Staubach or sound asleep in the pad. Skip wasn't very friendly with the steam department plebe year, but he overcame his problems and year after year his academic average rose steadily. He was always in "slash" bull sections. Skip will always be a welcome member of any ship's wardroom. He will be a success in which ever branch of the Navy he chooses.

JAMES FRANCIS SAVARD JR.

Jim came to the Academy from Bayonne, New Jersey, after a year's stay at Columbia University. Jim quickly found his place in the sports program of the Academy, lettering in basketball during plebe year. After weathering the ravages of plebe year, Jim quickly slid into the role of being a youngster. Finding the intramural program to his liking, he became known as one of the best backcourt men in the Brigade. Jim always stayed at least one jump ahead of the academic departments, so he never seemed to let this worry him. He could always be found on the athletic field, asleep, or in the company of a young lady. His out-going personality and sharp wit made him well-known through-out the Brigade. Jim hopes to fly in Marine green after graduation.

Fred, the original Tennessee Rebel, came to the Naval Academy immediately after graduation from McCallie School in Chattanooga, Tennessee. Armed with a supply of Country and Western music and a long list of young ladies, he quickly and easily made the transition from civilian to midshipman. Fred kept track of his favorite sport, swimming, by being team manager for four years, and when he wasn't working with the swimming team he was avidly supporting the other varsity sports. Though he always stayed well ahead of the academic departments, Fred never allowed himself to fall behind in either dragging or spending time on the Big Blue Trampoline. With a friendly smile and a helping hand, Fred was always willing to do that little bit extra to help a classmate whenever he had the opportunity. His easy going style, open personality, and natural ability will make Fred an asset to the Navy and the country it serves.

FREDERICK CHARLES SCHLEMMER II

WALTER MICHAEL TEICHGRABER

Walt expected many things that summer he arrived but not nearly what he experienced. Plebe year was definitely a change from his high school days at South Hills Catholic in Pittsburgh, but adjustment was swift though not always pleasant. Walt brought with him a love for sports, especially basketball, and he could be found on the courts at any time during the year. Closely competing with basketball for his free time was his ever present desire to tinker with his stereo system. Almost any night would find him either recording or at least cleaning, rebuilding, or rewiring his tape recorder. Even with this drain on his time, Walt always seemed to find room for studies. His name was no infrequent addition to the Superintendent's List and he sported academic stars his last two years. Never one to let liberty pass him by, Walt used every available weekend as if it were his last. His genial nature and natural ability will be a welcome addition to any wardroom.

THIRTEENTH COMPANY

HUGH LLOYD THOMPSON JR.

Hugh grew up and spent his high school years in Alexander City, Alabama. He entered the Academy following a year at the Bolles School in Jacksonville, Florida. Throughout his years at the Academy, he has shown a readiness to assume major responsibilities and the ability to handle them well. He has served both on the Plebe, and later, on the Brigade Hop Committee; has been a member of the Antiphonal Choir and has frequently appeared on the Superintendent's List. Having been elected to the office of Class Treasurer, Hugh became qualified to represent his class on the Brigade Honor Committee. Hugh's drive and perseverance as well as his good natured and generous personality make him an asset to any organization.

HALL BRADLEY WESSINGER JR.

'Wes' set sail for USNA right after graduation from Luther Stark High School in Orange, Texas, the last of the secondary schools he attended in his coast-to-coast travels as a Navy Jr.

At Canoe U. Hall set his sights on academics; his superior academic record established him as the man to turn to for the gouge on most any academic problem. The only other things that interrupted his study hour were his frequent trips to the gedunk machines.

In his leisure time Wes was always ready, willing and able to do most everything; not only was he able to excel in anything from chess to football, but he really showed his stuff when it came to chasing skirts. Also, if there was nothing else to do, he could sleep sounder and longer than anyone around.

Wes' cool, quiet, confident manner combined with a ready wit has earned him many friends and can't help but to see him through a very successful career.

CHARLES W. ZSCHOCK

Chuck seems to have lived everywhere before he arrived at the Naval Academy, starting at his birthplace—Berlin, Germany, and ending at present in Cleveland, Ohio. He's a fine athlete with an amazing versatility which keeps him busy every afternoon throughout the year. He rowed plebe crew, but decided to spend his last three years concentrating on soccer and track, where his interest in physical fitness has certainly paid off. Off the athletic field Chuck's main interests have been listening to fine music, beautiful women and foreign languages. He has a major in German and speaks French. His interest in languages has been carried over to the foreign language clubs where he has served as secretary, vice-president, and president of the German Club as well as president of the combined foreign languages clubs his senior year. Part of his contribution to the German Club has been the originating of a lively German language radio show, broadcast regularly by him over WRNV. Wherever Chuck heads in the Navy, his fighting spirit, determination, and fine sense of personal honor are going to make him an outstanding member of the Navy team.

THIRD BATTALION

It did not take Dave too long to settle down and make himself known here at Navy. A hard worker he had no trouble keeping ahead of the Academic Department. Full of energy, between his own weight lifting program, he could always be counted on to come through with a goal in the Co. Soccer game. He was a mainstay on the Co. Fieldball defensive team, and his powerful bat kept the opposing team's outfield on their toes, on the softball field. His artistic ability and imagination made him a natural for our Co. Brigade Activity Committee Rep. Always one to make friends and take responsibility Dave or "Ster" as the gang calls him has set a solid foundation for his naval career.

DAVID WILEY ANDERSON

MERRICK BAYER JR.

After three years at Texas A&M, Merrick decided that the Naval Academy was the place for him. His college years stood him in good stead academically, and enabled him to devote his time to more important things. A member of the lightweight crew for three years, Merricks, athletic abilities included football and cross country. In his free time, Merrick dreamed up new ways of improving the program and always took an active part in group discussions. Strangely enough his return from Youngster Cruise found him full of raves for the destroyer life and a true love for the sea. His first love was never lost, though, since from the first day Merrick had aspired to become one of those Navy hot-shots with wings on their chests. If he continues his competent work and determined effort in the future, as he surely will, he will always be a success.

BROOKES McINTOSH BENDETSEN

Brookes, known to his friends and classmates as Benny, came to Annapolis from scenic southwestern Washington. After the frustrations of plebe year, Benny entered youngster year with a twofold purpose—to continue studying hard and to catch up on the relaxation he had missed during plebe year. Studying at night and lifting weights in the afternoon took up most of his free time during the week. Weekends found him catching rays, going to the movies, or most often showing some cute girl around historic Crabtown. Second Class summer fostered an interest in aviation and the sunny Florida beaches. Benny is usually the first one to grab the paper in the morning to check the latest news from Wall Street. With his major in International Relations and his strong will to succeed backed up by his good sense of humor, Brookes will most likely make his presence known in whatever he undertakes.

Doyle calls Clifton, Texas, home and talks of retiring to Central Texas someday. The entire year he could be found working out at Hubbard Hall for crew. When he was not watching his weight for a race he was always ready to find some chow or have a coke. Doyle had a special weakness for frozen custard from the Steerage. He was always friendly and ready to shoot the breeze. Many times he was the target of jokes, but managed to take them just the same. If guitar music was available Doyle would listen to it on the Hi-Fi or radio. When he was not around for Sunday night study hour inspection there was no worry—Doyle was a regular at NACA. At one time destroyers looked mighty good to him but Airtramid helped convert Doyle to Navy Air.

DOYLE JOHN BORCHERS II

Bill and his jovial personality have provided many bright moments in our stay here. Whenever you were down in the dumps, "Squirrel", could be counted on to come up with some Newark, Delaware, cheer for you. His early-developed desire to attend the Academy showed up in his dedication to his work. He applied his time wisely in the pursuit of academic achievement, and usually obtained any goal he set. Amid this work he still found time to take an active part in intramural soccer, fieldball, and softball, and any other Company project going on at that time. During Plebe year Bill gained the reputation of one who could be depended on. Bill's dedication to anything he begins will carry him far in life.

A. WILLIAM BOWER III

After graduating from high school, where Gordon's main interest was football, he came directly to the Naval Academy to begin his career as a naval officer. Gordon's love for leave, the pad, and rainy p-rade days, made the four long years seem short. Academics were never a problem and Gordon proved to be a valuable source of extra instruction for many a classmate. If there was a bridge game being played, you could easily find him there on weekends or even during the week. Gordon's cheerful outlook on life will serve him well after graduation as he carries the blue and gold of the Academy to the fleet.

GORDON RAY CHUBBUCK

GORDON CLARKE JR.

Gordy or "TROLL" as he is known to his close friends entered the Academy from Olney high school in Philadelphia after a year of partying at Columbian Prep. Always conscientious in his studies, Gordy still managed to log his share of hours in the pad. Gordy put himself on a diligent five day a week weight program when he entered the Academy and the benefits of this program were apparent from his actions on the athletic field. Gordy has a tremendous interest in all phases of the service as is shown by his participation in the voluntary summer airborne program. His easygoing nature and open friendliness will win him many new friends in the future as well as the respect of the men who serve under him.

FOURTEENTH COMPANY

CORNELIUS R. DUARTE

"Neil", as he is affectionately known by his friends, hails from one of the most beautiful cities in the country, New Orleans. There he spent his youth in typical Southern tradition before migrating to the Shores of the Severn. Never one to let work completely interfere with pleasure, Neil is an avid horseracing fan and can always be counted on for a friendly word of advice in that direction.

Having attended Loyola University in New Orleans for a year, Neil never found academics much of a problem. After a shot at Plebe baseball, Neil's athletic endeavours ranged from the weight room to company football, where he was outstanding. A scintillating personality, Neil's smile and friendly word make him a favorite in the Brigade. His dedication to the service provides him with a fine basis for a successful career.

Joe came to U.S.N.A. after four years of high school in Sayre, Pennsylvania, and one year at Columbian Prep. He seemed to be a natural from the start, except for his occasional run-ins with the academic departments. His high standard of personal appearance and his military manner were imitated by all. Joe was undoubtedly the toughest field ball player in his company, leading his team to many successful seasons. Yes, Joe was a hard worker, but he did find time to listen to good music and to drag occasionally. At parties there were never any dull moments if Joe was present. With his serious attitude about his chosen profession, his determination, and his quick on-the-spot humor, Joe is destined for success.

JOSEPH EDWARD FALTISCO

WILLIAM DENNIS FRAHER III

Bill came to USNA from the deepest state in the sunny South. The winters at Navy were a little cold for him at first, but as the old saying goes, "you can't keep a good man down." He excelled in academics and could always be called upon for help by those who were less fortunate than himself. If a joke was being pulled you could always bet that Bill had something to do with it. On the weekend you could always count on him to be ready to go out for a good time, that is if he didn't already have a drag, although he usually did. With his brains and personality Bill will succeed in any endeavor he chooses after graduation.

GEORGE ALAN KENT

George came to the Naval Academy with a dual purpose in mind. First of all he decided to get the very best education available at the Academy and then use this towards becoming a career officer. Nothing has stood in his way as the first of his goals nears completion and he begins his pursuit of the second. Gak will long be remembered for his participation in intramural soccer, cross country, football, and softball. His classmates will long be indebted for the many hours that George took to give aid to any and all in academic difficulty. The Skinny department will remember "Old #1" because he could show them how to work the homework problems. The Weapons Department has finally conceded that the only difference between Gak and a computer is that a computer sometimes makes mistakes. His hometown of Ithaca, New York, can rest assured that it has made a substantial contribution to the security of our nation.

GORDON MATHER RIDDICK JR.

Though Gordon never quite managed to defeat the Academic Departments, he was always in there trying. Fresh from St. Louis High School in Honolulu, the Kahuna (surf leader) fully expected to make the Navy surfing team, but settled instead for the trampoline squad. Between studies Gordon was active in both batt and company intramurals, usually favoring handball. When not indulging in sports or studies you could count on him for opinions and information in the many earth shaking discussions in the hall. His good nature and winning personality added greatly to the company morale. With these attributes Gordon will doubtlessly make a fine officer.

FREDERICK S. ROWE III

Fred arrived here at the Naval Academy after a very successful four years at Bloomfield High School, where he graduated at the top of his class. Here at Navy academics posed no problem, and Fred spent a minimum of time studying and a maximum sleeping. Despite his spending a minimum amount of time studying, he learned his lessons well and was a frequent member of the Superintendent's List. Not one to let academics interfere with a good bull session, Fred spent many evenings engaged in conversations dealing with almost any conceivable topic. Besides his academic achievements, Fred was a standout in both handball and squash and could be found almost any afternoon taking on any and all challengers in either sport. A fine career awaits Fred in whatever branch of the Naval service he chooses.

THIRD BATTALION

Jay had little trouble transcending the bridge between civilian and military life. Not being one to let the world go by without him, Jay could always be found making the best of any situation which became a tremendous asset throughout his four years on the Severn. Little free time was available to Jay during the week due to a busy schedule of extracurricular activities which included basketball manager, French Club, and reception committee. Academics not being any particular problem gave him the opportunity to close the books on the weekends and devote full time to one of his many diversions such as dragging, sailing, or some other aspect of the finer things in life. Jay's easygoing manner and pleasant personality have won him many friends and will continue to do so in the future.

JAY WOODROW SPRAGUE

LAWRENCE L. STEWART

A confirmed Texan from Houston, Larry set sail for the Academy in the summer of 1961. After just completing a year at Texas A&M the rigors of Navy life as a Plebe were not a shock to him.

Larry's first love is his rifle shooting. His straight shooting anchored him a spot on the Varsity rifle team, and he helped the Navy bring home laurels time after time in rifle matches. When the Gun Club became active again Larry was very prominent in its reorganization and became its treasurer. If Larry was not shooting he was out looking around for a new "shooting-iron", and if Uncle Sam ever needs any support, he will be able to call on Larry and his ever ready arsenal.

Larry also has a very definite professional interest in the Navy, and he evidenced this in his interesting articles in our Trident magazine. Whatever Larry does in the fleet, he will do well and will be of real service to his country.

JAMES LOUIS TAYLOR

Jim entered the confines of Mother Bancroft after attending Lima High School in Lima, Ohio, where he was chosen to be on the All-American Swimming Team. After spending most of two years on the Plebe and Varsity Swimming Teams, missing a Varsity letter in his youngster year by only one point, Jim sacrificed swimming so he could keep his Supt.'s List average and also aid greatly the Company sports of soccer, lightweight football, and volleyball, being a mainstay and a real hustler on each team. He participated for four years in the Catholic Choir and the Academy's Glee Club. Jim's always kept busy here at USNAY whether it be playing bridge, reading, playing in all the sports he possibly could, or just clowning around with his many friends. Blonde, blue-eyed, and fair skinned he is usually referred to as CHERUB or just plain RUB by the gang in the hall. With a Bull Major, a great personality, and congeniality that will win him many more friends, Jim will be a real asset to the service.

FREDERICK JOHN VOGEL

A hometown of Norfolk, though land-locked, could hardly have influenced "Wags" to any career other than Navy. After a year at the University of Nebraska, where he sparked the NROTC Rifle Team, Jim came east bringing along his keen eye for our rifle team as well as an insatiable curiosity for anything that runs, either on four wheels or electricity. If ever anything needed fixing Wags was the man to see. Always a slush in the academic departments, Jim did equally well with the femmes as he seemed always to be trying to extricate himself from the terrible dilemma of choosing the girl to whom he should show the greatest interest. Slashing the athletics as well, Jim's fine performance in softball and soccer carried many a game to a successful finish. Always the man with the quick smile and willingness to help a classmate in difficulty Jim will be remembered as one of the stanchions of the "terrible tenth". Shunning water as an odious element fit only for fish, Jim has his sights set on Navy Air's finest.

A native of Crabtown, Fred became aware of the existence of "Canoe U." at an early age. After a year at Purdue, where he planned to take up electrical engineering, he "graduated" to his four years of "varsity" study. At the Academy he changed his major to foreign languages, choosing French as his specialty. Shunning steam and skinny as black magic he would much rather study the effects of the blue trampoline upon a person's disposition. Almost any free period during the day one could find Fred compiling data on the subject. Besides surprises received from unexpected relocations of his home address, Fred enjoys participating in athletics, particularly soccer, lacrosse, and swimming. His summers spent in survival school, airborne, and scuba training should prove to be worth-while to Fred in his chosen service.

JAMES AUBREY WAGNER

GLEN ALDEN WEEKS

Born and raised on the shores of San Francisco Bay, Glen spent a year as an NROTC at Cal before deciding that the Navy was for him. Trading the Blue and Gold of the Golden Bears for the Blue and Gold of the "Navy Factory" he traveled East to the shores of the Chesapeake. He lists Batt Crew, tennis, and swimming as his favorite sports, but, never one to let physical exertion interfere with good health, he spent many hours with slope zero. A "Bull" major; both officially and in the many after hours sessions in old Mother B., he survived a plebe year spent mostly on the unsat list in Math and Dago and went on to wear stars. You might never know it, but down deep Glen is very dedicated, and few can match his knowledge of the Navy and its traditions. Never really daunted by the vagaries of the academic departments, despite his policy of sleep now—study later, Glen, however, never really learned to fathom the "system". But then he says that any system is bearable if you can ignore it. Glen desires to become a member of "Hymie's Navy" and it is sure that his interest, drive and ability will make him a welcome addition to the Silent Service.

THIRD BATTALION

"Herbie" came to the academy from Fayetteville Senior High with a real interest in sports and a genuine good nature that has made him very popular with his classmates. Here he sailed for two years, made a name for himself in volleyball, and generally worked hard for the company sports program. With his drawl, he really impressed the foreign language department with "Southern type" Spanish. On his weekends Herb managed to get a great deal of enjoyment and travel packed into those short 24 hours, with just enough planning to arrive back at the academy with a big smile and 15 short minutes before formation. In the future we are sure that the same good qualities of fairness, good leadership, and interest will always be a part of his endeavors.

HERBERT BATEMAN WILLIAMS

CHARLES MILLS WOOD III

The day has finally arrived when this man's real identity can be disclosed. We who have known him as "C.M." can now reveal to the world that his real name is Charles Mills, that he hails from Providence, Kentucky, and that he was born on a bright day in May, 1943. His military career reportedly started behind the gray walls of McCallie School, where he took his first dive into the cold rigors of military discipline, long before he came to the Naval Academy. C. M. is an excellent friend, a dynamic organizer who always finds time for everything and everybody, and a successful leader of men. In addition to his academic majors in Mathematics and Nuclear Science, he has managed to do well in many unrelated fields. He has been a success as President of the French Club, as a sportsman, in his Sunday School activities, and, last but not least, as a miniature Casanova. C. M. is well known in this latter field because of his uncanny ability to charm the femmes, to keep their names straight, and to handle several different dates on the same day without starting crises of major proportions. We who know him well are certain that he will be a very fine, well-rounded officer, bound to succeed in every activity of his choice.

JOHN WILEY WROTEN JR.

"Wrotund", the pride of Winnfield, Louisiana, came to USNA after a year of studies at Louisiana Tech. Perhaps his greatest problem was making weight for the Company lightweight football team; he managed to avoid this in the Spring and Fall by engaging in Squash, Volleyball and softball. After a two year battle with the Dago Department, John was able to find out what a weekend is really for. His Southern charm has taken him through many close situations at USNA. His natural leadership abilities and Academic achievements have made him a valuable member of the Class of '65. The future should only hold a continuation of the luck of one who spent both Midshipman Cruises on a CVA.

ERNEST A. ALCIVAR

The lights burned late many a night in the seventh wing as this ambitious, conscientious, and hard-working man applied himself to his labors. During his sojourn at the Naval Academy Ernie's perpetual curiosity and keen mind never let him rest. Not content with his stars and his stripes, his research on rocket motor testing and instrumentation earned for him a sizeable grant from the Bureau of Weapons, and his contribution to the Weapons Department will long be remembered. Ernie's interests extend beyond the confines of the Computer Lab, however. During his cruise aboard the Coast Guard's Eagle youngster summer he established his reputation as a lady's man, and the conquests of Ernest Alcivar made him a legend among his shipmates. The day this tri-lingual prodigy settles down, female hearts will be shattered on three continents. It is with great regret that we will see him return to his native Ecuador; our loss is South America's gain. He will long be remembered by all with whom he came in contact as one of the outstanding members of his class.

After finishing second in his high school class in Morocco, Indiana, Herb achieved his goal of going to the Naval Academy. His assets of blond hair and blue eyes blended well with his friendly personality. At the Academy Herb has done very well in academics, having been on the Superintendent's List, and was a good competitor on the sports field. Herb's extracurricular activities consisted of playing French horn in the concert band, being a member of the popular "Salvation Army" band, listening to good music, and dragging—especially at away football games. Back home in Indiana Herb's main interest was raising his "Silver Cattle with the Golden Future." Herb, usually displaying a congenial attitude, should do well after graduation.

HERBERT EUGENE BARNETT JR.

FREDERICK MORGAN BERTHRONG

After making the strenuous journey from Great Falls, Virginia, Fred settled down to the life of a Midshipman with energy and initiative. With academics always in the fore, his interests ranged widely from wrestling to submarines; and, in any spare moment, he could always be found in the weight room. His loyalty and gregarious manner made him very popular with his classmates and soon earned him the name of "Throng." His academic efforts did not go for vain as his name could always be found on the Superintendent's List. Although never having wrestled previously, Fred soon discovered his favorite sport in the wrestling loft of Macdonough Hall. In whatever the future holds, Fred will always prove himself a credit to the Navy.

John came to us from the Land of Lincoln directly from high school. Even before he got to the Naval Academy though. John was a professional photographer, and the loss to the photographer's profession was a gain to the Naval Academy. He was to prove to be one of the most qualified and able photographers and organizers that the journalistic world at the Academy had seen. John held the most responsible positions of Photography Editor of the Log, the Splinter, and our own '65 Lucky Bag. He was also the official photographer for the Naval Academy FAC, but he will be most appreciated for his work at football games, special events, and around the Yard. In fact much of this Lucky Bag would have been impossible without John.

Not one to slough off in any field, John was a stud in Batt, crew and gymnastics and hit the books hard to keep his grades up. Yet for all these activities, —journalistic, athletic, and academic, —he was the first one in a gab session and the last to leave. He had the true well-rounded personality.

JOHN G. BLOOMER

ROBBINS ELY BROWN

STEPHEN ROSS BROWN

Rob hails from Falls Church, Virginia, by way of Hawaii, New London, and the Canal Zone. His amazing ability to pull out a passing grade at the last moment left him with plenty of time to pursue outside activities. During Youngster year he utilized this time on the rifle team. He is known widely for his skill at solitaire and his liking for the one-eyed monster. During leave periods, he became one of the all time great chiva dodgers at Canoe U. A master of improvisation, he could jury-rig like Rube Goldberg, which is easily demonstrated by his notorious steam driven tape recorder. His ability to relax in any situation and his talent at turning into a hard worker, once his interest is aroused, insure him a pleasant, useful career, wherever the hands of fate and BUPERS deem he shall go.

WILLIAM ALBERT FRIES

After a year at the University of Nevada, a year with the class of '63 and a year at Cal, Steve made the big step and joined up at good ole USNA with the class of 1965.

Steve graduated from Long Beach Poly in 1958. While at Poly, Steve was a cross-country and tennis stud. However, after coming to BH, he dropped these leisure activities for the challenges of the academic department. Not one to kiss off studies, Steve could be found in his room on many a weekend, when not dragging, and late at night pounding away on his overloads and skinny.

A member of the Masqueraders, Steve made his contribution to drama in Inspector General and The Andersonville Trial. Steve also had other numerous activities such as secretary of the Foreign Relations Club, glee club, antiphonal choir, NAFAC, James Bond thrillers and les jeunes filles.

Steve will always be remembered for his quick wit, his friendly manner and his love for the blue trampoline. With the diligence that he has applied here, Steve should be a success in the big bad world outside the walls.

Coming from southern Florida, Bill graduated from West Palm Beach High in 1960 and went to Palm Beach Junior College for a year before riding the bus up to Annapolis. While at PBJC, Bill won an award for being outstanding in chemistry and this helped keep him out of the skinny department plebe year.

During plebe year, Bill established himself as a leader, scholar and athlete, being one of the standouts on the swimming team. During youngster and second class year, he developed even more prowess in swimming. At the end of second class year, Willy was elected captain of the '65 swimming team.

Bill Fries is truly one of the outstanding members of our class. His ability extends into all areas of a midshipman's life—academics, military and athletics. The thing that impresses one so much about Bill is that he tries hard in everything he does, and most important, succeeds.

Keith hails from the land of sky-blue waters and football—Green Bay, Wisconsin. He came to the Naval Academy directly from High School, bringing with him the same zest for life he had there. He didn't have to worry about the studies, yet his every minute was filled with activity. He was known as the biggest "liberty hound" around, and it was a rare weekend that you found him at the Academy. Many of those weekends were taken up touring the country with the Varsity Debate Team, which he was a member of for three years. Tennis, swimming, and golf were his sports—and if the weather was bad, there was always a good book. Keith was well-liked by his classmates, and was elected his company honor representative. With his natural ability to get along with people and to make things work, his entire life is assured of being happy and rewarding.

KEITH GEORGE HANSFORD

THOMAS E. HARDING JR.

Tom's home address is Washington, D. C., but his hometown is Pawtucket, R. I., where he lived until 1963 and where he claims no one speaks with an accent. He attended St. Raphael's Academy and spent one provocative year at the University of R.I. before settling down to life at the Naval Academy. Since he arrived his main interests have been guns, guitars, women, and eluding the executive department, but he has found time to distinguish himself in the field of sports. Three seasons of the year have been spent on the Ocean Sailing Squadron where he has sailed in both the Newport and Bermuda races and the winter season has been spent breaking records on the varsity pistol team. A few of the honors he holds are the College All-American, Individual Champion, Sectional Champion and the Naval Academy range record in pistol and captain of the team. This year he has led the team in a very distinguished season. Tom's professional knowledge, relaxed personality, and fine personal integrity will make him an outstanding officer and a credit to the Navy.

NEIL MONTGOMERY HENDERSON

Neil was born in British Columbia, Canada, but gave up the land of ice for a home in sunny California. He came straight from high school, to the new status of being a plebe. He maneuvered through this year with a minimum of hardship, due mainly to his participation in sports. Neil's main interest continued to be in sports, and he has lettered in both Varsity Football and Varsity Lacrosse since his youngster year. When he is not on the athletic field or in class, he is usually found in "the pad" reading. An enjoyable life is not always the rule in this hectic world, but he tries hard to be happy whenever possible, while standing up for the things he believes in. A good knowledge of people and life around him insure Neil's success in most any future field.

Chip traveled to Navy by way of Ohio State University. He found little resemblance between the Ohio State NROTC unit and the ways of the Brigade but quickly realized that Mother Bancroft was not the Phi Gam house. The switch from the girls of Ohio to the dragless weekends of Plebe Year was made with more reluctance, but the choice not being his to make, Chip made the best of it. The Spring found Chip on Thompson Field taking his share of firsts in the discus and the rest of the year was spent cheerfully accepting blind dates from his classmates. It took him two years of dubious achievement before he learned to shake the habit. Academics came easily for Chip, so consequently little time was spent on them. Chip's only hard luck came in "shaking". For three years he lived in the top rack, shared the double locker and studied at the worst desk in the room. He also picked up the room's rifles for seven consecutive parade seasons. Chip will be a welcomed member to many a wardroom throughout his career and his quick mind and able leadership will be a great addition to the Naval Service.

CARL MOORE JACKSON

He was born in Green Bay, Wisconsin, but, like many another Navy junior, Jerry finds it difficult to label any one place as "home", having attended about twelve different schools before graduating from St. Louis High School in Honolulu, Hawaii. After arriving at U.S.N.A. on 27 June 1961, he seemed to breeze through academics, —and a major in skinny—with time and energy to spare for a multitude of other activities, including Photography Club, YP Squadron, NAFAC, and women, not necessarily in that order. Much of his time has been devoted to reading, his literary fare tending toward western, mystery, and science fiction writers. Jerry has proved to be a stalwart competitor on the athletic field as well, having contributed his talents to the plebe crew, battalion water polo, and company fieldball teams. After graduation he hopes to go into submarines, with destroyers running a close second. Always ready with a subtle quip or a friendly smile, and his ever-present will to succeed, Jerry undoubtedly will be an asset to the Navy in whatever course he chooses to direct his career.

GERALD PATRICK JOYCE II

RICHARD THOMAS JONES

"Will" originally hailed from Brooklyn, New York, but since then has traveled extensively being a Navy junior. He presently claims California as his home.

"Will" is a very persevering individual who sets high goals for himself and possesses the ability to attain them. Academically he stands in the top ten percent of his class.

Being an avid reader, "Will's" favorite academic subjects lie in the fields of literature and drama. Here at the Academy "Will" has contributed a great deal of time and talent to the Masqueraders, the midshipmen's drama group.

During his leave, "Will" enjoys traveling and gaining an intimate knowledge of different people. On leave during second class summer he and a friend took a bicycle trip through Massachusetts, Vermont and Maine, eventually arriving in Canada. He has plans for excursions in the near future through Scotland, Ireland, Wales and England.

"Will" plans to become a destroyer officer upon graduation. His future will undoubtedly be highlighted by many successes that are the result of his hard work and sincere personality.

WILLIAM BAXTER KIRKLAND III

Dick, more often called "Jones", is Pittsburgh's contribution to the Naval Academy. A well-rounded athlete in high school, Dick competed in plebe wrestling and has subsequently been elected varsity manager for the 1964-65 season. Dick is an astute reader of books in general, detective and Tarzan novels in particular. In addition he has valiantly maintained a no-sweat attitude toward academics. Living in another era, he would have been the typical western gun-fighter, for he maintains an avid interest in collecting and handling firearms. During the summer months he may be found behind a fast-moving boat, since water-skiing is a favorite pastime. With no lack of perseverance, Dick will have no problems achieving any goal that he sets.

Roy, generally known to his many friends as Kip, came to the Academy via Bullis Prep School. A Marine Corps "junior", Roy usually calls Arlington, Va., home and as all good Marine Corps "juniors" do, he has his sights set on the Corps. Easygoing Roy could generally be found with the "Blue Monster" during his apparently endless free periods. But still, the "Blue Monster" could never keep him in during sports time in the afternoons or on weekends. If not in the weight room, he was lending his hard drive to company or battalion sports ranging from squash to boxing. Always claiming to "sweat" academics, Roy still managed to get by quite satisfactorily with a minimum of studying. With his easygoing, friendly nature Roy should never have trouble finding friends or making good in the Corps.

ROY CRUIKSHANK KLINE

LARRY T. LUND

From the farmlands of Bakersfield, California, Larry brought an ever ready smile and an easy going nature. His cheerfulness in the summer transition from farmboy to Mid gained him many new friends and set the pattern for the next four years. Cross Country and Public Relations claimed him that first year but he later became known for his spirit and hard work in football, squash and tennis. Academically Larry did well enough to take occasional overloads in History and Weapons. His ability and interest in German carried past the classroom to the exchanging of letters in German with friends in Europe. The first summer cruise was a trying one, in the attempt to convert Larry into a blue water sailor but the successive summers found him greatly interested in the travel and education in Florida and the Far East. Leave time found him fitted out with hunting and fishing gear in the California hills seriously engaged in the sport of taking it easy. Four years have not dampened Larry's enthusiasm and interest in his classmates and friends. The Navy stands to gain a fine officer with his graduation.

PETER EDWARD O'CONNOR

Unaccustomed as he is to public speaking, Pete always enjoys a good discussion, whatever the topic may be. Friendly and cheerful, his interests range from athletics to politics and back to the Philadelphia Phillies. Pete is active on the Reception Committee where he can put his gift of being able to get along with people and to enjoy any company to good use. His sense of humor and a knowledge of athletics also helps in this activity. The German Club and the Newman Club round out Pete's extracurricular activities. Always on the inside track of rumors and policy change, word has it that he is also a close confidant of the Admiral. Pete is a fine athlete who is an energetic and enthusiastic competitor in his favorite sports, track and basketball.

When Johnny came north from McKenzie, Tennessee, to Annapolis in June of 1961, he was as bewildered by the radical change as the rest of his new classmates. That condition was very temporary, for his smile and ability to laugh at any situation won the favor of any upperclassmen, classmates, or young ladies who happened to be around him. Boxing season would always find Johnny in the basement of MacDonough Hall slugging it out with any and all comers. When back in Mother 'B', he managed to slug the books enough to have his name adorn the Superintendent's list time after time. Boxing and academics were by no means the limit of "Gett's" interests. Sports in general ranked second only to having a party of one kind or another in his non-working hour interests. The future looks bright for John, for his ability to get along with his fellow men, and his acute desire to "get the job done", will carry him over any obstacles that may rise.

JOHN ELLIOTT PADGETT

Andy hails from Brooklyn, New York, all five feet-5 of him, but what he doesn't have in height he makes up in heart and desire. Graduating from Brooklyn Technical High School in 1960, he attended Carnegie Tech a year before coming to the Naval Academy. Smooth sailing has been the description of Andy's academic life. Supporting a math and a science major, his success has often been the reward of his ability to take advantage of every opportunity. On the side, he keeps a watchful eye on professional sports, baseball in particular. He is without a doubt the most valuable representative and public relations man the New York Mets could have.

It is not often that a midshipman injects as much of himself into Academy life as Andy has. A member of the Hop Committee and the Ring Dance Committee, a Lucky Bag Representative, and manager of the 150 lb. football team, he will be remembered as the busy beaver of the Ninth Company; also not to be forgotten are the long hours he spent as a varsity member of the swimming sub squad.

ANDREW STEVEN PRINCE

MICHAEL J. RILEY

Kip, sometimes known as "Happy" because of his sunny disposition, comes from Miami, Florida. After attending Columbian Prep School, he won an appointment to USNA. A varsity athlete all year round (football, indoor track, and outdoor track) Kip will graduate with about as many N's as anyone possibly can. As a varsity halfback and sprinter he showed everyone what he could do when he ran back an intercepted pass 75 yards for a TD against Maryland second class year. Never one to let academics bother him, Kip probably reads more than anyone in the class. If you want to know anything about the latest detective heroes or Tarzan, just ask Kip. His many hobbies include hunting, skin diving, and water skiing. His drive and determination will probably see him reach any goal he sets for himself.

FRANKLYN KIP PASKEWICH

Mike was born and raised in the small New Hampshire town of Somersworth. He entered the Naval Academy straight from high school where he established a fine record. His aggressive spirit has made him a valued member of many intramural sports teams including volleyball, cross country, squash, and handball. His extracurricular activities have been NAFAC and Debate. His quiet ways and friendly personality have won for him many friends both here and away. He seldom hesitates to give his considered opinion on any of the world shaking questions which come before the brigade. Mike has consistently done well at academics despite his philosophy that the only good book is a closed book. On weekends he can be seen either sailing on the Severn or on the golf links. Mike's mature, well rounded attitude will surely make him a welcomed addition to any organization.

After graduating from high school, Jerry attended the University of Alabama for a year before coming to Navy. At Navy Jerry lettered on the Plebe Gymnastics team before going out for track where he became an accomplished pole vaulter. Jerry also found time to do much sailing and represented the United States Navy at the Keil Week races in Keil, Germany. A good student, Jerry also had a love for the pad and could be found during most of his free periods reclining in the blue trampoline. His always cheerful manner won him many lasting friends while at the Academy and will assure him of success in his naval career.

GERALD STANLEY

STANFORD IRWIN STOREY

Skip, a Navy junior, turned down a scholarship to Miami of Ohio and came to us directly from the Bolles School in Jacksonville. He had a quick mind and an even sharper wit. He used his quick mind to absorb the academics with a minimum of time and effort, and he used his wit to amuse his friends and to "straighten out the Academy." He held daily conferences in his room, where his "lieutenants" gathered to find out the troubles of the executive department, the conduct department, or the State department. His imitations of certain infamous officers and his wry sense of humor may not have solved the Navy's problems, but they certainly made Skip well-liked and appreciated everywhere. He was an excellent all-around athlete and became well-known on his battalion football and rugby teams. He kept himself in constant physical trim with weights, and his room was virtually another Vic Tanny's with weights and bars everywhere. With his never ending drive, his ready smile and sharp wit, and his great love of life, Skip's life will always be filled with friends and happiness.

GILBERT MAREK ZEMANSKY

A native Californian, Gil came to the Academy straight from high school with ambition and drive and a set of gold bars shining in his eyes. After a tough plebe year the rigors of youngster cruise on a heavy cruiser were no problem and he thoroughly enjoyed his first contact with the real Navy. Although stars always eluded him, he was continually on the Supt's. List and was a validator and multi-overloader. Equally at home underwater with the Scuba Club or in the air with a parachute he covered many miles keeping himself physically fit as an "American fighting man." A serious Navy man he also appreciated a good party at the "O" club as well as the companionship of the fairer sex. Only time will tell but nuclear subs look "mighty fine" and Gil is sure to be a decided asset to the service as a hard working, capable career officer.

"D. J." came to the Naval Academy after a year of mechanical engineering at Villanova. His home is in Woodbury, New Jersey, where his parents, two sisters and three brothers reside. At the Academy he has rowed both Plebe and Varsity Lightweight Crew, obtaining an 'N' in his third class year. He also played Company heavyweight football and volleyball. Several mathematics overloads have occupied most of his leisure time. Having made a fine record at Villanova, 'D. J.' has used his great drive and intelligence to establish himself as one of the better students at the Naval Academy. This drive and intelligence that he has shown will surely lead to a very successful career.

DAVID J. ADAMS JR.

JOHN WILLIAM BAILEY

Bill came to Navy from the bustling metropolis of Ketchikan, Alaska, after a year at Columbian Prep. While at the academy Bill participated avidly in intramural basketball, football, boxing and was a member of the plebe squash team. The experience he brought with him from the plebe team to the brigade courts caused all hands to give him a wide berth. Bill, always ready for a party, could always be found at liberty call heading for the nearest club more often than not in the company of some adoring female. When not on the beach we often saw Beetle diligently applying himself to avoid another session with the academic board. Bill's easy going manner and ever present cheerfulness caused him to be a favorite with all who knew him. It is certain that Bill will be a credit to the academy and a definite asset to whichever branch he may choose.

NORMAN GEOFFREY BLISS

Norm came to the Academy from the "Wild Western" town of Muskogee, Oklahoma. Well liked for his friendly manner and easygoing ways, he has made many friends during his stay at the academy. On most Saturdays and Sundays he could be found in town with a Southern Belle and sometimes a northern girl. Norm has been one of the mainstays of the company cross-country and football teams and usually helped his team to a winning season. Norm never had to worry much about academics, and always managed to get good grades. He was one of the first to attempt an Engineering major, and could often be found in the metallurgy lab or helping a classmate with his steam. A good friend and a respected leader, Norm should make a great officer.

"Terry" hails from the Far West . . . Great Falls, Montana, where he completed high school in 1959. After a two year hitch in the Navy, Terry finally realized one of his many goals . . . that of coming to the Naval Academy. From his first year Terry has covered himself with glory in the squash courts, particularly while on the Plebe squash team. Since then Terry has been a tremendous asset to the company squash team as well. But his athletic ability is not limited to the squash courts (although his aquatic prowess is somewhat questionable) for in his second class year he led the company volleyball team to a brigade title. Throughout his four years at the Naval Academy, Terry has proved to be an excellent student and his outstanding performance in his professional subjects has been rivaled by few. Terry's dynamic personality and keen sense of self-determination will undoubtedly carry him to the top in what promises to be an outstanding career of naval service.

TERRY LEE BUBNASH

Packing his talents and accomplishments Bob left Coshocton, Ohio, determined to make his mark at USNA. He lost no time and successfully mastered the rigors of plebe year. His personality is the kind that made him many friends and no enemies, except on the football field. Gridiron fans will not soon forget the toe of this "mighty mite" nor his aggressive play at end which earned him an N*. A natural athlete with a great desire to win, Bob led the company basketball team and Battalion tennis team when not playing with the pigskin. Although not a star with the books he will never forget all those evening study hours spent pondering and solving the world's great problems. When not on the athletic field Bob could be found dragging, singing with the Protestant Chapel Choir, or catching up on his French literature. His fine record in aptitude and athletics is only a small indication of the purpose with which he pursues his goal to be a good Naval officer.

ROBERT LEE BUSHONG

LAWRENCE DOWD CLARK

28 June 1961, saw Dick arrive at the hallowed gates of the Naval Academy full of vigor and incentive from his hometown of Scottsdale, Arizona, where he was an outstanding high school athlete and student. After four years by the Severn, Dick has still maintained his vigor and drive. His record at the Naval Academy has few if any equals. He is a star student and a star end on the 150 pound football team. He is a member of both the Chapel choir and the Glee Club. He is an active member of the Russian Club and the Foreign Relations Club. In short, Dick is an outstanding member of the class and a credit to the brigade. Without a doubt, Dick will go a long way in our Naval Service.

R. E. BURDETTE JR.

Larry, a Marine junior, who tongue in cheek claims his home as Washington, has as his major asset a gift for gab, fortified no doubt by his times on the Battalion Debate team. Contributing his time to NACA, the French Club, and the Foreign Relations Club, which no doubt gave food for those arguments, he has also found time for two seasons of Ocean Sailing but later decided to give it up in favor of developing his land legs on the Company cross-country team, managing as well as running. Outwardly friendly, optimistic, a truly sensitive person with a feeling for others, it is certain that Larry's future will be rewarding as well as bright.

Laddie came to the shores of the Severn from the Arizona desert after graduating from Marana High School at the head of his class. But, being gifted in many fields, he brought more than just academic prowess to the Naval Academy. His experience in football and track made him a rugged competitor in various company and battalion intramural sports, and his musical talents contributed to the professional appearance of the Drum and Bugle Corps. A fervent believer in hard work and meticulous study, Laddie acquired a major in aeronautical engineering, was a consistent member of the Superintendent's List, and wore stars, yet he was never too busy to assist anyone who was snowed with academics. The outstanding qualities that have made Laddie a success at the Academy assure him a successful career upon joining the Fleet.

LEWIS LADDIE COBURN

JOHN RANDALL COPE

Randy, affectionately known by his classmates as "El Copa", came to USNA by way of Fort Worth, Texas. A fond admirer and frequenter of the zero slope scene, his favorite expression might very well have been "why do today what can be postponed until tomorrow?" To focus attention on his more serious traits, having been a fervent traveler of the Latin American Countries when the opportunity presented itself, "El Copa" is truly an American in every sense of the word—a facet well displayed also by his participation in the NAFAC Conferences. Although Randy devoted much of his time to foreign relations club, Spanish club, and antiphonal choir during the week and to several members of the fairer sex on the weekends, his name very rarely failed to appear on the Superintendent's List. Nor was he any less adept from the physical point of view as his mastery over sports such as sailing, squash and swimming will bear witness to. The Navy Line and, more specifically, the Tin Can Fleet can soon look forward to the receipt of an honorary member among their ranks.

DONALD RICHARD HAVERKAMP

Don reported to the Academy directly from Waukegan Township High School where he excelled in academics and the finer things of life. Continuing to display these traits as a midshipman, he quickly became well liked among his classmates and managed to set an enviable academic record while dragging nearly every week end. As a star man and a never-ending source of knowledge, Don unselfishly helped many a mid with academic difficulties and served devotedly as a member of the plebe summer detail. In addition he belonged to the Foreign Relations Club and worked as a representative to the Honor committee and Lucky Bag staff. He enjoyed sports equally well and showed proficiency in all of the racquet sports and as a varsity fencer. Graduating with majors in both the mathematics and engineering departments, Don will certainly be a valuable asset to our technical Navy, and his friendly personality will win him friends and success in any field of endeavor.

"Pablo," as Paul is called by everyone who knows him, came right to U.S.N.A. from Janesville Senior High in Janesville, Wisconsin. Having been an outstanding student in high school "Pablo" decided that this would be a good course to steer here at Navy. However, getting a Math major and taking a few Portuguese courses on the side didn't stop Paul from enjoying the other side of Navy life. He was able to participate in Plebe crew, company volleyball, and cross-country and battalion gym, and still have time to date a continuous stream of different girls. Paul was also an active member of the Newman and Portuguese Clubs. Upon graduation Paul will be joining his brother in the Navy. His tremendous drive and natural intelligence will assure him of a very successful career.

PAUL J. KELLOGG

GARY LYNN KREBS

Gary came to the Academy from Eichelberger High School in Hanover, Pennsylvania, where he was a starting member of the football and basketball squads. Always a good student, he took his academics in stride, keeping in the top forty of his class and getting a major in math. Being varsity football manager occupied most of Gary's time in the spring and fall while he spent his winter afternoons playing company basketball. His leisure was spent listening to his "jazz" collection among other things. His easy going nature and sharp-witted personality made him well liked by all. There is little doubt that Gary will be a credit to any organization he becomes a member of during his career.

MALCOLM VICTOR LANE JR.

Hailing from Scarsdale, New York, where he left behind an enviable record of achievements, Skip hit the Naval Academy exerting 100% effort in all of his endeavors. As an avid sports enthusiast, Skip played football, soccer, tennis, squash and was well known for his physical fitness along with being 'Superman' while he was here on the Plebe Detail. His musical talent was manifested by being elected president of the Glee Club along with singing first-tenor in the Chapel Choir, producing the Musical Club Show and being the vocalist for the NA-10. As a go-getter and as a leader, Skip is unsurpassed. He possesses an uncanny ability to succeed in whatever he attempts. Wearing his uniform with great pride, his exemplification of those qualities that go into the making of a great officer and modesty have won for him the respect and admiration of all those with whom he comes into contact. It is truly the good fortune of the Navy and the Naval Academy to be able to boast of a man of the caliber of Skip.

Ted came directly to USNA from his water skis in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, after growing up on ice skates in Grand Rapids, Michigan. He has a love for the great out-of-doors which is only surpassed by his love to be in top physical condition. An avid competitor, 'Nanzer Beast' was an outstanding member of the soccer, water-polo and lightweight football teams. Extra-curricular activities found Ted as company representative for NACA and as a second-tenor in the Antiphonal Choir. Ted never was one to leave the girls alone as he had one in every port. A conscientious student, Ted was our class Banking and Financial Chairman. During Youngster Cruise, Ted participated in the UDT program at Little Creek, Virginia. For his first-class cruise, our frogman turned to the Coast Guard for excitement, participating in the "Eagle" Cruise and in OPERATION SAIL at the 1964 WORLD'S FAIR in New York City. Being above average in all respects and showing his deep-seated respect for the Academy, Ted has no trouble making friends and influencing people. He wears his uniform with great pride and can be counted on to accept any challenge and to always get the job done. These extra assets along with his many other innate qualities will carry Ted far in his naval career.

THEODORE GROVE NANZ

ANTHONY FREDERICK NOTARI

Hailing from Montclair, New Jersey, Tony came to the Naval Academy well prepared for Navy life after a year of regulated life at Purdue University. Tony decided that fraternity life, beer parties and co-education were not for him. Not noted for his academic prowess, Tony decided to switch his interests to other fields of endeavor. A hard worker, the "Fox" shone as a member of the varsity pistol and dinghy sailing squads and sang with the Antiphonal Choir. One of the most personable members of his class who always swings at football trip parties, Tony's congenial outer personality hides a strong, inner determination which will stand him in good stead when he joins the Fleet.

SIMONE JOHN PACE

Sim came to Annapolis from Teaneck, New Jersey, after a year at Manhattan College. Undaunted by the trials and tribulations of Plebe year, he succeeded in maintaining his cheerful and friendly nature. Above average in all respects, he always set an outstanding example. After Plebe year when he was a member of the wrestling and lacrosse teams, his attentions turned to academics. Academics were no great problem for this active Mid, as evidenced by his frequent appearance on the Superintendent's List. While accomplishing all this, Sim was never one to let the fair sex wait for someone else. He was always ready to escort them to a movie or a pleasant evening at a hop. The Fleet cannot help but benefit by his active interest in anything he undertakes. In the future, wherever it leads him, he can be certain of success.

PETER STONE ROBINSON

Pete spent a year at the University of California before coming to the Academy, and this background, complemented by his outgoing personality, gained him many friends during the past four years. Battalion wrestling and lacrosse occupied the majority of his afternoons, while his weekends were spent enjoying the finer places of leisure in D.C.—witness a certain disastrous weekend during academic summer. Always one to boast of the merits of the California beaches, “Bear” could also be found attempting to transform Bancroft Hall into a resort area. Pete’s unique ability to approach people with a mature, sincere attitude, however, proved to be an invaluable aid to those close friends who found themselves in tight situations. Success will surely follow this well thought of classmate of ours in all of his endeavors.

Pete came to the Academy from the small college town of Athens, Ohio, and took to the studies like a duck takes to water. Pete is an outstanding student and will long be remembered as one of the more academically conscientious members of our class. He has been on the Superintendent’s List consistently since his arrival at Navy and will graduate with a mathematics major. Pete’s big interests include the Civil War and sports. He has been the mainstay of his company’s intramural lightweight football and soccer teams. Because of his quick wit and vast stores of energy Pete is always a good man to take liberty with and his “dealings” with the fairer sex have been an inspiration. The Fleet will be getting a real dynamo when Pete appears on the scene.

DAVID HARRY VIGRASS

David, a native of West Palm Beach, Florida, attended Palm Beach High School, where most of his time was devoted to football and studies, in that order. Upon graduation in 1960, he joined the local Naval Reserve Unit, and subsequently attended Columbian Preparatory School for one year. He came to the Naval Academy the following summer on a reserve appointment. David's interests centered on football and lacrosse during his first two years, and on handball and lacrosse during his last two years. In addition, he sang in the anti-phonal choir for four years. David's leisure hours were divided equally between the pad and visitations to nearby D.S. It was rumored that his hair was the longest in the brigade—thus the nickname, "Hairy". He will be remembered by all who knew him as a fun-loving, but sincere personality. His unselfish and persevering attitude will insure his success in any chosen field of endeavor.

Lyn came to the Academy from East Mecklenburg High School in Charlotte, N.C., where he had accrued a fine record. His aggressive spirit has made him a valued member of many sports teams while here, including volleyball, cross-country, fieldball, and basketball, but he finally settled on fencing, and after two undefeated seasons on the Battalion level he became the manager for the varsity squad. His extracurricular activities have included the NACA and the Foreign Relations Club. Lyn always played the system rather casually but claimed to have a special guardian angel who altered the O.O.D.'s course in other directions. His quiet ways and friendly personality have won for him many friends both here and away, and somehow he always manages to have his pick when it comes to girls. Wherever duty shall lead him, it is certain that his competitive spirit, unbounded optimism, overwhelming friendliness, and honest modesty will bring him success.

LYNDON DALE WILLIAMS

ROGER BLAKE WOODHULL JR.

When Woody came to the "Boat School" in June of 1961, he was not unfamiliar with the banks of the Severn. Being a Navy Junior, he had seen Annapolis before, as a matter of fact he was born in our own Naval Academy Hospital. Woody spent his high school days in Philadelphia and will always remember Philly, especially a certain female acquaintance. He came to the Academy from Episcopal High School on a presidential appointment and started his military career after a long line of military men in his family.

Except for French, academics were never a problem for him. Youngster year he even found the time and initiative to start overloading. Woody enjoyed the new sport of Rugby and was a stalwart on the Batt Rugby team.

Woody spent most of his week-ends dragging and enjoyed life here at Navy more than most. He had a taste for nice clothes and good food. He enjoyed playing with the stock market and someday should realize some profit on this interest. Woody's success should be unlimited. He is very intelligent and his success in life should come early and remain with him always.

THIRD BATTALION

"Skip! Skip! wake up! wake up! its reveille!" This is the traditional beginning of a day in the life of SLB. He is the only Mid that I know that can honestly say that he has never heard the reveille bell.

Skip's versatility is truly amazing. His interests vary from oil painting to collecting guns. During his 2/c year, he decided that just for the heck of it he would try 150# football and make the little All-American team. He also fancies himself as a classical guitar player but that can be debated.

Skip believes in the old saying that "for every boy there is one girl." Since I've known him he's met her four different times. Skip has a fine career ahead of him flying or in attache work if he doesn't go into the ministry as he is seriously thinking about doing.

SAMUEL LEE BROGLI

GEORGE HENRY BROWN III

Hank is one of those whom people always ask why he came to the Naval Academy. His Kentucky birth place and Midwest upbringing provided little in the way of nautical inspiration, and he had no military experience prior to entering. After becoming a midshipman, Hank demonstrated great ability and versatility. His dedication to the service became obvious when he attended two optional training programs, survival training at San Diego, California, and airborne training at Fort Benning, Georgia. He has become competent in the nautical skills because of his experience on the varsity sailing team. His main academic interest lies in the social sciences to the degree that he has taken only one final examination in that field. He is one of those people who is of the opinion that nothing succeeds like success, and he has more than succeeded in his endeavors. He has made a name for himself that spells ability, desire and competence among his many friends and on the official record.

ANSON HOLLYDAY BURLINGAME JR.

Anson, a tall, lanky, redhead, came to the Naval Academy from the heart of horse racing country, Georgetown, Kentucky, via Bullis Prep School. He will always be remembered for his self confidence, his many girl friends, and his contribution to the life of numerous parties. Ans never had any trouble finding something to do on the weekend, besides studying. Though he was always on the Supt.'s List, his first loyalties were to girls, parties, bridge, and James Bond.

In Academics, Anson's main interest lay with science and mathematics, as evidenced by his studies in chemistry and nuclear science. His main interest in sports was with basketball. Participation in the Antiphonal Choir and the Masqueraders rounded out his extracurricular activities. In Anson the Navy has the makings of a well-rounded and responsible Naval Officer.

A rough game of rugby, a fast game of squash or a challenging game of bridge all describe John. His primary interest always seemed to be liberty. However, he still found time to earn a math major. Academics were never any problem for John, as is evidenced by his high class standing. He was very active athletically both as manager of the Squash Team and as an avid rugby player. A native of Oregon, John was thoroughly convinced, when he came to Annapolis, that the climate, scenery, and girls of the Northwest were the best in the world. Although he changed his loyalty to east coast girls while at U.S.N.A., he still insists that the Northwest is the only place to live. John was never at a loss for words or ideas and could always be found at the nearest "bull session", where his quick wit and friendly personality won him many friends. With his intelligence and ability, John is certain to become a successful officer and a credit to the Navy.

JOHN ALAN BURT

John came to Annapolis from Greece, New York, where he was a standout on the cross country, swimming, and track teams. He brought his love of running and swimming to the academy with him where he has participated in plebe and varsity cross country and has been active in the intramural swimming and track programs. John is known to his classmates as being quiet and studious and has often been seen burning the midnight oil in his quest for a chemistry major. However, not all his time has been spent with his books, as he is an avid bridge player and is always available when a fourth is needed. Summer leaves provided him with an opportunity to travel. The western reaches of the country have been his target, with his chief interest centered in the Colorado Rockies. John is eagerly looking forward to his career and the many new challenges which lie ahead.

Bill came to U.S.N.A. from Westwood, Massachusetts, and despite four years in Maryland, he has managed to retain his Boston drawl. Dunc came directly from Boston Latin—America's oldest school. The Academy's engineering curriculum has not kept Bill from enjoying liberal arts, as is manifested by his active participation in the Masqueraders and his literature major. Afterhours are spent sailing or swimming or (most of them) with music. Bill specializes in Music Americana and keeps the neighbors happy accompanying himself on his guitar. His favorite artists in the area are Dave Van Ronk and Ola Tunji—whose ranks he someday wishes to join under the pseudonym of Duncan-Duncan. He is an ardent hitchhiker and will gladly show you his trained thumb which only once failed to return him on time. Bill's varied interests leave all roads to the future open, and his many talents and good nature insure that many of them will be traveled.

JOHN ROBERT DUCK JR.

WILLIAM ARCHIBALD DUNCAN

ERNEST ALEXANDER FLYNN

Ernie, affectionately known to his classmates as Errol, came to USNA from Dublin High School, where he was a quarter miler. While at the Academy, he took up softball and volleyball and was a mainstay of his company cross country team which won the Regimental Championship his youngster year. After surviving the rigors of plebe year, Ern became an inimitable master upon the blue trampoline. His keen ability to twist meanings points up the fact that he is a Bull "slash". This enabled him to escape many finals and made it easier for him to somehow avoid having to take any extra ones. Although a frequent "bridge widow", Ern made up for it with his golfing and reading. With his good sense of humor and congenial personality, Ernie is bound to be a success in his career with the Navy.

THIRD BATTALION

Al called Philadelphia home until his junior year in high school, when the Foys changed their residence to Metuchen, New Jersey. Seeing Al rush for his ride at the beginning of each leave period would have convinced anybody that there was a beauty queen waiting for him in Metuchen.

"Four-O Foy" and "I.B.M." were two nicknames that Al earned for his excellent work in the academic world. His real cup of tea were the numbers courses, and having majored in mathematics, he looked forward to postgraduate work in the same field. Most of Al's study hours were about divided equally between doing his own work and helping his classmates with theirs. Although he often did his thinking horizontally, Al's mind was seldom idle. As soon as he had solved a problem, he would rush from his pad to his desk, scribble the solution on a scrap of paper, and soon be back in his thinking position.

Any afternoon during the fall, Al could be found on the football field at his major non-academic interest—helping the Big Blue as a manager.

CLARENCE ALLAN FOY JR.

RONALD ROY HENDERSON

LESLIE MARTIN JACOBI

Ron began his officer career immediately after graduation from Waukesha High School. Even after four years on these fair shores, he still insisted on expounding at length on the virtues of Wisconsin. A beggar for punishment he could be found either running company cross country, polishing his boxing for battalion competition, or playing battalion rugby. After plebe year, study hour more often than not found him in the horizontal position. Notwithstanding, conscientiousness is one of his finest qualities. Everyone who knew him was sure that any job given him would be done to the very best of his ability. This quality insures that he will continue to serve our country well after graduation.

The "Mid that made the marshmallow famous" came to Navy after four stimulating years at New Palestine High School. Straight off the farm Les had trouble adjusting, not to Plebe year, but to wearing shoes, to being frowned upon for exclaiming "Good gosh Gerdie," and to being forced to swim. Les's two major problems were passing swim tests and attempting to prove that New Palestine, Indiana, actually exists (a still hotly debated question). In addition to being an ardent proponent of that ancient adage "schlafen uber alles", Les was an "N" winner on the pistol team and a liberal arts major. Academics were seldom a problem, as Les repeatedly made the Superintendent's List. In his later years, Les developed an interest in art and music. Breaking records for spending inexpensive weekends dragging filled the remainder of his time. Les's easygoing manner and level head indicate success in all that he will endeavor.

ROBERT COLEMAN LASSETER

Bob came to the Academy from Miami Senior High School and Bullis Prep by way of a Naval Reserve appointment. A standout football player, Bob was a valuable asset to the plebe football team until injuries forced him to the sidelines. Since then, intramurals have become his forte and he easily excels in all that he participates in. Academics were never particularly trying to Bob and weekends would usually find him either in the pad or else dragging. Bob's relaxed attitude and good sense of humor have served him well in making many new friends at the Academy. These qualities should pave the way for a satisfying and highly successful career in the service.

DONALD EDMOND LUTHER

Don came to USNA after graduating from Sherwood High and attending a year at Bullis Prep. Being an excellent athlete, he lettered in four sports and was captain of the football team. Don's quick wit and easy-going nature helped him survive the four year strain. His determination and will to win made him an outstanding competitor in any challenging situation. Never having any trouble with academics, Don devoted his leisure time to an active sports participation and a "little extra rest." His great love of home cooking and boating always guaranteed a fast exit whenever a leave or weekend rolled around. A true competitor in the strictest sense, Don's combination of ability and sense of humor will lead him to a highly successful career.

MERRIT HENRY NICEWANDER

Merrit came to the Academy straight out of high school from Columbus, Texas. Academically, after balking through plebe year, he came on strong, jumping headlong into the electives program and earning a major in the E. H. & G. Department.

His sporting activities at the Academy have centered around intramural volleyball and basketball at which he proved himself a capable member of the team. He has that good-natured personality of the true Texan. This trait coupled with his forceful determination, strong devotion to the American way of life, and personal drive should assure him of success in his future career.

TIMOTHY D. PYECHA

Tim hails from Monaca, a small town in Western Pennsylvania, and as a result has brought with him to the Naval Academy many of the typical characteristics and abilities of an individual from that locale. An example of this is his enthusiasm for baseball and, specifically, his ability to pitch. Other examples of his varied interests are hunting and shooting. He has pursued these further since his arrival at the Academy and has since enjoyed firing at the range.

Tim's conscientious efforts in the field of academics have resulted in achievements of which he certainly can be proud. He has an inherent motivation which will result in his future success in whatever field he eventually desires to pursue.

It is with all sincerity that Tim's friends wish him the happiness and enjoyment of a successful career, for his efforts have proved him worthy of this.

SEVENTEENTH COMPANY

LAWRENCE E. REECE

No finer example of a gentleman possessing consideration, good manners, and service motivation exists within the Brigade. Larry's inherent character has befriended him to all those of his acquaintance, and this extension of personality has returned in the highest degree of respect.

Having lived from the far reaches of Brazil to the state of Washington, Larry has enjoyed the life of a navy junior to its fullest extent. Mastering the sport of skiing in the Rockies and later in the Green Mountains of Vermont has been, perhaps, his greatest source of enjoyment. His interests, however, have great depth as can readily be seen from his possession of both an amateur radio operator's license and a student pilot's license. No wonder the ranks of Naval Aviation can expect another outstanding officer in the near future.

It is with great admiration that we salute Larry upon his departure into a welcomed career of Naval service.

Chuck came to the Academy from San Antonio, Texas, soon after graduation from high school. At the Academy his active participation in intramural sports coupled with his ability and enthusiasm have brought him great success in football, tennis, and squash. His academic interests have been chiefly in the field of physics and astronomy. Throughout his four years he has applied himself with a diligence and thoroughness that mark him as a man capable of attaining great success in future years. His pleasant, quiet approach to problems and his quick ability to make friends will make him welcome in whichever branch of the service he chooses.

CHARLES THORNTON RIEDEL

KELVIN GEORGE ROGERS

If you've ever heard the joke about the stubborn, red-headed Irishman, you know Kelvin. Never troubled by academics, "Kev" could usually be found in the pad when he didn't have a class. In fact, sometimes he could be found in the pad even if he did have a class. Always the life of the party until he fell asleep, usually about ten o'clock, he thoroughly enjoyed wine, whiskey, beer, women, and song, though not necessarily in that order. "Kev" proved to be a definite asset to twelfth company sports, playing soccer, light weight football and "A" softball with equal facility. "Kev" hails from Connecticut and hopes to return after graduation to win his dolphins. With his fine leadership ability, intelligence, and personality, it is a foredrawn conclusion that he will be a success in anything he does.

LESTER HARDY SADLER

Hailing from Savannah, Georgia, Les decided to leave the wild society parties of the deep south for a career in the service. Having spent a year at Marion Institute, he was far from unfamiliar with the ways of the military. He merely traded army blue for navy blue.

Plagued by dago he diverted some energy toward academics, but he still found plenty of time to demonstrate his well-known love for his pad. Being a natural "Southern Gentleman" sleep wasn't his only pursuit. He has always enjoyed classical music, fine clothes, and good books. He has also been quite a sports enthusiast. Before entering the Academy he was captain of his high school basketball and football teams, and he threw the discus on the track team. When he went to Marion he played college tennis. With this experience he was a welcome addition to the Academy's intramural program.

His ability to give and take a good running made him slide easily into academy life. His sense of humor and easy-going manner make him well suited for his career as a Naval Officer.

RICHARD JOHN SCUBA

Dick came to the Naval Academy from Revere High School. He used his brain as well as his brawn Plebe year by staying on the training table. He was a "studier" Plebe year but we've effectively broken him of that. He's a willing worker on the Mighty Mites and a Battalion Lacrosse star. Since he has been in the Navy he has been trying to live up to the old saying, "A girl in every port." He hasn't been to the Pacific yet, but he has the East Coast pretty well covered now. A definite sports car enthusiast, he is having a tough time justifying himself with his economic mind. Known to us as the "banker," he has the ability to have money left the day before payday. Naturally he is a member of the Scuba Club. A Navy line man all the way, he hopes to retain a DD on graduation, but, for variety, on the West Coast.

LAUGHTON DOUGLAS SMITH

"Laughton," being a rather high-sounding name for such a natural guy, gave way to "Smeed" early in Smeed's grade school years. Laughton has always had a winning personality, with a bright smile and heartwarming enthusiasm. He forsook the "anguishes" of Missouri University and fraternity life with the Beta's after his freshman year to don the Navy blue. Since then he has distinguished himself by his high grades, self confidence, and willingness to get things done right. After Laughton's commissioning in June '65, the fleet can look forward to another officer who reflects the high ideals of the Academy.

SEVENTEENTH COMPANY

THIRD BATTALION

Hailing from Altoona, Pa., Joe came to the Severn shore by way of the enlisted ranks, where he managed to completely dodge sea duty for two years. With this background of avoiding unpleasanties, he slid happily along as a midshipman. Although he took pains to let no one catch him studying, the word is that he did so occasionally. His presence on the Supe's List and his stars indicate that this rumor might just be true. Except for one slightly unhappy season of Brigade Boxing, Joe stuck to intramurals, concentrating on Batt Lacrosse. A goodly portion of his monthly insult was squandered on sporting goods such as yo-yos and water pistols. His ability to understand whatever confronts him and the unlikeliness that he will sweat it will help him have an enjoyable career.

JOSEPH WILLIAM SPRINGMAN

HALLETT RICHARD STILES

Dick reported into USNA with two years of military schooling experience already to his credit, having attended New York Military Academy during his last two years of high school. He had an idea of what would probably be expected of him at the Naval Academy before he ever got here, and from the moment he stepped inside the gates he put himself to the task of meeting the demands of plebe year. He made good use of his past experience, combining it with his characteristic drive and acute sense of responsibility, and eleven months later, as a result of his efforts, he found himself one of the top men in the plebe class, being one of the top two in his company.

Coming from the heart of sailing country, Dick was naturally a sailor long before his arrival on the Severn. In fact, he was surprised to find that there were, indeed, sports other than sailing, but once he discovered it he readily accepted the fact and enthusiastically entered into as many as he could squeeze in between varsity dinghy sailing seasons.

With his ambition and drive to back up his many fields of interest, Dick's future endeavours are unlikely to be anything but successful. Indeed, he is a product the Naval Academy deserves to be proud of.

JOHN ASHER THOMPSON

Johnny came to Annapolis after graduation from high school in Lubbock, Texas. There he won letters in boxing and golf in addition to participating in the Golden Gloves boxing tournaments. He continued his boxing here at USNA participating in Brigade Boxing and he added a new sport, soccer, although he'd never seen a soccer ball before his arrival here. A frequent visitor to the town outside the walls, Johnny never ceased to amaze the waitresses with the combinations of food he always ordered . . . lemonade, milk, hot dog, corn chips, and a sundae is an example of a usual combination. Instantly enthusiastic at the mention of a party or a rocking dance, he was usually the "life of the party". Friendly and easy-going, he never had any trouble with academics as he worked toward a major in aerodynamics and maintained one of the highest averages in the class. His ambition and perseverance will insure success in all his future endeavors.

It's hard to say just where Lloyd calls home. As a Navy junior he has lived all over the country as well as in Europe. This experience has enabled him to feel at home no matter where circumstances may lead him.

Lloyd left Georgia Tech. after a year for the Academy where he immediately began to make a name for himself on the Navy squash team. Between seasons he could always be found pursuing one or another young lovely with varying degrees of success.

With his winning personality and his conscientious attention to duty, he will fit perfectly into the Navy air fraternity.

JAMES LLOYD ABBOT III

ROY CARL ERIC AHLGREN

After two years in the NROTC at the University of Illinois, Roy decided to go Navy all the way and came to the Academy. He brought with him his interest in the liberal arts and had little difficulty in achieving a "bull" major. The engineering and science courses, however, sometimes gave him cause to despair. Usually, he could be found after class with a cup of coffee and a book, or out on Farragut field participating in intramural sports. In addition to academics, Roy spent his time in working as the Managing Editor of the Lucky Bag or in writing long letters to Janet, that "one and only" back in Chicago.

We are sure that Roy will be a credit to his ship as he has been to the Academy. Best of luck.

RAYMOND THOMAS BARRETT

The "Mole," a nickname inspired by Ray's special brand of effervescence, brought with him to the Naval Academy from Fairfield Prep in Connecticut a varied and ever enlarging field of interest including electronics, music, woodcarving, reading in many areas, and the ability to fix anything breakable. The Mole's Hole is notorious as a general store filled with amplifiers, speakers, photographs, and a library any small town would be proud of. From it is dispensed everything from advice to the love-lorn to the perfect wrench to fix the shower drain. Despite his many interests Ray has found time for academics, including electives in science, math, and social studies, and put to good use his many talents which will stand him in good stead throughout his Naval career.

Frank came to the Academy straight from Boston Latin School in Boston, Mass. He readily adapted himself to academics at the Academy. Frank was ranked high in his class and was consistently on the Supt.'s List, receiving a major in Russian for his efforts. He excelled in intramural sports which included swimming, water polo, and cross country. His extracurricular activities at the Academy were centered in the Russian Club, of which he was President. His organizational abilities coupled with remarkable powers of concentration and strong determination assure him of success in his future career.

FRANCIS MATTHEW BURNS III

"J. B." is a Navy Junior and came to the Academy well-indoctrinated in the ways of the Navy. This nautical background explains the fact that he claims numerous places in the United States and abroad as his "home town". Plebe year, J. B. was on the gymnastics team and the Ocean Sailing squad. Sailing has proved to be his major interest and he can be heard recounting his experiences on the water. J. B. has never been one to let academics interfere with the "more important things". These include sailing, the Brigade Activities Committee, dragging and painting smokestacks. J. B.'s conduct record has been almost as spectacular as his academic record and it is expected that the Fleet will be set back several years with his arrival. Known by all his buddies as the friendly, out-going type, J. B. will never be without his fun and friends.

Hailing from the second largest state, Jim came with the experience of both a year of college at Texas Western and a year of Army R.O.T.C. However Plebe Year soon straightened him out and he turned his attentions from frat parties and caisson rollings to the more serious things of academics, athletics and the pad. The Butts at first found the books to be a challenge but he quickly settled down and they became a real struggle. Jim's real prowess was on the athletic field where his two year hitless string still stands as an intramural softball record. He will always be remembered, though, for his quick smile, great personality, and willingness and ability to either lead or follow. No matter what field he enters, those of us who have lived and worked with him for four years wish Jim the best of luck and complete success.

JAMES HICKMAN BUTLER

JOHN BRUCE DOHERTY

JOSEPH A. GARUBA

A native of Pittston, Pennsylvania, Joe spent a year at Wyoming Seminary before coming to Severn's shores. One of Joe's outstanding qualities is his intense motivation. An active participant in company sports, Joe was a prominent member of the company football and softball teams. Though not an academic slash, Joe maintained a high average as his quarterly appearance on the Superintendent's List showed. An avid reader, "Jo-Jo" has become quite knowledgeable in the field of international relations. His extracurricular activities reflect this interest as he was vice-president of the Foreign Relations Club and a participant in the Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference. His other interests include sky-diving, folk and classical music, and Newman Club.

Joe has his sights set on a pair of golden wings upon graduation. With his drive and determination he should have no difficulty in achieving this goal.

EIGHTEENTH COMPANY

THIRD BATTALION

On graduating from Thomas Jefferson High School in Richmond, Tom came directly to Annapolis where his hobbies of fire-eating and magic were put to good use during plebe year HAPPY HOURS. Outside of the swimming pool the Naval Academy curriculum presented few difficulties for Tom as is evidenced by his frequent appearances on the Superintendent's List and even more frequent appearances in the pad. Many afternoons were saved for Y.P. sailing on the Chesapeake Bay and weekends for dragging his fiancée. What time remained was spent hunting, reading, and listening to show music. Tom will be long remembered for his sense of humor which, linked with ability and confidence, will make him a welcome addition to the Naval Service.

THOMAS O'CONNOR JOHNSON III

TIMOTHY ROBERT KIRKMAN

MARK LIGHT KITTREDGE

Mark came to the shores of the Severn from Hopkins Grammar School in New Haven, Connecticut, and his friendliness and sincerity made him well-liked by all with whom he came in contact. His athletic ability and leadership qualities were quickly recognized when he was elected captain of the Plebe soccer team. Although soccer continued to be "Kitt's" major interest, he was also a hard-hitting member of his company's fieldball team. He took an active interest in most outdoor sports but was particularly fond of skiing and ice hockey. An avid reader, Mark especially enjoyed the courses offered by the bull department. His fine voice contributed quality to the Antiphonal Choir. Upon graduation, he hoped to be the proud owner of a fast, new sports car and on his way to becoming one of the hottest aviators in the service.

Tim came to the Naval Academy straight from the sunny shores of Southern California bringing with him his characteristic easy-going, friendly manner which made him easily one of the most popular members of the Brigade.

The nickname "Droopy" is by no means an indication of his nature. On the contrary, Tim was an extremely hard and spirited worker both in the classroom and on the athletic field as could be attested to by his frequent appearances on the Superintendent's List and on winning teams in football, soccer, fieldball, and softball. In addition to this he found time to actively participate on the working honor committee and in the Foreign Relations Club. His favorite pastimes include fishing, surfing, athletics, and music.

The son of a Marine officer, Tim intends to follow in his father's footsteps upon graduation.

JOHN EDWARD KOHLER JR.

John is the quiet-type of fellow who had no trouble in developing lasting friendships. He is always quick to help a classmate and slow to ask anything in return. Although quiet, the "Koala Bear" is by no means timid. His N* in 150 pound football and unfailing eagerness to join in all competitive sports attest to his will to win. The "Bear" proved to be a true native of Marblehead, Massachusetts, in that he took to the water at USNA and became an avid member of the sailing squadron. John's major field of academic interest is in Aeronautical Engineering which should prepare him well for a successful career as a fine and dedicated naval officer.

HENRY MICHAEL LEWANDOWSKI

Hank came to Navy after three outstanding years in high school at Lynn, Mass., where he earned an enviable scholastic and athletic reputation. During his stay here he devoted much of his time to the field of Social Sciences where he constantly stood near the top of his class. "The Big Guy", as he was known to many of his friends, made his presence felt on the athletic field. A rugged competitor, Hank is the type of guy you would want on your side. He won his class numerals plebe year as a member of the Brigade Championship Volleyball team. During Aviation summer, his big bat was instrumental in leading our all star softball team to victory over local Navy opposition. Hank's good looks, affable nature, and Boston accent gave him a good start in winning the hearts of many Southern Belles. An unforgettable character, Hank, along with the other "Musketeers", could always be counted upon to have a good time under any circumstances. With his sense of responsibility, loyalty, and proven capabilities of leadership, Hank should easily reach any goal he sets for himself.

THEODORE ALFRED KRAUSS

TIMOTHY BRADLEY NICHOLS

You'd never believe it if you saw him just after reveille, but Tim has all the qualities of a good naval officer in abundant supply. He came to the Academy from Baltimore Poly, and applied himself to academics in pursuit of an engineering major. He brought a good deal of experience and skill to the Navy lacrosse team. His perseverance and courage were finally rewarded with a victory over Army and an N star.

In spite of his heavy academic and athletic load, he always had time for a friendly word, time to help someone with a steam problem, and, of course, time to drag Eileen on the weekends. He's the kind of a person you like to have as a friend.

Wherever the future may lead him, Tim is bound for success.

A native of Cleveland, Ohio, Ted came full of enthusiasm for the Navy. He worked hard plebe year and soon learned what was expected of him as a midshipman. During plebe year Ted became interested in South America, and Brazil in particular. He pursued his study of that country and its language, and as the result of two summer leave periods spent down there became somewhat of an expert on its politics and its economy. The lore of the sea also fascinated Ted; both theoretical, as evidenced by his study of oceanography, and practical, demonstrated by the fact that he was an active and avid member of the sailing squadron. His sense of humor, strong-mindedness, and love of argument endeared him to his classmates, who were often left tearing their hair at their inability to overwhelm him. Ted, however, was never observed doing likewise. Upon graduation Ted hoped to be one of those few wise, or lucky men who become rich while pursuing a service career.

THOMAS ALBERT MORGENFELD

Hailing from Hamburg, New York, Tom's ever present smile and easy going nature have marked him as one of the most likeable members of our class. One to whom studies came easily, Tom was always willing to put aside what he was doing and patiently help a classmate with any academic problem. An outstanding athlete, Tom devoted most of his athletic energies to the Navy soccer team. His determination and affable nature will long be remembered by his teammates. The winter season found the "Ostrich" on the company cross country course. Only twice beaten, this record certainly attests to his exceptional ability and fortitude. Tom's characteristic drive and determination are easily discernible in every endeavor that he undertakes.

An aviator through and through, Tom has his sights set on a pair of Navy gold wings.

THIRD BATTALION

"Fate makes our relatives; choice makes our friends." His quick wit, affable nature, and disarming smile win Tom the hearts of all he meets. If there is a job to be done, or a good time to be had; you may depend upon finding "Rags" first and foremost in either category. While one major is enough to frustrate most mids, Tom's major source of frustration is that he won't have his third major by June of '65. After hours—academically speaking—"Rags" can usually be found at the squash courts, where he is reputedly as redoubtable with a squash racquet as he is with a slide rule; or at a Spanish Club Banquet. The club made a wise choice in their selection of Tom as President. As one might suspect, the "Pride of Peabody High" has quite a few visitors the night before a review quiz; but he is never too busy to help a classmate. Tom's initiative, drive, and determination to not only "do the job" but to "do the job well" guarantee him success in any field of endeavor.

THOMAS JOYCE REGAN JR.

Although a native of New Britain, Connecticut, Ernie moved his base of operations to the New York area while still a member of the "fourth estate." Coming to USNA via Columbian Prep, it immediately became evident that the "Cyrano of 65" was a lover of athletics, women, and pizza. A true sportsman, if Ern could not be found on a basketball court or behind the plate for the company softball team, it was a sure bet that he had once again answered the "call of the pad." To help keep him away from the books, as a "freshman" Ern served on the class Hop Committee, then turned his talents toward the Reception Committee and the BAC. "Tecumseh," a nickname he earned as a Plebe when he was mistaken for a local landmark by his classmates, had a more than brief encounter with European history as a Youngster but came back to win the battle with flying colors. Always ready with a helping hand, a friendly word, or witty comeback, Ernie's warm personality, outstanding sense of humor, and ability to "get the job done" make him a sure bet to overcome any obstacle which he might encounter on his road to success.

EDMUND LEE PRATT JR.

"Spider" came to Navy from Norfolk, Virginia. Being a Navy junior, living in a building with no "steps" or "walls" caused him no problem. When it came to marching, he found himself head and shoulders above the rest of his company. His biggest difficulty was in finding time for all his interests. His first love is photography, but he has expanded into YP's and the high jump, where his goal is his own height. He did not really begin to enjoy his studies until he hit professional subjects, of which Navigation was his best. Never one to let the number of his girls drop below three, he became a master at keeping his schedule straight. His ability at joking and his subtle humor make him welcome in any group. With his love for ships and the sea he will have a rewarding career awaiting him in the Navy Line.

George, the "Class Clown," came to this hallowed institution from Villanova where he excelled in academics. His keen sense of humor, in spite of his past training as a Rotcie, allowed him to adapt well to the system. His high marks are sufficient testimony to how well he adapted. Being an avid squash player he was the backbone of company squash team. His "golden toe" and his fighting spirit were much needed components of the company soccer team. George's ability to joke at the right time has made four years behind the bleak, gray walls of the academy a pleasure to live. All those who worked with George know that he has the ability to lead and work hard. His high sense of duty and responsibility will make his career in the Navy a successful one.

ERNEST FRANCIS TEDESCHI JR.

GEORGE JOSEPH ROLETTER JR.

Bill came straight to the Ensign Factory from Lynbrook High School on Long Island, bringing with him an avid love for wine, women, and song (not necessarily in that order). If "travel," "women," "academics," and "sports" were placed in alphabetical order, Bill's interests would start with the Zzzz's. Afternoons usually found him engaged in one of the sports he loved. Although he played many, Bill's fortes were football and softball; and his skill at these made the two company teams hard to beat. But Bill's interests did not stop with athletics, for he was always ready to help with B.A.C. work or reception committee duties. Being very gregarious and possessing a keen sense of humor, Bill was always at home in nightly bull sessions, while weekends and leave invariably found him out having a good time. Bill will take to the Navy a firm desire to succeed; and this, coupled with his winning personality, willingness to lend a hand when needed, and ability to achieve his goals, will insure him success in all future endeavors.

GEORGE WILLIAM WEILER

Don journeyed from Lynn, Mass., to Canoe U. after a brilliant sojourn in High School where he received many honors, both scholastic and athletic. While at Navy, he displayed his athletic skills on the baseball field plebe and youngster years. An avid sportsman, he contributed heavily to intramural softball and basketball, while keeping one elementary backstroke ahead of the sub squad. Don's academic interests lie in the E, H&G. Dept. in which he was one of the top members of his class. He also managed to do well with the remainder of the curriculum. Many of his weekends here at Crabtown, were spent in the company of the opposite sex, of whom he had a fine stable. One of the "three Musketeers," a fine fun-loving trio, Don will be remembered for his ability to make the best of any situation. The perseverance and determination that marks his every endeavor as a midshipman will assure Don's success in whichever field he enters upon graduation.

DONALD CHARLES WITHAM

Woody came to the academy from a Navy family via Marion Institute. Easily adapting to academy life, Woody was a constant help to his classmates as a plebe. Youngster year found Woody one of the strong leaders in the company. Excelling in intramural sports and easily avoiding the academic pitfalls he was an outstanding credit to the company. When liberty call went Woody could be found heading for a party with a group of friends and a beautiful girl or two. A welcome addition to any bull session Woody was an expert at relating his novel experiences. A thirty year man, Robin will always be welcome and a constant attribute to the service of his choice.

ROBIN WOOD

STANLEY MICHAEL ZIMNY JR.

After graduating from Clairemont High School in San Diego, Stan attended Oregon State U. on an NROTC scholarship for a year. "Zim" then followed in his father's footsteps to the Academy. An occasional member of the Supt.'s List, Stan excelled in the Skinny and Math departments in which he overloaded quite extensively. His hustle and fine play made him a valuable addition to the Varsity Baseball team while at Navy. Originally a shortstop, Stan's versatility and fine team spirit enabled the coach to use him where most needed. An all around athlete, he contributed many timely points for the company basketball team in the off season. Although a hard worker, Stan liked to relax on weekends in the company of various pretty coeds. The third of the notorious Musketeers, Stan's quick wit and sense of humor allowed him to make a favorable impression on all he met. The ability to apply and adapt himself to any situation or environment will insure that Stan will be capable of doing an outstanding job in any position to which he is assigned.

Coming from Newport News and living around ships most of his life, it was only natural that Larry should end up at the Naval Academy. An all-state basketball player and outstanding end in football, Larry stamped himself as a topnotch athlete on the college level. Having declined several football scholarships to come to Navy, it was not surprising that he nailed down a starting position at end, and became a mainstay on one of the best Plebe football teams ever assembled at the Academy. Already an intellectual giant and proven athlete, Larry's glib tongue has endowed him with a certain animal magnetism that the girls find irresistible. In addition to his many pursuits, Larry is also a dedicated bridge player, and many evenings have found him outwitting the Executive Department to get in a friendly game. Never one to be satisfied with anything except a winning effort, Larry's determination and perseverance will guarantee him the realization of any goal upon which he sets his sights.

LARRY DeWITT BRADY

FREDERICK NELS BROBERG

STANLEY JEROME CARTER JR.

The first day Stan walked into Te-cumseh Court to report for plebe summer, he was undoubtedly "Mr. Debonair". He still had a mustache and he was dressed like a real ivy leaguer. But, since then Stan has traded Ivy League for Navy Blue and has buckled down to a rewarding life at the Naval Academy. Stan graduated from Roosevelt High School in Washington, D. C., where he gained his interest in service life through the cadet corps where he was a cadet captain. Since his reporting to the Naval Academy, Stan has maintained a high participation in activities. Stan excelled in company intramural sports, playing soccer, football, basketball, and softball. After serving on the Public Relations Committee since plebe year, Stan was elected Sports Publicity Director for this organization. Being an avid weightlifter and sports enthusiast made Stan well qualified for this job. However, this enthusiasm was insignificant when compared to that generated by liberty call. Being a good natured and a well liked person, who could always be counted on to give a helping hand, Stan's classmates are looking forward to serving with him in the Navy.

Fred came to the Naval Academy after only three days of freedom from the high school books. Home for Fred is Cazenovia, New York. The old "fourth company" gave him quite a plebe year, but with the help of the indoor track season, training tables, and hard work, he remained to become an asset to thirteen when the companies were changed youngster year. Fred has pulled his share of the oar on the Navy Crew team. He has rowed every season with the exception of the winter seasons, when he ran track. Fred has had little trouble with the academics, but the EH&G Department has been trying to scare him into some serious studying.

With a firm devotion to the service, there is no doubt to the fact that Fred will go a long way in the Navy.

DOUGLAS C. CHISHOLM

Doug was born in Seattle, Washington, in 1943. His father was a Naval officer and consequently the family has seen quite a few areas of the country. However, most of his life has been spent on the West Coast where his family now resides in Ontario, California.

His academic interests are mainly scientific, as proven by his over-load weapons project and general excellence in science courses.

When not studying or writing his girl, Doug will usually be found building ship models, reading books, or designing new lab equipment.

With the intramural sports program, he has participated in squash and handball as his favorites. Plebe year he was a member of the Plebe track team also. Doug's participation is always marked by great drive and spunk. This is best illustrated by the fact that he trotted through the agility course in 3:02 while consuming upwards of two packs of cigarettes per day.

Doug has won many friends here at the Academy and with his ability and drive he should go far. We wish him the very best.

MARLIN DAVID CLAUSNER JR.

Marlin had a varied scholastic career before his coming to the academy. As a Navy Junior he attended the usual multitude of grade schools and then while awaiting acceptance to the academy he attended several semesters of college as an air force ROTC. Possessed of wide academic aptitudes Marlin excelled in academics throughout his career at the academy. He was a member of the Plebe tennis and Varsity fencing teams. He was more or less the pipe and slipper type, and made himself quite at home with a fair quantity of rest. Being quite flexible in his attitude toward the service career, he expressed interest in all facets of the Navy, and could be labeled a professional even as a midshipman. Thoroughly self-confident and dynamic in action we're looking forward to seeing Marlin enjoy many and varied successes as a naval officer.

PAUL ARTHUR DAMROW

Coming to USNA directly from high school in Alexandria, Virginia, Paul ended his string of addresses acquired around the country as a Navy junior. Paul brought with him a basic inquisitiveness and a desire to get the most from life. He did not like to think that there was something that he could not do. Already a proficient basketball player, Paul vigorously applied himself to gymnastics and swimming. He was consistently an outstanding player on both company and battalion basketball teams. Academics were Paul's specialty. He has taken full advantage of the elective system and has consistently maintained a star average. Paul could always be counted upon to generously lend his study time toward helping others. No matter what field of the service he chooses, Paul will certainly be an asset to the Navy.

THOMAS WILLIAM DiFRANCICO

Tom came to the Naval Academy directly from high school in Pittsburgh, where he was valedictorian of his class. At the academy he continued to distinguish himself in academics by acquiring a major in chemistry and by wearing stars every year throughout his four years. He impresses his classmates and other midshipmen by his friendliness and consideration—Tom is always ready to lend a helping hand where needed. A well-rounded personality coupled with organization and neatness have made Tom a top-rate midshipman, one with whom anyone would be proud to serve.

Arriving at Navy with a substantial nine hundred and seventy-six years of previous schooling, Reau spent most of his four year sojourn bidding grand slams and avoiding an alert executive department. Not confining his abilities to intellectual pursuits alone, the hefty one hundred and forty pounder played soccer and wrestled. He remains an ardent enthusiast of the Rebel cause demanding a traditional salute of the Confederate flag from his friends. Reau forsook the gaieties of fraternity life at Vanderbilt and Tennessee to follow a long line of military service. His friendly and humorous nature has won him a multitude of friends, and being a natural financial wizard, each day finds him anxiously involved with The Wall Street Journal. A word about girls is best left unsaid about this adventurous Casanova. The future looks quite bright for Reau as he takes his place in the naval service.

REAU ESTES FOLK II

"Ole Red" is an Air Force brat whose family now makes their home in "sunny" California (at least, he insists that it is sunny there). He spent his innocent years in Utah and matriculated directly from high school there to this university on the Severn.

Len's bubbling personality and ever-present smile have won for him many lasting friendships during his stay here at USNA. His Air Force background has not blunted his interest and enthusiasm to learn all he can about the Navy.

Len will be remembered most for his work as president of the Trident Society. In this job he gained the title of the "great liberator" for freeing the undercover bridge clubs and making bridge almost a varsity sport by instituting the Trident Society Bridge Tournament.

"Specks" is also every girl's nomination for "the perfect teddy-bear" award because he is so "lovable" and his freckles are so very "cute". And, oh, that red hair!!

His persistent drive and stamina are assurances that his career will be sparkling and productive to both he and the Navy.

PATRICK EDWIN FITCH

One step ahead of the law, and thereby hailing from just about any and every place on the globe, Pat has spent much of his life attaining his worldly views. His contributions to life at the Naval Academy are evidence of his varied interests. He is a member of the French and Foreign Relations Clubs, participates actively in Varsity Sailing, and joins the fishes in his Scuba Club adventures. Determined to become a naval officer, Pat arrived at the Academy after a year's sojourn at Duquesne University. His desire and hard work have enabled him to stand out during his four years here at Navy. He has learned lately that there may even be a place for a little white cottage fitted into his projected career. A helping hand and an earnest like for people have gained him many friends and forewarn his inevitable success as an officer.

Most men coming from the heart of Dixie are lucky enough to have only the deep southern accent to cope with, but Bob whose last name is pronounced gross was able to last through plebe year and his other three years as the only member of the class that could not help being Groce. Bob entered the academy after a year at Mississippi State University where he was enrolled in the school of Nuclear Engineering. Bob soon proved that he was gross in name only. Second class year he joined the Trident Society and became vice-president first class year. He was active in all phases of academy life from company to Brigade activities. Bob should go far in whatever field he chooses and will be an asset to the Navy.

LEONARD ARTHUR HARTSHORN

ROBERT NOEL GROCE

Bud graduated from high school in 1961, and left Huntington, West Virginia, to come to the Naval Academy. He found little use for the extensive training he received on the concert violin at Navy, but with a lot of hard work won top positions on the company cross country team and the battalion fencing team. Because of a strong desire to learn about the Navy, he worked with the YP squadron, where he learned to despise people who exercise the right of sail over power driven vessels. Second class year he helped to organize the USNA gun club, when he finally proved that he was a real "Mountain Man" by winning his expert rifle ribbon.

Second class summer proved to Bud that Navy Air was for him. The first loop he ever flew was quite an ordeal, but he picked up the pieces and finished the summer as one of the top aviators in the class.

BYRON REESE HUMPHRIES II

VINCENT JOSEPH LIEGGI

Like they've said in those many many past articles in yearbooks and various other publications, "Vince will surely be a success." This young Philadelphian certainly has proven this while at the Augustinian academy, Villanova, and, now, at USNA; leaving each place just that much better for his having been there. Here he has earned the nickname of Prince Henry, the Navigator, as well as a few other nicknames all of which he has equally earned.

He is generally known for his quick wit, generosity and organizational abilities. A lot of us would have missed many a good Army Game party or lost out on a June Week Drag House if it hadn't been for "old Vince," the man that always gets a "good deal."

No matter how you look at him, whether you see that twinkle in his eye that shows you he has some big plan on the fire or you listen to him talk himself out of the most difficult situations with his leadership capabilities, Vince will be a man that any Captain should like to see come over the gangway.

THOMAS STEPHEN MOORE

Tom came to the Naval Academy after the Navy had sent him thru Electronics Technician School, Submarine School, and NAPS. Although he constantly refers to his submarine days as "the good life," it was his motivation and interest during that period which won him his recommendation for the Naval Academy. Being a typical "old salt", he was always ready to spin a few yarns. Hence, he was known as a good natured, good humored, and generally out-going fellow. Tom believed in living life to the fullest and usually succeeded. He could always be found in town or in the yard with some new or old drag, and he took any liberty and leave "for the good of the service." In extracurricular activities he spent a great deal of time with the Catholic Choir and the Glee Club, which shared his resonant voice. He played in a variety of sports such as track, waterpolo, lacrosse and squash, and when not busy with one of these he utilized his time reading or "toying" with hi-fi equipment. We know that Tom with his capabilities and experience will make a good and able officer upon graduation.

Jack hails from Cherry Hill, New Jersey, and came to USNA after spending a year at Drexel University. He received his appointment through the Naval Reserve and came to the academy to follow in the footsteps of his older brother. While he was here Jack put in his share of time on the academics but always found time to drag and also to get in those extra hours of rest in the "rack." Among his favorite pastimes were dancing, singing and soccer. Jack, also, loves traveling and will go anywhere where there is adventure to be had. He has many interesting stories of his roamings to Hawaii and to many, many areas of the continental U.S. Jack likes people and likes to be with people and he will be a success in whatever he does.

JOHN RAYMOND MUSITANO

ERIC CHRISTIAN PILGER

Chris graduated from high school in Royal Oak, Michigan, in 1959 and attended Bullis Prep School as a Reserve candidate for the Naval Academy.

Entering the Naval Academy with the class of 1964, Chris enjoyed plebe year with 8th Company. He enjoyed it so much, in fact, that he turned back to have another with the class of 1965.

Interested in extra-curricular activities Chris contributed his artistic talents to the Brigade in the designing of 3 Brigade Christmas cards and cartooning for the Splinter. He also served as ring and crest committee representative, Lucky Bag layout editor, and president of the 1964 Christmas card committee.

While being the company expert on aviation Chris didn't neglect his development in the subject most basic to the seaman—the sea, and as a member of NASS helped bring home many trophies to Navy as in the Annapolis-Newport Ocean Race.

When the Naval Academy received the new Shields class racing boats Chris helped organize the Shields Team and later became its captain.

With all of these interests and talents Chris promises to be a real asset to the Navy and should enjoy a successful career.

LEGH RICHMOND POWELL IV

Legh came to the academy after graduating from Loyola High School in Baltimore, Md., where he was an outstanding student and an ardent lacrosse player. He quickly adjusted to the academy life and became a hard-working member of the brigade. Some of his sports and extracurricular activities included plebe and j.v. lacrosse, gun club and public relations committee. On the lighter side Legh was anything but lacking. Known as "the original non-sweater" by some of his classmates, Legh never let the system get him down. Many times he gave a needed boost to morale by way of his timely puns. He enjoyed listening to good music and enjoyed dragging on weekends even more. Legh has his goals set on Navy line but with his easy-going nature and determination, he will be a credit to the service or any other aspect of life he undertakes.

WILLIAM HARRY PREVITY

Bill came to the Academy fresh out of high school and soon found out that the life of a midshipman was a little more regimented than life in the peaceful New England town of Stonington. Bill's interests included the latest in popular music and their associated dances, trips to various parts of the world during summer leave—from Hawaii to Sweden, but most of all, sports. 150# football was Harry's (Bill's name on the gridiron) varsity sport, and during the winter he was a top scorer of the fieldball team. Bill always added to the life of a party through his jolly and effervescent personality. There was also the serious side to Bill's personality as shown by the academic standing he acquired in his four years. Whichever branch of the Navy Bill chooses, he will be a great asset to his fellow officers.

Pat, unlike most Navy Juniors, can at least call one area his home—Crestview, Florida, as anyone can readily perceive by his southern accent. Coming to the Naval Academy directly from high school, he has shown a broad capability for academics, especially in the fields of engineering and mathematics. Whenever he couldn't be found dragging out in town, he satisfied his escapist desires by sleep. Hence, he was a typical midshipman. While at Navy, his time was split between batt football, company fieldball and softball on the athletic field, and overloads on the scholastic side.

Impulsive, outgoing, and good-natured, Pat could always be relied upon to be a good addition to any group. We are sure that with his capacities and qualities he will be an excellent addition to the Navy upon graduation.

JOHN PATRICK SCOTT III

STEPHAN JOHN SEUFER

Coming to the Naval Academy from a Norfolk, Virginia, high school, Steve calls home any place his Navy family happens to be. On the athletic field he showed varied interests, participating in cross country, crew, volleyball and knockabout sailing. A hard worker Steve always stood near the top of his class, his preference and talents directed toward the liberal side of academics. A tremendous organizer, he was very active in the BAC, manager of several intramural sports, and was really faced with only one problem while at Navy—getting people to listen to his poetry which he was known to strike off at any odd moment of the day. A congenial straight-shooting fellow, we expect great success from Steve, and wish him well wherever he goes in the fleet.

ROGER SHERMAN

After spending a year at Cornell University in Ithaca, Rog entered the Academy to pursue his ambition of becoming a Naval Officer. Motivated by a persistent desire to attain future goals, Rog devoted considerable time and effort toward academics, yet he managed to participate in several extracurricular activities including the Class Improvement Committee and those pertaining to brigade organization. Throughout his four years, Rog proved himself to be a fierce competitor in both varsity 150# football and battalion lacrosse. His desire to win made him an outstanding leader on the playing field. Rog's determination to always do his best, coupled with a well-rounded personality, will make him an outstanding officer and individual in his service career.

Down the channel at emergency flank, steamed "31 Knot," B. J. Smith at the conn of his lively YP, "Beerfoam". A native of Michigan, Bernie has lived most of his life in West Palm Beach, Florida. Though he is planning to become a naval aviator, Bernie worked very hard to qualify for his YP command. Known to almost everyone simply as "B.J.", Bernie never fails to greet all he meets with a cheery 'hello'. To find a harder worker than Bernie, would require a very careful search indeed; and many were the times that his lights burned late, when everyone else had retired. Having excelled in high school, one year of college, and a brief tour of naval service before coming to the Academy, Bernie always strove for that same excellence as a midshipman. Though an avid fisherman, Bernie also devoted a considerable amount of his spare time to readings on aviation and books of a professional nature. Bernie is recognized as a very capable leader by all who know him, and his sincere devotion to the naval service will undoubtedly enable him to become a very fine naval officer.

BERNARD J. SMITH

WILLIAM JOHN WIDHELM JR.

John came to the Naval Academy directly from Barrington, Illinois, aspiring to be an Academy graduate like his father. It seemed as if John spent every afternoon in the wrestling loft—and it paid off as he won his first varsity letter in his Youngster year after decisively defeating his Army opponent. Always interested in science and mathematics, John entered the overload program as a nuclear science major but promptly switched to mathematics and gained his major in that field. John's intelligence and ability to get along with people should make him a fine Naval officer.

Brad came to the Academy from Cortez, Colorado, directly out of high school where he was very active in sports. Being an outdoorsman, he turned his attention to the rifle team and was an active member during his four years. In the fall he rowed for Battalion crew and in the spring he played Company squash and softball. Brad's extracurricular activities included the Public Relations Committee, the USNA Gun Club, and liberty. Rarely could he be found inside the wall whenever the gates were open. Still with all his running around he found time to study. He wore stars since Plebe year but had difficulty making the Superintendent's List due to the Form Two. Pursuing a major in aeronautical engineering, Brad hopes for a flying career, preferably in the Marine Corps. Wherever he may be stationed, the Naval Service is going to have an officer with a high devotion to duty.

BRADLEY R. BAIRD

ROBERT MASKELL BROWN

Brownie came to Canoe U. after a year at Columbian Prep and a year at Stevens College. Although Bob was an army brat, he soon found Navy life was for him. An athlete in baseball and track at Longbranch High School, he channeled his athletic prowess toward soccer, and he soon won himself a berth on the varsity soccer team. Athletics being his central interest at the Academy, he found no trouble with academics. Although he could often be found reading a novel or in the pad, he was always close to Supt's List. The Pooch's amiable smile and easy going personality won him many friends both male and female. During the summer, Bob could always be found in the nearest O'club and thoroughly enjoyed his moments away from the gray walls. On free afternoons, Brownie could always be found on the new bowling alleys improving his already outstanding average. Bob's varied interests, keen intellect, and love for a good time will assure him of success in whatever field of service he chooses.

HUGH MICHAEL DOHERTY

Immediately after graduating from high school, "Crash" stowed his James Bond thrillers and headed for the shores of the Severn. Although experiencing a little trouble plebe summer with ship handling, hence the nickname "Crash", the call of the sea was always strong ever since he took to oars of the plebe crew team. At first not too adept in the water, he overcame this to such a degree as to become interested in the silent service, both academically and career-wise. "Crash" with his dry New England humor, found only one continuous fault with the Academy and that was the entire ever present "system". But there is still hope; "Things will be different when I'm CNO", he says. Good luck, Crash, in whatever branch you choose.

GEORGE ARTHUR EATON JR.

Although homeported on the shores of the Hudson, George overcame the enticements of that "other" service academy and heeded the call of the sea. After spending plebe year in the old eighth company, he was still able to emerge with a fine sense of humor and could be depended on to be in any or all of the study hour antics. While it could never be said that George failed to take advantage of a good deal, he always knew the proper time for serious action. It is this ability to buckle down uncomplainingly when the going got rough and to play hard when the time was right that will make George a sure success in his chosen field and his sports of scuba diving and water skiing. Good luck to our only day student!

James hails from Lake Worth, Florida, where he brought his many assorted academic and athletic skills to the Academy. Always a stalwart on the company heavyweight football team, James was a natural leader on the field. With his superior academic ability in the math and science fields, his room was always a haven to his classmates in academic troubles. Many nights were spent unbegrudgingly going over seemingly impossible math and weapons problems for his classmates. Upon graduation, Jim hopes to apply his engineering and science ability to the best use for the Navy. Jim will be missed in Bancroft Hall but the Navy will gain a valuable asset.

JAMES E. GOLDEN

CHARLES MITCHELL HENDERSON JR.

Mitch came to the Naval Academy from Coronado High School. While at the Academy, he excelled in academics and always was active in extracurricular activities. A product of the Old Eighth, he has always been a hard worker and a hard but fair upperclassman. He earned his numerals in Plebe Swimming, played a hard game of water polo, and harassed the boating public as a member of the Sailing Squadron. Youngster Year, due to the semi-annual migration of our class, he came to the "Friendly Fourteenth." At this time he decided to major in Mathematics and proceeded to take an overload in English Literature. This same year he worked on the Staff of Reef Points and the next year he assumed the position of Editor. In this capacity he worked diligently and produced a revised and very successful book. He has always been a good sport and a constant source of amusement, like the time he sent his whole pillow to the laundry. His pillow case was returned but he has never had occasion to use it since. He was usually good natured about this sort of thing but if he did get upset, you had to watch out for the flying cup of water. His other interests include skiing, girls, an occasional drink, and the mountains, not necessarily in that order. His drive and friendly and easy going manner always have and will continue to stand him in good stead and he is certain to be successful in his chosen field.

Hailing from the Keystone state, John came to the Naval Academy through the Naval Reserve after attending Lafayette College and Bullis Prep. Although failing to set any academic records, he applied himself to everything with a diligence and thoroughness that was to be his hallmark. His two year running battle with the language department will long be remembered on both ends of Stribling Walk. Once settled down to the Academy routine, it wasn't long before he acquired the name "Hungry" for his insatiable desire for food. He had the knack of finding food (if there was food around) both on the tables and in the hall. Second only to his ability to scavage for chow, was his ability to swing a mean atlas. John carried his strong sense of competition onto the athletic field, and played Plebe and J.V. soccer as well as company soccer. Cross-country and volleyball also occupied his interest in the afternoons. John's quiet character, sincerity, drive and determination are sure to make him a credit to the service and to his country.

HENRY BAYLOR KEESE

Hank, better known to the members of the Brigade as 'Goose', arrived at USNA well acquainted with military life. As an Air Force junior originally from Texas, he has called many places home including: Puerto Rico, London, and Wiesbaden, Germany. After graduating from high school in Arlington, Va., he spent a year at Columbian Prep preparing for the rigors of Academy academics, which to this day continue to plague him with nightmares. When not busy trying to keep ahead of the steam and skinny depts., Hank displayed the perseverance and strong competitive spirit which marked all of his undertakings by participating in plebe and varsity crew, company cross country, and playing on the Second Batt Rugby Team. Outside of the Academy, Hank's interests were many and varied, ranging from enjoying good music to avidly pursuing the thrill packed sport of Skydiving. He leaves behind a somewhat famous, or infamous as the case may be, record in the field of social activities being a firm believer in a man's occasional need for 'wine, woman, and song.'

JOHN PRICE HUNT III

CHARLES WILLIAM JONES

After two years in college and the Navy, Charlie Jones came to the Naval Academy with a broad knowledge of life, and the determination to succeed. Hailing from land-locked Iowa, Charlie brought with him many years of experience in dramatics, and quickly established himself as an outstanding member of the Masqueraders. His sensitive and talented interpretations of a major role in both THE ANDERSONVILLE TRIAL and THE INSPECTOR GENERAL will long be remembered, as well as his many contributions to the Masqueraders.

Never one to sweat the system, when he wasn't studying a play, Charlie could always be counted on for a trip to the bowling alleys or a quick appraisal of the world situation, although he occasionally took enough time to insure his place on the Superintendent's list. Those who knew Charlie will always remember his quick wit, good judgement, and seemingly effortless management of details. When he leaves the Academy, the Navy will gain a dedicated and talented addition to its officer corps.

ROBERT ALLAN KILLION

Bob was born into the Navy in New York City and since that time his four years on the Severn proved to be his longest stay in one place. On a presidential appointment, he came to the Academy straight out of a Navy high school in the Philippine Islands. In addition to his studies, Bob found time to hold down a top position on the fencing team where he found particular pleasure working over various professors and officers, as well as midshipmen, with his saber. He was a member of the Antiphonal Choir and the production manager for the class Ring and Crest Committee. His professional attitude and love for the service shall take him far in the service of his country.

THOMAS HARTLEY KINDER

Right out of high school in one of Chicago's suburbs, Tom braved the rigors of Plebe year in the "Savage Sixteenth." Setting his sights on Admiral Rickover's Nuclear Power Program, he worked hard to attain a high academic standing and wore stars on Youngster year on. A good book, a soft pad, and a warm blanket gave Tom many moments of pleasure at the Academy, but at weekend parties he became a veritable tiger, lending his quick wit to liven up many a scene. When the call came for his help on the intramural fields, Tom could be seen helping his company at soccer, lightweight football, and softball. The Navy will find him a valuable man with his excellent academic ability and analytical mind.

CARL DAVID LAWLEY JR.

Carl David, more affectionately known as Tecumseh, turned down scholarships to several colleges after graduation from Cedar Clift High School, Camp Hill, Pa., in order to pursue academic advancement at USNA. A scholar, athlete, and high grease man, Dave has distinguished himself as a hard worker in any endeavor he has undertaken. Plebe year he played football all year around, but youngster year channeled his athletic prowess toward rugby, a rugged version of football. A fierce competitor, Dave proved himself to be a valuable asset to his teammates. Academics came easy for Dave, and he earned himself a spot among the top ten academically while pursuing a major in German. A steadfast determination and unique ambition will surely make for smooth sailing in his naval career.

WILLIAM F. McKENNA JR.

After graduating from Gonzaga High School in 1961, Willie came to Canoe U. for four years of fun and fame, although, with a liberal education in high school, he realized that he would be leaving Shelley, Keats, and Frost behind, for Bernoulli, Newton, and Volta.

After a comparatively snap Plebe Summer (13 mornings of early exercise) he entered a supposedly fruit company. However, the upperclass felt that his Plebe Summer had not been comprehensive enough and proceeded to let him know about it every chance they got. The Academic Department also found that he was a little behind the rest of the world. In summary, it was a war with many fronts that year; as a matter of fact about every front in the book.

After 265 demerits and one re-exam, June 6 finally rolled around. Willie's summer was spent in that romantic port of Mayport, Fla. After the blessed change of companies from Plebe Year, he did what every sensible Youngster should, roll up into a little ball and play dead. At the end of first semester he was found deficient in Physics and proceeded to take all the P-Works over again in the form of a Re-exam. He was one of a lucky 12 in 22.

In the world of sports, Willie has been on the Volleyball, Boxing, 150 lbs. Football, Softball, Cross-Country, and Soccer Teams. As can be seen, he has made up for a lack of proficiency by his diversification. He has also sung second tenor in the Catholic Choir. Each of his classmates wishes Willie the best in his military career.

Mitch arrived at USNA from the Blue Ridge Mountains of North Carolina after spending a year at N. C. State where he was initiated into Sigma Pi fraternity. An easy-going Southerner, he soon won many friends among his classmates. Interested in extracurricular activities, Mitch could always be counted on to put in a conscientious effort in anything he undertook. After winning his plebe numerals in gymnastics, he devoted his athletic interests to company sports such as volleyball and touch football. Mitch managed to keep in touch with the southern way of life by attending the North Carolina Azalea Festival two years in a row, where he found himself an escort to some of the finest North Carolina offers in Southern beauty and charm. After spending his boyhood on a farm and riding horseback at every opportunity, Mitch found it hard to forget this interest and the weekends often found him heading for the nearest stables. A marked interest in ships and the Navy helped Mitch decide on his goals early in life, and any branch in which he chooses to serve will be guaranteed a fine officer and gentleman.

JOHN BULLARD MITCHELL JR.

JAMES R. MORFORD III

After graduating from high school in Wilmington, Delaware, Jim, known just as well by the name "Mo", spent two years in the Marine Corps. It was here perhaps that he gained his independent and self-assured personality. Jim is not an easy person to keep track of once he starts moving. Many a girl will testify to this, as will anyone who has seen him leaving Bancroft Hall under the burden of all the gear he needs for a weekend of sky diving. Jim's daily routine was different at times, these times being at one or two in the morning when he was often seen nursing a mug of coffee and a book. It is probably this ability to study at any time of day or night which explains the apparent ease with which Jim kept one jump ahead of his studies.

Short in height, little Jim is tall in character and will impress those he works with in the fleet just as much as he has impressed his friends here at the Academy.

RONALD NEWTON NICHOLS

Ron is a product of the golden sunshine and easy living of Southern California. He started his college career with one year at UCLA before coming to the Academy. While at UCLA, he participated in basketball and rowed for the Bruin's strong freshman crew team. With his eyes on bigger and better things, "Nick" reported to the Academy to start a successful four year stay. His love for the sea being paramount, Nick concentrated his efforts toward the Navy crew team. He soon established himself as a good oarsman and was a member of the team which won the national championship in 1963. Besides his athletic ability, Ron was known for his easy going, friendly personality. He was slow to anger, capable, dependable, and swung a mean Atlas. Ron performed just as well in academics as he did in athletics, and had no trouble making "star" grades while at the Academy. His level headedness and his sincere desire should lead him to a bright and rewarding career.

Although born in New Jersey and having lived in Guam, Jack considers himself a native of Seattle. When not busy vehemently defending the West Coast, "Ole" can be found on the Academy's intramural fields excelling in cross country, softball, soccer, or his favorite sport, fieldball. An outstanding athlete in Seattle's Shoreline High School, Jack always adds both ability and spirit to any sports team. While not known for his academic achievements, Jack has managed to keep himself one step ahead of the academic department. Following his father's example, Jack sees a service career in his future. Whatever Jack intends to do, his warm personality and winning spirit are sure to bring him success.

JACK LELAND OLSON

Paul, a product of the New Mexico desert and Severn School, found immediate success as a Plebe in "Old Eighth". The grumbling, growling upperclassmen found him a tough egg to crack, yet Paul always managed to keep them hopping.

P.F.'s academy years were busy, but rewarding. Academics, though efficiently and respectfully handled, did not consume too much of Paul's time, for extracurricular chores often reared their faces; among them: sailing, the YP squadron (command status in one year), editorship of Reef Points, various class committees, varsity gymnastics, girl(s) . . . and not to be forgotten, a unique weapons project. Many trips were made to Robbers' Row in search of rabbit food . . . subtle tidbits to keep his fighting bunnies in proper trim for the fiery laser bombardments which were hurled at their unprotected ears. How inhumane!

Yet, busy as he was, Paul still had time to teach Sunday School, impersonate the OD, run WooPoo's, drink coffee, drink whiskey . . . on infinitum. Thus, Paul's four years by the sea were active, but light-hearted, dedicated yet lively. His career years ahead are sure to be just as profitable as those past . . . profitable for himself, the Navy, and his shipmates.

PAUL FREDERICK ROGERS

DEAN DELWIN SEDAR

Rochester, New York, is the place Mike calls home, and shortly (three days) after completing a successful high school career at Aquinas Institute there he came to his new home on the banks of the Severn. Since arriving, Mike has added much to the life of the Brigade in many aspects. Immediately he nailed down a starting guard slot on the plebe football team, and worked steadily upwards behind the green fence after that. However, he always found time for his other two choice pastimes, partying and logging time in the sack. Always armed with a quick smile and ever ready to lend a helping hand, he has won many friends and will surely continue to do so. This winning way carried over to the female gender too, for Mike was never without a date when the time came. He never took academic work too seriously, but got through with a minimum amount of close calls and the most fun that could be had while living within the confines of Mother Bancroft. It was natural that Mike, with his appetite, should choose the Navy with its reputation for good food. Mike should have no trouble being a success and will be certain to make many friends during his service career.

MICHAEL FORD RILEY

Casper, Wyoming's envoy to the Naval Academy, Dean quickly made friends with his pleasant nature and enthusiasm. Outstanding athletic ability enabled Dean to make the plebe swimming team as well as validate wrestling, gymnastics and swimming for youngster year. In addition Dean was Brigade Badminton Champion as a plebe. Dean's attitude toward academics was reflected by the increase in his class standing each year. Extra-curricular activities were not overlooked as Dean was a member of the antiphonal choir for four years. A regular on the "drag circuit", Dean attacked the task of raising the morale of the local feminine populace. Dean greatly enjoyed his aviation summer training and has definite inclinations toward the "wild blue yonder". Whichever branch of the Navy Dean chooses will certainly benefit from his presence.

HARRY LOUIS SHACKELFORD

Harry came to the Academy after spending a very happy year at the University of North Carolina. Harry's greatest interest was always the sports page which never seemed to carry the Southern scores that interested him. I'm sure this was the only thing that ever upset this easy going Southerner who was always ready to sit in on a bull session. It was Harry's native ability in this field that always managed to net him a high grade in the English department. While sports were his primary interest, he certainly enjoyed a good party and during the various summer programs could always be found in the nearest Officer's Club. Harry was active in intramural sports such as handball and touch football, although he was known to hold Maryland winters on Hospital Point in contempt, being accustomed to the mild Eastern North Carolina weather year-round at his home. It has been said that Harry was the only Midshipman at the Academy who could make a three syllable word out of "yes", but his genuine Southern drawl and his winning personality will enable him to make many new friends no matter what branch of the service he chooses, just as he has here at the Academy.

Rick is from Royal Oak, Michigan, where he attended Kimball High School. He began his college education at Michigan State where he studied political science. After he came to the Academy he became active in the Portuguese club and the Log staff. Rick's main interests are in aviation, hockey and racket sports and he has been on the Brigade championship tennis team. Rick has never been known for his academic prowess in the sciences and his close calls with the 'Steam' department have amazed everyone. He is one of the bright spots in the company and keeps everyone smiling.

RICHARD J. SHARPE

CRAIG MORGAN TAYLOR

Coming from number two in his class at San Juan Capistrano High School, Craig started his career at Navy Tech. From the very first he applied himself, and maintained a high average through the following four years, remaining on the Supt.'s list every semester with star grades part of the time. Craig applied himself in the field of sports as well. He was on the plebe track team and ran varsity track for a year before he turned his sights to company intramurals in fieldball, cross-country, and softball. Nor did his endeavors stop with the confines of Bancroft Hall. Most every weekend found him entertaining some lovely young lady. His charm, quick wit, and pleasant personality kept him in good supply of drags. Known for his high sense of values, consciousness of fair play, and level headedness at all times, Craig could always be counted on to get a job done, and done well. Being the best all-around man anyone could know, Craig will have no problems with whatever the future may bring.

Chip came to Navy right after high school after spending the earlier years of his life in cold San Francisco.

While at the Academy Chip was actively involved in Company Cross Country, Hand Ball, and Batt Lacrosse. He participated in Scuba Club and Foreign Relations Club. His academic zeal is evident from his sudden desire to get a Math major in two years; this required double overloads most of the time. Next to the sun and California, Chip placed his love for people. He always had a big, beaming smile for everyone and these qualities of friendliness and happiness should aid him in his future quests. Whether Navy air or Admiral Rickover's Submarines will occupy his time after graduation is hard to tell. Either way the big question is "will he get the XKE he has dreamed about for four years?"

CARL HOWARD ALLEN JR.

ROGER ALLEN ASBURY

CONRAD C. BEST

Having lived many places, "Rog" extols the virtues of Santa Barbara, California. An outstanding high school record, both academically and athletically, easily opened the portals of USNA to him. Rog brought to the Academy a combination of versatility and determination seldom seen. Strong academically and a mainstay of the crew team—which led to competition in The Council of International Military Sports in Sweden—Rog still found time to satiate his passion for literature, classical music, and art. Ingenuity and talent enabled Rog, as Art Editor of the "Splinter", to assist in making this publication a credit to the Brigade. He approached this job, as all endeavors, with a determination that guaranteed its success. A love for the sea engendered in Rog an interest in oceanography. Technical competence and desire to succeed will make Rog an invaluable asset to the Navy.

Connie, as he was affectionately known, came to USNA from his home town of Leechburg, Penna. After a relatively hard plebe year, he settled down to the challenge of youngster year. It was then that he earned the nickname "mattress back", a name he lived up to the rest of his stay here. When Connie wasn't gaining weight, he was trying to lose it. He must have set some kind of a record for the number of diets started. He looks forward to a rewarding lifetime career.

GORDON ALLEN EDWARDS

Gordie came to USNA straight from Burlingame High School. He played "jayvee" football through second class year with a slight interruption for the removal of his spleen. Gord was more adept at swimming and bolstered the battalion water polo team. A real "wheeler-dealer", Gordie stayed avidly engaged in the stock market and was regarded as USNA's authority on stock matters. Academics were no problem for Gordie and consequently he didn't miss too many parties. His drags were many and scattered, but he now seems to have found his OAO. Always looking for a unique way of doing things, Gordie should be able to use his wit in whatever career he chooses.

STEPHEN JOHN ERICKSON

Hailing from the state of Washington, Steve comes here after graduation from R. A. Long High School in Longview. With a fine record in both academics and athletics in high school, he had little trouble adapting himself to the rigors of life at the Academy. Steve's athletic talent was varied as he was always looking for a new sport to master. He has been a member of the plebe squash team and various intramural teams ranging from gymnastics to Brigade Boxing. Other interests which captured his interest at the Academy were the Antiphonal Choir and NAFAC. Not having had much trouble with academics, Steve has enjoyed a good class standing, and has taken advantage of the overload program in the field of computers. Steve's amiable personality and his enthusiasm for life are valuable assets which promise him an interesting and successful career in the armed forces.

Craig, an "Army brat" born in Vinton, Iowa, came to the Naval Academy from Annandale High School in Annandale, Virginia. Soon after the start of plebe year his father, a colonel in the army, was transferred to Hawaii where Craig became a little brown god and learned how to surf. He spent a busy plebe year in "Savage Sixteenth" Company, and he carried lessons well learned with him to the Thirteenth Company at the beginning of youngster year. There his pleasant personality and exceptional professional knowledge made him a stand-out in the class. Craig's outstanding sport was basketball where second class year he sparked the company team to the regimental championship. The same year he broke the field house intramural record in the high jump in competition for the Second Battalion track team. Craig, a star man and an extensive overloader since youngster year, majored in aeronautical engineering in preparation for a career as an NAO. Craig is a hard worker, a good organizer, and a sure success wherever he serves his country after graduation.

CRAIG LEWIS ETKA

STEVEN EDWARDS FABRY

Steve has taken a long hard route to make the Navy a career. After graduation from high school in Albert Lea, Minnesota, he joined the Navy to see the world and ended up at Bethesda Naval Hospital. From there he went to NAPS for one year of concentrated study in preparation for the academy. At the academy Steve has worked hard and continuously at academics, finding time to increase his knowledge through elective courses in government. During his free time Steve has been active in many clubs and organizations in the brigade. Steve's willingness to help anyone with "the common cold" has earned him the name "Doc." The fleet will regain a valuable member when Steve returns upon graduation.

Jim, upon graduating from Denison High, entered S.M.U. Although he was quite satisfied with the life there, he turned toward the Academy at the end of his first year to pursue his football talents. After entering the Academy he proved to be a valuable asset, for he was best known for his talents on the gridiron. He was placed on several All-American teams and won various other honors for his achievements. When not engaged in football, he could be found on the fieldball field or the lacrosse field. He also used his talents in pursuing the opposite sex and it was a rare occasion when one found him in his room studying during the weekends. His easygoing nature won him many friends and this should be a valuable asset to him in the future.

JAMES KIRK FREEMAN

JAMES GISLASON HART

Jim Hart entered the Academy on a life-long dream of a military career. He hails from Missoula, Montana, where he spent his earlier years doing such things as motorcycle racing and hunting deer and elk. Still an avid sports fan, he loves parachute jumping and scuba diving. His main desire is to join the Marine Corps or UDT and stay for thirty. Behind a seemingly hard exterior of opinions, however, there lurks a fondness of soft jazz and philosophy. His room was always a haven for lovers of good music and spirited conversation.

LESLIE BRUCE HERMAN

When he finished his freshman year at San Diego State College in California, Les pulled up his stakes and came east to the Academy. It seemed to be a natural choice since his father had spent thirty years in the Navy and his brother is a graduate of the Academy. Following a bout with plebe year academics, he settled down to the old grind and managed to get himself on the Superintendent's List his upperclass years. Many afternoons found him out on the field with the company lightweight football team, a sport which replaced his plebe year sport, winter cross country. After graduation Les hopes to continue to make his life by and on the water with many years in the Navy.

Hailing from Atlanta, Georgia, Tony left home after graduating from Rome High School in Rome, Georgia, to enlist in the Navy. In 1960, after having attained a rate of yeomen third class, he entered the Naval Academy Prep School at Bainbridge, Maryland. "The spider," as he is affectionately known, led the NAPS tennis team to many a victory. The following year Tony entered USNA as a member of the "hard-nosed" sixteenth company. Following a touch-and-go battle with Chemistry during plebe year, Tony through diligent application managed to avoid the academic "doghouse" for the remaining three years. His eloquent vocabulary and literary proficiency put him near the top of the class in English, History and Government. A stellar performer for the plebe gymnastics squad on the still rings, Tony went on to participate in intramural gym, tennis, squash, and volleyball. A lively sense of humor, a warm, easygoing personality and a wealth of experience mark Tony as an invaluable addition to whichever branch of the Navy he selects.

ANTHONY WILLIAM JOHNS

BRUCE HOLLADAY KENTON

Bruce entered the Academy after a year at New Mexico Military Institute, bringing with him the same competitive attitude and easy going personality which is well known to all of his classmates. During the fall, he could always be found behind the "green fence", getting ready to do or die for Navy on Saturday afternoons. Besides football, which Bruce played all four years, fieldball and sleeping were his next favorites—well, that is if a certain high school sweetheart is not mentioned. Although he did not break any records studying, you could usually find his name on the Superintendent's List. Bruce has not quite made the choice of a career yet, but whatever it may be, he will undoubtedly continue the success he has achieved thus far.

WILLIAM CLAUDE LAWLESS

Claiming residence in Boston, but actually coming from the heart of Dixie, Bill entered the Academy with the class of 1964. It didn't take long for "Willie" to realize that there were many good deals in store for '65, so he was quick to jump on the bandwagon by turning back into the class of 1965 at the end of his third class year. Willie quickly became well liked by all, as his friendly, outgoing personality won him many friends in his new class. He was a true Southern gentleman and a more avid waver of the Confederate flag was hard to find. Bill was far more than a fair weather friend and could always be counted on in a time of need. His many interests at the Academy included sailing, basketball, the French Club, and the blue trampoline. Bill soon proved his sailing ability and was given command of one of the Academy's new Shields class sailing boats. When not engaged in sailing activities, he could be found on the athletic field participating in a variety of company sports. Willie's easy going personality and sincere attitude should prove valuable assets in a long and successful Naval career.

JOHN DAVID MADDOX

Dave took his time in finding his way to the Naval Academy. Joining the Navy after high school he was an outstanding student at sub and nuclear power school before the Navy realized that they better make him an officer. At the Academy Dave's ability with the books didn't wane. Overloading in literature as well as technological subjects, his tremendous respect and enthusiasm for his education gave him the air of a genuine seeker of wisdom and truth. With broad interests including a fund of knowledge and ability in all sports, Dave's plebe and youngster years were spent with the fencing team and later making color points for his company. As long as ability and perseverance generate success, Dave will succeed wherever he chooses to endeavor.

CHARLES HENRY MORRISON III

Charlie was born into a Navy family in Bremerton, Washington. The lure of the Naval Academy flowed in his veins ever since he was four years old. Charlie comes from a long line of Academy graduates. He graduated from Severn School in Severna Park in 1960, but failed to receive an appointment. He attended the University of Rhode Island for one year, keeping his eyes focused on the Academy. By the time selection for the next entering class rolled around, Charlie had outdone himself. He was qualified under three different categories, one of them being the Marine Corps Reserve, but came in under the 30th District of California.

Charlie formed his opinion of plebe year, or rather had it formed for him, as a member of the "Savage Sixteenth." He has carried with him the lessons learned during that year. During his stay at the Academy, Charlie participated in battalion wrestling, squash, and lacrosse, excelling in all three.

Charlie will become a proud wearer of the Marine green upon graduation. The Corps could not ask for a man more dedicated, more loyal, or more interested in his professional advancement. In the years to follow, his classmates will no doubt be hearing of his accomplishments.

MICHAEL JEFFREY NICHOLSON

Originally from Seattle, Washington, Mike, as a Navy junior, has known many homes. Before coming to USNA, Mike attended Highland High School in Albuquerque, New Mexico, and Coronado High School in Coronado, California, where he excelled in tennis and basketball. He has continued to be active in sports, being a member of the plebe tennis team and a stalwart on the intramural tennis and squash teams. "Nick" has also gained renown as an authority on miscellaneous facts. The plebe who could stump him on general knowledge is yet to be found. After experiencing a bit of trouble with Physics, Nick has raised his class standing and has taken advantage of the overload program to further his talent in the field of Navigation. Nick's conscientious and persevering manner along with his easy-going personality mark him as an outstanding leader and friend. Nick will have little trouble in being a success in whatever line of endeavor the Fleet has to offer.

PETER DAVID REINIGER

Pete came to the Naval Academy from the hallowed halls of Lafayette College, where he minored in Army ROTC. Although Pete still considers Reading, Pennsylvania, his home town, he often winters in Florida, taking particular pleasure in water skiing. While at the Academy Pete has displayed outstanding athletic ability, participating in such company sports as cross country and softball. His claim to fame was wielding the big stick for the 'A' softball team. Peter, however, distinguished himself mostly in being able to allocate every free moment to the pad, while at the same time still maintaining a good academic average. The Navy will find it has received a man with determination, ability, and a desire to do the best job possible.

This "old man" is a fine example of what the Fleet can turn out if it tries hard enough. Kurt came to the banks of the Severn via the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, where he was a member of Sigma Delta Omega Fraternity and, by law, part of the local ROTC unit, and via NAPS after three years of service as an aviation electronics technician. Never one to worry needlessly about academics, he nevertheless always managed to avoid trouble in that area and to attain a good standing in the class. In addition to his interest in the company of a pretty, young lady, Kurt was a consistent participant in intramural sports and will long be remembered for his efforts on the cross-country course. His good nature and sincerity won him many friends and made him an upperclassman to be liked rather than feared. Kurt hopes to return to Naval Aviation; but, whatever field he enters, his unfailing patience, insight into human nature, and capacity for hard work will make him a credit to the service and to his country.

KURT SCHILDKNECHT

DENNIS RAY SPURGEON

Coming to the Academy from Austin High School, Austin, Minnesota, Denny soon met the challenge of academics and worked his way up to where he now stands very near the top of his class. Not satisfied with the regular curriculum, he sought to round out his education by taking several overloads in four different departments. Denny brought with him to the Academy a great enthusiasm for golf, and as a result when it became time for the plebe team to play their first match, he found himself playing the no. 1 position. Fond of a good workout he also performed well for Company and Battalion intramurals. In addition he found time to handle the circulation department and help handle the business department of Trident Magazine. Denny's only downfall came when he discovered that the surrounding area had more to offer than scenery. After that time certain of the fairer sex occupied the majority of his weekend time at the expense of all else. His personality, abilities, and desire to succeed have made him a top midshipman and should ensure his success after graduation.

Steve, sometimes referred to as Bo, came to the Naval Academy straight out of high school from the South Side of Chicago. Besides spending plebe year trying to adjust to life away from Chicago Steve was starring in Football and Lacrosse. The biggest surprise to those who did not know him was when grades came out and not only did Steve make the Superintendent's list but he began wearing stars also. His tremendous desire to be the best at whatever he attempts has shown up on the athletic field and in academics and will continue to place him in the top of the field which he chooses upon graduation.

STEVEN FLORINDA SZABO

TIMOTHY WALLACE TEDFORD

Tim came to the Academy from the Confederate soil of Newbury, South Carolina. His introduction to military life was administered by the last of the "hardnosed old corps": the sixteenth company. However, between come-arounds and other vigorous methods of indoctrination, Tim managed to elude the "unsat" list in all courses (save a slight brush with plebe English) during his tenure at the academy. Tim is renowned for his knowledge of the Civil War and literature, both past and present. In addition to his academic pursuits, he has earned a name of distinction on the intramural battlefields of such sports as volleyball, fieldball, football, and badminton. His perseverance, initiative, and will to win marked him as a dangerous opponent for his foe on the sports field and established his position as a valuable team member. His imagination, love of life, and unquenchable thirst for truth along with an amiable disposition and warm personality will make it easy for him to join the ranks of the Navy team of which he has dreamed for so long.

RICHARD L. VESEY

Entering the Academy just three weeks after graduating from McDonald High School, Rich was soon caught up in the "fun" of plebe year. After a year of plebe football he turned his attention to intramurals and could be seen giving his all in both company and battalion sports. Never too fond of books he was still able to maintain a respectable average, and after a two year struggle with Italian he was never seriously bothered by academics. During his week-day free periods he would generally be found in the blue trampoline conserving his energy. Never one to waste a weekend he could always be found dragging, and each weekend brought a new girl. With ambition for a career in the Navy, Rich should prove to be a very capable officer and a credit to the Navy.

Jeff left the thriving metropolis of Kittery, Maine, to enter another whirlwind of activity at the Naval Academy. He was one of the few people who actually took advantage of his opportunities while at the Academy. Thus, he continually made the Superintendent's List, earned "stars", and stood at the top of the class; his major field of interest was physics though he often diversified his elective courses. This record was all the more outstanding due to Jeff's constant involvement in "Bac biz" and numerous other extracurricular activities. However, Jeff wasn't always working; he was a veritable scourge of Batt. tennis leading his team to repeated successes. Jeff's usual quietness was offset by a sharp and inventive sense of humor which made him interesting and pleasurable company, as can be attested by his numerous friends. He is sure to be a welcome and successful addition to his chosen career.

JEFFREY E. CALLAHAN

MICHAEL JOHN CONCANNON

JOHN PATRICK FLYNN

Mike came directly to USNA from high school in Scarborough, Maine, with an already avid interest in aviation. "Con" is one of the few people in the country who can boast of having their pilot's license at the tender age of sixteen. He knows everything about every aircraft that was ever built and can identify one by simply hearing it fly overhead. After coming to Navy "Con" found a new love in history overloads, especially the history of Russia. With Supt.'s List grades Mike doesn't have to worry much about academics and spends most study hours reading different history books. With his ability to get things done quickly and efficiently Mike should be a welcome addition to the Navy officer corps.

After two years at Texas A&M College and two years as a submarine sailor John made his appearance at USNA. And, although he wouldn't sign that paper again for all the money in the world, he is really quite proud of sticking it out.

Almost any afternoon of his four year confinement at the Academy you could find him in the fencing loft. Every weekend you could find him dragging as John firmly maintained that liberty time belonged to him and was not an extended study period.

So with head bloody but unbowed John sets forth hoping to find his Navy career more enjoyable than the preparation for that career turned out to be.

ROBERT EARL FORMAL

A good high school background, a strong sense of duty and responsibility, a friendly disposition, and a saving sense of humor have enabled Bob to leave his mark on the Naval Academy and his associates. Whenever his assistance was sought, he was always ready to lend a hand. A difficult chemistry electives program did not impede Bob from being placed on the Superintendent's list frequently. His affinity for scholarly endeavor has been evidenced by very substantial grades. Sportswise, Bob has been an asset to any team he played for at the Naval Academy. In his second class year he developed a keen interest in Rugby, helping his team to a Brigade championship. His activities on the Severn have included working on the football float committee, the brigade amateur radio station, and amassing an amazing amount of outside reading. He was instrumental in putting on quite a few of the popular music shows during his four years here. The Navy will benefit indeed from the loyalty and dedication that Bob will bring to his career of service.

JOHN KERR FYFE

A Navy Junior from Norfolk, Jay was a natural for the Naval Academy. Following his graduation from Norfolk Academy Jay prepped at Hampden-Sydney College for one year before coming to Annapolis. He continued his outstanding high school athletic record as a halfback for the Plebe football team. His upperclass years were spent on Zanka's team (the 150's) where he received his N-star as a segundo on the 1963 intercollegiate championship team. Jay's real love, however, was rugby, the British version of football. Regardless of the weather he could be found scrumming around on Farragut Field. Jay's quick smile and winning personality made him a welcome addition to any group. He is certain to develop into a fine officer in the Navy, where he plans to go Rugby line.

HARRY PITTS HOFFMAN JR.

Harry is a native North Carolinian, hailing from New Bern, but was transplanted to Pennsylvania while a toddler. Bloomsburg High's All State end soon became a gridiron regular at Bullis prep and as a Navy Plebe. Academics never presented any insurmountable barriers to Harry, and he gave up the pigskin to tackle Organic Chemistry as a youngster. In addition to his appreciative eye for a good female figure, he spends a lot of time gazing at the underwater world. He was secretary of the Naval Academy SCUBA Club. A good athlete, he was a worthy addition to company teams and loved the crunching competition of fieldball most, but seldom passed up a blue trampoline workout. His talents include writing, and Harry has been published in the Institute Proceedings as a crusader to open the specialty corps to USNA grads. The Navy will get a versatile, likeable teammate when he joins the long blue line.

MICHAEL DANDRIDGE JACCARD

"Tweet", as he is affectionately called by his classmates, has been intensely interested in Brigade activities, often at the expense of his academics during his four years on the Severn. Chairman of the Brigade float committee, member of the Christmas Card committee, stagehand for dramatic productions, and radio disc jockey have been his sundry avocations. In addition to all of these interests, he has performed well in Varsity lightweight crew as an enthusiastic coxswain. He is well known by most of his classmates, some of whom attended Bullis Prep with him. Grades have sometimes been a problem for Mike, but determination has always pulled him through. This tenacity that he has, Mike uses to good advantage in all that he is involved with. Mike may be short in stature, but he is 135 pounds of romping-stomping steel. The Navy is getting a dedicated officer in the person of Mike, capable of doing whatever he sets his mind to. His affability and winning smile will be his key to success in his chosen profession.

Hailing from the near-by Metropolis of Shady Side Al spent two years in the Airdale Navy before coming to USNA. Here he lived a dare-devil life until one disastrous night midway through youngster year when Navy finally caught up with him. An excellent athlete, Al soon won himself a place on the Varsity Wrestling team and discovered that the "Wing" position on the Rugby team suited his particular talents.

Al spent many hours of liberty looking for the one special girl but has yet to accomplish this goal. His liberal outlook on life and his fine sense of humor make Al an interesting if not spirited debater. Nothing escapes his careful scrutiny and his many escapades have made him a legend to those who know him well.

Graduation will send Al to Pensacola as an imaginative and capable aviator with all the qualifications needed for him to continue along the paths developed here at USNA.

ALBERT OLDER JONES

JOSEPH EDWARD KANE II

Joe "KILLER" Kane came to the Academy straight from high school in his sunny home-state of Florida. People who don't know Joe very well usually get the idea that he's the shy, reserved type, but this illusion is short-lived. He's always the life of any party with his bright, ever-present smile, and sharp sense of humor. Joe has developed into quite an athlete, taking interest in crew, cross-country, and weight-lifting. As far as drags go, Joe plays the field beautifully, and is rarely seen on weekends without an attractive female admirer at his side. I know Joe's personality will carry him far, and that the Navy will be proud to have him as one of its finest Officers.

H. DAVID KIRKPATRICK

Dave, "Kirk", came to us from the sunny state of Florida. Prior to entering the Naval Academy, Dave attended Saint Petersburg Junior College for one year where he excelled in basketball and academics. Since at USNA he has put his athletic prowess to good use participating in both the Varsity and Intramural program. Dave's winning personality has made him many friends and it is a rare weekend when he is not in the company of some lovely member of the opposite sex. "Diamond" Dave's bulging wallet has salvaged many weekends for his wives. Dave has had little trouble with academics while here, although he has participated in such extracurricular activities as Glee Club and choir. In the future, Dave will be a welcome asset to any wardroom and to the Naval Service.

Coming from a Navy family, Clarence has always been motivated toward a career of Naval service. It was this that directed him to Annapolis and has inspired him to excel during his four years as a Midshipman. Clarence, commonly called Bear by his classmates (no one knows why), has always been a rugged athletic competitor, dividing his time among company soccer, cross country, football, and battalion rugby. His strong determination helped his soccer and rugby teams to win the Brigade Championships. Some of Clare's many accomplishments have been: getting a 4.0 on his agility test, completing Army Airborne training, obtaining expert in both rifle and pistol, and losing both his slide rule and raingear in the same week. After graduation Clare plans to end his four year apprenticeship as a "Brown Bagger" and marry his high school sweetheart. Clare's competitive spirit and his strong desire to stay on top will gain for him respect from all with whom he works and will enable him to have a most successful career in the fleet.

CLARENCE KENNETH MILES

Vince hails from Baton Rouge, Louisiana, and his appointment to the Naval Academy was the fulfillment of a long-standing ambition.

Validation of Plebe German gave Vince an opportunity to pursue his academic interests in Science and Mathematics. He was a member of the Sailing Squadron during Plebe and Youngster years before the roll of the drums and the color of Worden Field persuaded him to join the infantry. In order to combat minor illnesses such as colds and weekend ailments, Vince frequently sought the healing powers of the blue trampoline.

Vince's easy-going but firm manner has gained him many friends at Navy and also many admirers among the members of the opposite sex.

His desire to serve his country and the Navy indicate that Vince will undoubtedly have a long and successful career.

ERNEST VINCENT NAHR JR.

DENNIS JOSEPH NEMURA

John Dennis Moynehan, Jr.—Jack—thrifty ole Jack from Johnstown, New York—never one to forget the value of a dollar or remember it either.

A hypochondriac at birth and, although possibly socially retarded since the age of sixteen, Jack makes a welcome addition to any fun group. He is fondly remembered as the creator of the "Moynehan Line," perhaps because of his sylph-like physique.

His loves are snow-skiing and rugby. However, he became unfortunately physically worked out at the age of twenty due to chipped bones, shin splints, calcium deposits, and worst of all size 9-G feet.

Jack handles himself well in any situation and it is a certainty that he will find a great measure of success in any job that he chooses to undertake.

JOHN D. MOYNEHAN JR.

Den, a burly bear from the shores of Lake Erie, hails from the small but productive town of Wickliffe, Ohio. An honor graduate of Wickliffe High School, Den decided to further his education for the benefit of both himself and the Navy. Throughout his four year stay at USNA Den has become one of the most distinguished members of the Class of 1965. A permanent member on the Superintendent's List as well as a "star man". Den has successfully met the challenge of academics here at USNA, although weekends find him far from the fields of study—a routine not easily matched by most midshipmen of his standing. Afternoons during the week find Den busily engaged in a number of activities, not excluding an occasional session on the blue trampoline, nor a trip to Navy's own muscle beach on the second deck of the field house. An outstanding high school athlete, Den has continued to make his mark here with various company sports teams, leaving many a bruised opponent in his wake. Aside from these material attributes, Den displays a warm and welcome manner for everyone he meets. Always a cheery remark for those who are close to him—and there are many—Den is a friend to all. A guy who never says die. Den has worked hard and will continue to do so throughout his career. Whatever his choice of service in the Navy, Den will surely be an asset to that service and those it serves.

Being a Texan and having that flaming red hair that marks his presence in any crowd has been a winning combination for Mike in his four years here at the Academy. Mike is a good competitor and has that strong desire to win that is so necessary to a good Naval Officer. Mike plays a good game of golf and for two and a half years was on the varsity golf team. During his winters Mike has developed into a standout guard on the company 150 pound football team. He also has some talent on the saxophone and played with the NA-10 during Plebe year. Mike's academics are outstanding and at the writing of this article he sports a 4.0 Q.P.R. All in all, Mike sizes up as a fine midshipman and has excellent potential for future success in the naval service.

MICHAEL PIERCE REED

GEORGE BERNARD REYNOLDS

After graduating from Cathedral College Prep School in New York and a year at Manhattan College, George found his way to the Naval Academy. His scholastic background enabled him to take full advantage of the electives program and to complete majors in French and in social studies in his four years by the Severn. Never content with less than his best effort, George's hard work paid off, and he found himself consistently on the Superintendent's List, wearing stars as well. He participated rigorously in brigade affairs—French club, Newman club, Catholic choir, brigade hop committee (co-chairman), ring dance committee, Log staff, and was regarded as a definite "plus" to whatever intramural team he joined. Having developed a mature sense of fairness, a subtle sense of humor, a gracious social presence, an interest in others, and indefatigable physical and mental energy, George's advice was much sought after and well received by peer and subordinate alike. Regardless of what branch of the service he may enter, George will carry with him qualities that destine him to be a valuable asset to the Naval service, an inspiration and example to those with whom he comes in contact, and an unbounded personal success as well.

THOMAS RICHARD SEIGLE

Although his main goal in life was thwarted, that being to become an Army officer via West Point like his older brother, Tom has developed a sincere liking for the Navy. Upon graduating from Mount Healthy High School in 1959, Tom went to Hanover College in Indiana, while trying to gain an appointment. After two years "Seegs", as he is affectionately known by some of his classmates, secured his berth as a Mid.

Upon entering the Academy, Tom has participated in such extracurricular activities as Antiphonal Choir, BAC, Christmas Card Committee, and the Improvement Committee. His pet project is the tri-annual painting of Tecumseh. Tom is a participant in company sports, basketball being his favorite. One of Tom's claims to fame is that everything his younger brother, also at West Point and a hot shot on their varsity team, knows about basketball, Tom has taught him.

Tom's congeniality has led him to popularity with his classmates and also the lucky girls who were privileged to be his drags. The Navy has acquired a future outstanding Naval officer in the person of Seegs.

Being one of the few "Blanket" winners here at Navy, Bob, affectionately known to his close friends as the "Ramrod," has certainly made his folks and friends back home in Kingston, New York, proud of him. Bob is a distance runner at USNA and has contributed greatly to the development of Navy track and Cross Country. Worn and callused feet have been Bob's trademark over the years yet he has never failed to make the Superintendent's List nor been unable to display stars on his blues. He is a well read person and is pursuing a social science major in the academic area. A warm personality and a keen sense of humor make Bob a very popular person on and off the track. He always has a kind word to say and never fails to help anyone in any situation. In his own smooth, quiet way, Bob always manages to accomplish whatever he sets out to do. He is a natural leader and never fails to impress people wherever he goes. With so many attributes, Bob has a bright future ahead.

ROBERT FRANCIS SERMIER

MICHAEL SLEET SHIRLEY

Upon arrival at the Academy Mike entered whole-heartedly into the activities of plebe year. While trying out for the plebe football team Mike had the misfortune of running into Navy's Heisman Trophy winner and when two irresistible forces meet "something's got to give." It was Mike's nose, broken for the third time in two years, and his dreams of gridiron stardom. During youngster year Mike returned to football, playing for the varsity 150 pound team. Among his many other activities Mike has participated in airborne training at Fort Benning, Georgia, receiving his wings in the summer of 1963. During his remaining two years at Navy Mike concentrated on more serious endeavors, working for his philosophical and intellectual fulfillment.

From Erie, Dave brought his swimming and water polo skills to the Academy. After plebe year, he dropped the varsity headache in favor of Batt sports. A natural at water polo, he was a mainstay of the Batt teams and one of the campaigners for organization of the sport on a brigade and inter-collegiate level. Not a believer in over-indulgence, he also knew how to relax and was no stranger to the blue trampoline.

A veteran Great Lakes sailor, he found little time to sail at the academy but enjoyed it often while home on leave. Sore feet and the long treks to class increased his already keen interest in sports cars and automobiles in general. His appreciation for the music of Joan Baez was equalled only by the appreciation of his roommates for his not playing it while they were in the room.

Social life never presented much of a problem for Dave and he has managed to retain his "free-as-a-bird" status.

His quiet, likeable manner, quick wit, ability to organize, and, of course, his "A" in Leadership indicate promise of a highly successful naval career.

Most people are addressed by nickname only by those who know them well. There are exceptions, however, and "Sully" is one of them. In fact, few people knew his real name of Jerry. "Sully's" love for his California sunshine and his physical attributes also gained him the title of "Bushy Blonde Surfer". His quick smile and cheerful salutations were well known by seemingly everyone. Jerry, a Navy junior, coming to the Academy from the fleet and a year at NAPS was well acquainted with and acclimated to the Navy way of life. His boundless energy kept him constantly on the go and he could usually be found working nights, long after his roommates had succumbed to the call of the pad. With such devotion and drive to supplement his natural talent "Sully" will make a distinguished officer.

JERRY MICHAEL SULLIVAN

DAVID ROBINSON THOMPSON JR.

Prior to entering the Academy Dave attended Bullis Prep School for two years. The transition from civilian life to that of a plebe was a hard one for Dave, but he took it all in stride. A few of his hobbies include any type of car, girls, and of course, sports. Tales of Florida plus a string of tales as long as his pitching arm gave him a remarkable line with everyone. Academics posed no particular problem for Dave. His athletic endeavors were devoted to company sports, where he excelled in volleyball, football, and softball. His social endeavors were equally outstanding. His pleasant personality and ability to lose anything mark him for an interesting career. He agrees fully with the old philosophy that "Navy line may not be fine, but it's safe."

ARTHUR WALTER WITTIG

Although hailing from Austin, Texas, Tex did not succumb to the lure of the University of Texas but chose the Navy instead. A true Blue and Golder he joined the Navy Reserve in his Senior year of high school and upon graduation he accepted an appointment to the Naval Academy. A fighting Texan, he competed in various levels of Golden Gloves before coming to USNA and earned his first numerals by getting as far as the semi-finals in Brigade Boxing his Plebe year. He soon added other numerals to his B-robe by participating in Batt. Rugby.

Always on the go Tex spent his weekends partying and dragging. Although he couldn't remember a Skinny formula for more than fifteen minutes, Tex could greet almost every classmate with a smile and a first name acknowledgement. Tex made many close friends who will never forget the carefree Friday nights spent in the Fourth Wing barber shop.

In his carefree high school days at Saint John's College in Washington, D.C., Bob was known more lovingly as Tony. It was there and at his home in Wheaton, Maryland, that he nurtured his desire to graduate from the Naval Academy. One eventful year at Bullis Prep., and "Bingo", here he was; bringing with him just the background to form a lasting impression on Mother Bancroft. Bob's experience in journalism through high school and Bullis put him high in the ranking of Trident staffers, and finally to wind up his college career as Editor-in-Chief. Plebe and youngster years saw Bob out on the Soccer fields battling it out, but with the advent of intramural Rugby, Bob found his true sport. Many was the time that he returned to the room looking like he had been strained through a tennis racquet, but just bursting with delight over having won a hard fought game. Bob's knowledge of Naval Science and History, along with his tremendous ability to adapt himself to almost any situation, is certain to insure him a most productive and enjoyable career in the Navy.

ROBERT ANTHONY ANDRETTA

ROBERT LEWIS BEAUCHAMP

MICHAEL THOMAS BROWN

An all-around athlete while at Lawrenceville Township High School, "Brownie" found pole-vaulting to be his true calling during the plebe track season. From that time on he channeled his many talents into his vaulting and became one of the best in the field. He could always be found at the pits on Thompson Field where his determined efforts were rewarded with consistent wins for the Navy team. Keeping one jump ahead of the Skinny Dept. occupied a lot of Mike's time, but he still found time to become particularly adept in the German language. Determination, a keen sense of humor, and a ready willingness to participate in almost anything are among the traits that will make Mike a valuable asset to the field of his choice.

Bob, who hails from Wilmington, Delaware, came to the Naval Academy after a year at Columbian Prep. Although a diligent student, Bob has had to fight several touch-and-go battles with the academic departments. His more important battles have been with the Bull and Command Departments, in the course of which he has staved off several noteworthy offensives. His late nights and hard work have paid off, however, as he has always managed to come out on top.

He is known to be a terror on the golf course (for any of several reasons), and that is where he may often be found while on leave. Bob has maintained a high degree of physical fitness during his four years at Navy, and has done well in whatever sport he has chosen to play.

Bob's devotion to his work and his desire to succeed should hold him in good stead throughout the fine career the future holds for him.

DEE WAYNE BURROWS

Wayne, the oldest member of the class of 1965, hails from the beautiful city of Albuquerque, New Mexico, where he began his college career. Finding college too dull, he packed his bags, and joined the Navy to see the World. Three years later found Wayne actively taking part in Naval Academy Life. While here Wayne played many varsity sports, including Brigade Boxing, Lacrosse, Soccer, and was a key member of the championship Rugby team. Aside from his athletic prowess, Wayne is probably the widest known and best liked member of our class, sporting a flashing smile and a ready wit. Fine dancing and excellence in conversation make Wayne a must at any party or dance. The Navy will have to look far and wide to find a better man than Dee Wayne Burrows.

THOMAS P. CRAIG JR.

Tom was born and reared in Wagon Mound, New Mexico. As the name of the town indicates, it is a one horse town and it had a one horse high school. Tom and his classmates numbered 18 when he graduated from Wagon Mound High School in 1960.

Tom tried his senior year in high school to enter the Naval Academy but failed the CEEB exam. He decided, since the Naval Academy was not his line, he would try Colorado State University, and there he spent one year. Tom received a letter from his congressman one day at Colorado offering him another appointment. Being broke and at loose ends, Tom accepted figuring he would at least have a free meal ticket for four years. Before he could turn around he was knee deep in all his gear with a stencil pencil in hand.

At the academy Tom's been a hustler from the start. He's been an outdoor sports man all three years and has gained much respect on the rugby field playing on the Brigade Championship team for two years.

The folks back home in Wagon Mound can be mighty proud of that one time cow puncher who has worked his way to a company commander at the Academy.

WILLIAM J. COCHRAN

Following graduation from Cathedral High School in Bellville, Illinois, and one year at Parks College, Bill headed for USNA to trade civilian line for Navy Blue. "Willie", the nickname by which he is most widely known, possessed a ready smile and generous personality which made him a popular member of any group. Academics at the Academy presented Bill with no problems, as evidenced by his unceasing collection of outside reading material. Plebe year at USNA was an occasion which will long be remembered for Bill. A member of the Old 16th Company, he endured the now infamous treatment which that company had to offer. His ability to smile in the face of setbacks will prove a valuable asset in his future. Combined with drive and initiative these attitudes will provide the Naval Service with a capable and conscientious officer of which it can be proud.

GILBERT COMMODORE CROUSE

Coming from Ohio, one of the greatest high school football states of the country, and having had an outstanding past in this sport, Gil had a very promising future for Navy until a severe knee injury forced him to leave the gridiron. His love of the good life has detracted much from his inspiration to study, but his natural intelligence has carried him through effortlessly. Every Sunday, melodious strains can be heard coming from Gil's section of the Chapel Choir, and his activities extend into company sports where he is a mainstay of the fieldball and squash teams. His carefree and friendly attitude has won him many comrades, and his warm personality will definitely be a great asset in the future, which, coupled with his sharp mind, will assure for him a successful career.

BRUCE E. DAVIDSON

"Huey" came to Ship City from the little town of Audubon in north Jersey. He moved to the Sixteenth Company after spending Plebe Year in the First. Always a handy man with a drawing pencil, he made many valuable contributions to the Brigade Arts and Printing Club. He rowed crew and participated in Company basketball for two years; and as a Second Class helped the Second Battalion win the Brigade Championship in Rugby. Always an amiable guy with a pleasant word for everyone, "Huey" has an enjoyable future ahead. Good Luck!

TWENTY-THIRD COMPANY

FOURTH BATTALION

Fleet's hometown is Wilmington, Delaware, where he came to Canoe U. from a small private high school, Friends. When he is not studying or doing something for Navy, he is usually found writing to a young lady or just dreaming about one. His best or his worst friend is the mate delivering mail, depending whether there is a letter or not; or it could be the stock market as he checks the quotations in the daily paper. The Antiphonal Choir surely would not be a success if it did not have his fine bass voice, or his dimples beaming from the choir loft, or his insatiable appetite devouring doughnuts at the Sunday morning rehearsals. Every year has brought a new set of hurdles from the P.T. department, but Fleet has always been able to cross them successfully. Rarely does one meet Fleet without seeing a warm smile and hearing a cheery "Hi!" or a mild mannered "Take it easy." With the fine attributes of getting along with people and getting the job done, Fleet should find success on whatever sea he sails.

FLEET GOODRIDGE DAVIS II

SAMUEL RICHARD DUTROW JR.

GORDON JOHN EVANS

Gordie is a native of Scranton, Pa., and came to the Navy after two years in the Air Force. Having prior service enabled Gordie to make the change to Academy life with ease and since academics offered him no challenge he would usually be found reading his favorite novel. Being a natural athlete was always one of Gordie's strong points. Whether on the varsity Wrestling team or the Battalion Track team he was always a staunch competitor. Gordie is ahead when it comes to the opposite sex, and his dance floor ability combined with his ready wit make him the favorite of every party. Upon graduation, Gordie plans to enter "The Wild Blue Yonder", but this time in Navy blues. With all his talents he should have no trouble with the future.

Sam stepped through Gate 3 less than one month after he had graduated from Hollidaysburg High School in the heart of Pennsylvania. As all true Pennsylvanians, Sam was an outstanding wrestler and scholar in high school. He quickly adapted himself to the trials and tribulations of USNA and became a top man in his class. When not organizing and planning with the Executive Department, Sam could be found submerged in a steady stream of overloads, which led to his major in mathematics. Sam's athletic prowess was continually evident—not only as a member of the varsity wrestling team but also in all other sports. For example, during the spring, in addition to being a consistent performer on the Battalion track team, Sam was often an enthusiastic "duffer" at the golf course. His determination and drive, coupled with his natural ability to succeed, should insure Sam a fine career in the Naval Service.

HUGH JAMES GILLOGLY

A graduate of St. Johns College in Washington D.C., Hugh spent a year in the N.R.O.T.C. program at Villanova before entering the Academy. He tackled plebe year with an unrelenting effort which carried him through with flying colors. He was quite capable in handling any course which the curriculum threw up to him, and he was always willing to help his classmates along whenever help was asked for. A mariner at heart, Hugh spent many sunny afternoons and weekends aboard the Naval Academy yachts as a member of the Ocean Sailing Squadron. Hugh was also a spirited and able contender in such intramurals as Battalion gymnastics, handball, and volleyball. Possessing a talent with the saxophone as well, he volunteered his services to the concert band for two years.

Hugh's great enthusiasm and cooperative spirit will be appreciated by his fellow officers; his perseverance and ability will earn the respect of all who serve under him.

While Pat has always achieved outstanding marks, and thus had his lapels adorned by the extra five points known as stars, it is a well known fact throughout the Brigade that the pages of his books have never seen light. Pat, or D.P. as he is often called, can best be described as cool. In fact, the word sweat is not part of his otherwise broad vocabulary. An outstanding athlete and scholar in his high school in Ohio, Pat has carried on at USNA as the top hurler on Navy's varsity nine, and the sparkplug of the company basketball team. Being mathematically inclined, Pat naturally took an avid interest in bridge, and can usually be found, when not in class or playing sports, huddled over his fistful of pasteboards trying to decide what Goren would do. Outstanding leadership, high intelligence, and a frank straightforward manner make Pat a natural in his chosen career.

Since he came to the academy, Pat's family has gone south; and he now calls Gainesville, Florida, home.

Most of the midshipmen who know Bill would probably agree that the first thing he did when he was issued a dictionary plebe year was to tear out the page with the word "sweat".

Kemps, as he is called by almost everyone, matriculated to the Academy from Lake Erskine, New Jersey, obtaining a Presidential nomination. If one word could be used to describe him, "friendly" would be perhaps the best choice.

Always ready to lend a helping hand, Kemps has devoted much of his spare time to helping classmates and others with their academic problems. The definition of "spare time" in his case, however, is any time not spent in class, since academics pose no problem whatsoever for him.

An avid sports fan, Kemps was a member of the plebe gym team, but has since confined his activities to a few afternoons of tennis or handball, except when he has been called upon to lead the E. D. squad. He can often be found in the woodshop slaving over a machine or riffling through the pages of the Wall Street Journal scanning the latest developments in the stock market.

Coming from a Navy family, and highly motivated towards a career in the service, Kemps possesses all the qualities to make an outstanding officer.

DAVID PATRICK GRAHAM

After graduating from Spingarn High School in Washington, D. C., Floyd spent two years at Capital University in Ohio prior to entering the Naval Academy. While there, he showed his potential, standing first in his ROTC class. Upon entering the academy, Floyd immediately showed he could adjust to the system. He performed very well in both academics and aptitude. Besides participating in intramural athletics, he also was an outstanding member of the plebe crew team and played a year of junior varsity lacrosse. Throughout the years, Floyd impressed everyone with his desire and efforts to succeed in academy endeavors, even though he seldom missed an opportunity to answer liberty call. Floyd's present popularity will undoubtedly stand him in good stead with fellow officers in years to come.

FLOYD F. GRAYSON JR.

WILLIAM GLENN KEMPLE

EDWIN R. LINZ

Ed came to the Naval Academy after two years at Villa Madonna College to prove that Kentucky is not made up entirely of illiterate backwoodsmen. He has proven his literacy as witnessed by the consistent appearance of his name on the Superintendent's List. Starting out as a chemistry major Ed eventually decided that math was the field for him. Ed always had a knack for talking and this ability led him to winning many trophies for USNA as a member of the Forensic Society. His debating career was highlighted by placing fourth in the National Debate Tournament during second class year. Ed once said he would graduate from USNA if he ever passed the 400 yard swim. Other than swimming Ed loved sports and played number one on the company squash team. Ed's ability to excel in all that he attempts will make him a definite asset to the U. S. Navy.

FOURTH BATTALION

With a year as a Plebe at the New York State Maritime College, "Murph" arrived at USNA well prepared for NAVY life. Academics kept him busy but were never a threat to his existence. He always managed to have a novel around for relaxation. Most afternoons Tom would be out on Farragut Field with his friends chasing a Rugby ball around. After two Brigade Championships and a broken ankle he still likes the game. On weekends Murph's love of sleep and the fairer sex found him either in town dragging or in the pad "zzzing".

Tom has a serious side to go with his ready laugh and was a member of the Newman club and Foreign Relations club. His large store of professional knowledge made him a friend to many a fourth classman with questions to be answered. Murph will be a valuable addition to the Fleet.

THOMAS PATRICK MURPHY

AARON RUSSELL SPURWAY

HARRY LEON TURNER II

Harry came to the banks of the Severn from Houston, Texas, where he starred in football and track at Springbranch High School. As a midshipman Harry throws the shotput and discus for the track team and can be found almost every afternoon throwing or just working out. Not only a success as an athlete, Harry always does well in his academics. Almost every evening he can be found going to Plebe rooms and asking, "Got any chow?", or can be seen lying or just sitting on the pad like a frog. When he returns from dragging or a weekend, it is always interesting to watch him rearrange the pictures on his wall or the names on his grease ladder of girls. One of Harry's main interests in his four years here has been the study of Portuguese and the activities of the Portuguese club. He was never one to pass up the opportunity of going to Portuguese after-dinner speaking and the resultant good chow. Harry is also active in the religious and social activities of the Presbyterian church in town. Certainly with his hard work and will to get ahead, Harry is destined to a successful career in the Navy.

Spud came to the Naval Academy from the small northwest, mining town of Kellogg, Idaho. He is a very versatile character with a big sense of humor. He always seems to be on Supt's List and occasionally gets into the star ranks. Although it appears he is quite the book worm, Spud can be found burrowed in the sack almost any free period. He is not especially outgoing and likes to be alone much of the time. He picked up the game of squash when first appearing here and is now one of the better players. At present Spud plans a Naval career but wherever he goes he will be a standout in his field.

RICHARD PAUL ZIMMERMAN

Dick's origin of Texas is obvious from the fact that he "cain't" say "can't". He came to the academy sporting a fine array of academic achievements, and he has since added many more to the list. He is a star man and is very interested in his major of Italian. Dick is making good use of his new language in his correspondence with four girls in Italy, and first class summer he plans to put it to even better use on the Italian Riviera. One might say that he takes to the academy like a duck takes to water, except that he begins worrying about his tests of water skills a year ahead of time. On Sunday mornings he shows his interest in children by volunteering to teach a Sunday school class. One of his interests that must not be neglected is his love of music, and many a study hour has been invaded by one of his operas. As for his future, Dick's industry and drive will assure him of unbounded success.

After graduating from Washington-Lee High School in Arlington, Virginia, Scott attended Sullivan School and George Washington University in preparation for the Naval Academy. If he were not attending an overload class, Scott's early afternoons were spent participating in company knockabouts, football or cross country. He also was an active member of the battalion debate team. Being an avid reader, friends often found Scott during his free moments engrossed in a book, the subject matter being most anything—philosophy of war, U.S. foreign policy, games of strategy or just fiction. Although he was an avid reader, Scott was by no means a "book-worm;" he spent many hours enjoying music which ranged from the classical to folk songs. And according to those who knew him, he was perhaps one of the most colorful conversationalists one could speak with; he could "spin yarns" to rival even the masters of the art.

FREDERICK SCOTT AVERY III

ALAN CHRISTIAN BERNARD

WALTER FRANCIS BURNS III

After graduating from Admiral Faragut Academy in 1960, Walt attended the University of Delaware. He finally saw the light and came to the Academy in 1961, where he settled down to a somewhat more restricted life. Almost any afternoon, Walt can be found sailing on the Severn. He has been on the Dinghy Sailing Team since Plebe Year, but sailing is not his only interest. Walt also likes swimming, hunting, and GIRLS. He is a man dedicated to that great institution, bachelorhood, which translated loosely means "max fun with min strings attached". Walt intends to go Navy Air after graduation. He will be a welcome and capable addition to the fleet.

Being a Navy junior and having experienced the Navy life through his father, Chris always wanted to enter the academy. Although his travels have taken him to many different surroundings, he has never forgotten his love of the outdoors that he learned in his home state of South Dakota. One of Chris' best qualities is the fact that whenever he finds something he really likes, he dedicates himself to it completely, as could be seen for example by his quick success in fencing. He did not come out for the team until Youngster year, and was fencing first team second class year. Chris is one of the few midshipmen who not only does well and enjoys engineering, but thinks that the "steam" department is the best department in the academy. If Chris shows the same dedication in the fleet that he has shown at the academy, his success will be assured.

WILLIAM PATRICK COOPER

Pat is a native of East Liverpool, Ohio, which is, as everyone knows, the pottery capital of the world. Pat attended Washington and Jefferson College for two years and lettered in football before coming to the Academy. He was a member of the plebe wrestling team and has participated in sports ranging from handball to lacrosse during his four years at the Academy.

Pat became indoctrinated quickly to Naval Academy routine when at the start of his plebe year he found himself in the "old Sixteenth Company" which was widely renowned for its "hard but fair" attitude towards Plebes.

Pat's chief interests are sports, travel and people. His interest and understanding in this last category will help him greatly in his chosen profession.

JOHN VICTOR DeTHOMAS

During his waking hours, as limited as they may have been, Pete spent his time engaged in varied pursuits which made him a worthy representative of his much cherished and oftentimes defended home, Los Angeles, Calif. Academics never offered him too much of an obstacle, yet striving for the Superintendent's List was a goal to which he constantly aspired. Daily afternoons were spent engaged in athletic pursuits designed to bring his company the colors or keep himself off the swimming sub-squad. Pete had a better than average interest in girls and managed to spend many weekends in the company of some charming members of the opposite sex. Not particularly adapted for the variable weather or restrained social life of the Academy he spent many hours buffeted by cold or expounding on the advantages of his native habitat. Nonetheless, Pete displayed the maturity, common sense, and personality which made him endeared to his friends, respected by his subordinates, and which should go far in recording him as a credit to the Academy and the Navy.

Coming straight from the land of jackrabbits and sagebrush, J.V. or "Hawk", as he is known by his friends, brought with him a keen sense of humor and a determination to do his best at everything he tried. His own rigorous plebe year convinced him of its benefits which he wholeheartedly conveyed to succeeding members of the fourth class. J.V. kept up a high academic average with a minimum of studying, including several electives, which enabled him to pursue athletics. He won his "N" on the rifle team and is an active participant in Batt. football. He is also the proud wearer of a set of airborne wings, bought at the price of a lot of blood, sweat, and one summer's leave. He has set his sights on Navy Air, where his ready wit, initiative, and ability insure him a successful career.

PETER MARSHALL GALBRAITH

FREDERICK J. GLAESER

Fred was born in Honolulu, Hawaii, in 1943. As a Navy "Junior" he had already seen much of the world before he came here and is determined to see the rest of it before he retires. Fred hasn't been able to find a notch for himself in varsity sports until this year when he took over as manager of the varsity gym team. Undoubtedly, Fred's greatest pastime was weightlifting. He believed in keeping himself in top physical condition and never spared any pains in doing this. Every afternoon after class, you knew you could find him working out in the Field House conditioning room or in MacDonough Hall. Not only was Fred known for being muscle-bound, but for being a standout in Battalion Track. For in his second-class year, he captured first place in the mile run in all of the meets in which he participated, excluding one where he came in second. Because of Fred's good nature and his love for and interest in the Navy, his classmates agree there couldn't be a finer guy with whom to serve.

FOURTH BATTALION

Jim (Henry) arrived at the Naval Academy directly after graduating from high school, where he excelled in both academics and sports. His winning smile and easy-going personality soon won him many friends in spite of the rigors of plebe year. An outstanding athlete, Jim quickly became an asset to the company and battalion basketball, softball and cross-country teams. One of the few true "flaxens", academics posed no great problem for Jim as he could always be found in the company of one of many female admirers on weekends. When not pursuing his second favorite pastime, sleeping, he found time to offer guidance to "wayward" plebes. His likable manner, quick wit and determination to get the job done will insure Jim a promising Naval career.

JAMES DALLAS HUDSON

CULPEPPER F. INGRAM

Pepper is held in high esteem by his classmates. While academics are not his strongest point, a good high school background and determined effort have helped Pepper through the curriculum with relative ease. Among his many activities at the Academy, his favorite was being a member of the Antiphonal Choir. He was also his company representative in the Class Ring and Crest committee. A solid performer on the track and the football field, Pepper was an asset to the Battalion and Company teams he played on. Whenever he had a little free time he found a satisfying diversion in professional reading. The weekends usually saw Pepper on the town developing his social graces. Pepper's sincerity, friendliness and genuine personality will make him a successful Naval Officer.

JOHN H. S. JOHNSON JR.

When John entered the Naval Academy after a year at Bullis Prep, he was following a time honored family tradition. His years here have been beneficial not only to himself, but also to those who have felt the warmth of his outgoing personality. He can best be distinguished by his affable mannerism, his jovial laugh, and his rapidly receding hairline. He has no trouble making friends. Although his greatest achievements have not been academic in nature, John has managed to get by in studies without much difficulty. He made quite a name for himself in intramural softball and Plebe squash. On the battalion squash ladder John Henry played in first position. He had a marked knack for training Plebes properly and always managed to keep a spirited relationship in so doing. John had quite a plebe year himself! While at the Academy he was an active member of the Newman club. With his heart set on a Naval Aviation career, John will be a loyal and dedicated officer and a definite asset to the Navy.

John came to the Naval Academy from the city of Salem, Massachusetts. His perseverance and desire to excel carried him close to the top of his class and held him in the high esteem of his classmates. Although not a varsity athlete John was keenly interested in intramural athletics and was a regular on the company football team. Many times John could be found along with his roommates flailing wildly in the cold green water of the instruction pool. Besides his academic prowess and winning personality, John was quite famous for his weekly chow packages from home. However, the care packages were hardly a contributing factor to John's popularity. We know that he will go far in his many endeavors, and will certainly be a credit to the Navy and his country.

JOHN CHARLES MARKOWICZ

A graduate of Mount Carmel High School where he was a standout basketball player, Regis has consistently been a top academic student in the class. Saturday night usually found him working problems for his overload classes in physics or math. Extremely adept at any sport he tries, "Matz" has developed into a good tennis player in his off-time. In the fall he could be found helping coach the plebe basketball team. When he got a chance to take a weekend Regis usually went to New York to see a play on Broadway. Music as well as sports and spaghetti afford him enjoyment. The future should offer a great deal to Regis for the preparations he has been willing to make.

REGIS ANTHONY MATZIE

GARY MIKIO MAYETANI

Bill, the son of a Naval Academy graduate, hails mostly from Norfolk, Virginia, and is a graduate of Granby High. "Jack", as he is often called by some of his friends—after the famous pro golfer, has contributed much of his time to the greens and the roughs. He was the top man of the Plebe golf team and played three years for the varsity. Bill, never one to let the pitfalls of Plebe year nor the traps of the academic departments bother him, sailed through four years at Navy always pleasant and never known to be angry or to study. Bill aspires to be an aviator and will be a fine officer. The Academy's loss is the Fleet's gain.

WILLIAM GEORGE MATTON III

The first in his family to venture forth into the Navy, Gary came to the Academy from Los Angeles, California, where he had been reared and gone to a year and a half of college. Gary was known to all for his tremendously friendly and outgoing personality. He met everyone with a cheerful smile and greeting—his "trademark". He was active in numerous company and battalion projects, ranging from his work as a striper to those for the "Beat Army" spirit. His sports included battalion football, rugby, company squash, Plebe soccer, and softball. Gary's interest in the Service, coupled with his ability to get a job done should see him through many years of success in his career.

TWENTY-FOURTH COMPANY

FOURTH BATTALION

Coming from a Navy family, John came to USNA after graduating high in his class at Balboa High School in the Canal Zone. He was known here at Navy for his dedication to academics and to the many sports and extracurricular activities in which he participated. His dedication to studies paid off in the form of a consistently high academic average. He was always willing to help his classmates in any course. When not hitting the books, he was ocean sailing, running cross country or playing softball. He was an active member of the Naval Academy Christian Association and the Officer's Christian Union, and was the editorial editor of the Guide-On. In addition, he took part in the setting up of a professional bulletin board and gave signal drills. John has a dedication to the Service and an ability to see a job through which should help him to a long and successful career.

JOHN MOORE READE IV

GERARD FRANCIS ROBINSON

Robi, although now living in nearby Glen Burnie, is a firm believer that his home is actually in New England. Coming out of the hills of New Hampshire, Robi went directly into NAPS. His year at Bainbridge finished with Robi trading the blue of the Air Force for that of the Navy. Relying on his years of previous schooling he managed to avoid the pitfalls of a 13th company plebe year and moved along with our class. His determination enabled him to master the academic departments one by one as he continually raised his class standing. During the afternoons Robi could always be found in Hubbard Hall getting ready to go out on the Severn to row for Navy. With Robi's determination and his ability to triumph over the obstacles in his path he should make a fine officer.

HARRY AUGUSTUS SEYMOUR JR.

Chip is the kind of guy who starts to get the job done while others are worrying about the odds against them. The dogged perseverance and determination he displayed in his running battle with academics carried him to some very strange study rooms in the early morning hours before reveille. These same characteristics made him a keen competitor in any athletic contest with particular attention devoted to winning at tennis and passing at swimming. Though not a constant dragger Chip could claim more female correspondents than either of his roommates and could be found on weekends at his home away from home on Porter Road which became a welcome haven for frightened Plebes and bewildered drags. Chip was always interested in fostering improvement and setting an example that would serve as an inspiration to those around him. He leaves for the fleet, a Navy-liner at heart with the same attitudes he has exhibited and developed for four years at the Academy and should go far as a tremendous asset to his chosen profession.

JAMES REYNOLDS STARK

Coming straight from high school at Arlington, Jim went into plebe year with a sense of humor and unusual academic ability. He easily maintained a star average and had a great interest in German language overloads, the latter of which, along with girls, he pursued during several summers in Europe. He participated in the plebe summer detail and his firm belief in plebe year soon became well known among the fourth estate. Active in company affairs and athletics, Jim was also a valuable member of the Championship Second Battalion Rugby Team. When not on a weekend, engaged in some non-reg activity or E. D., Jim could usually be found engrossed in a novel. His wit, good humor and great ability will carry him a long way and will prove an invaluable asset to the Navy.

Hailing from Bexley, Ohio, John in coming to Annapolis is following in the footsteps of his brother, who was a graduate of the class of 1957. Finding that academics posed no particular problem, he took advantage of the elective program and pursued the intricacies of math. John displayed a keen interest in sports and he will be remembered for his outstanding participation in intramural football and softball. Despite a habitual lack of funds and USNA he managed to drag once this privilege was extended. This plus his easygoing charm and a little red T-bird resulted in many full address books. With his likeable personality and quick wit he has cultivated many lasting friends. If all goes well, after graduation John plans to hang his hat in Pensacola. No matter where he goes, he is bound to be a welcome addition to any wardroom.

JOHN FREDERICK STRAHM

It can never be said that Tova let his studies interfere with his education. On the contrary, he educated himself along the lines of his interests in spite of the Academic Department by the abundance of books he consumed during his four year stay by the Severn. As a result, he could live up any conversation or discussion with an odd, previously unbeknown fact pertaining to the topic or casually utter a six-syllable word which would always require an immediate explanation and entail a hearty laugh. An easygoing good-timer from Iowa, Jim was convinced that Academy life with its petty annoyances was not an accurate reflection of true Navy life and consequently devoted most of his waking hours to the opposite sex, concentrating his efforts in his last two years on his fiancee who lived close by. Jim's many friends will always remember him for his genuine sincerity as well as his thunder-like laugh which could, on occasion, be heard reverberating through several wings, and he is destined to complement any branch of the Navy in which he chooses to apply himself.

WILBERT JAMES TOVREA

KIM GEORGE VARNAGARIS

Known by all his friends as "Swense", Larry is the kind of guy everyone enjoyed having around during the four long years. His pleasing personality and wonderful sense of humor made the longest and dreariest days a little more bearable. The little Swede from Kansas has that strong desire to excel and is a good competitor in everything he does. He was strictly an intramural sports man during his four years at the Academy, dividing his time among company soccer, battalion handball, company squash and volleyball. His soccer team won the Brigade championship during his Youngster year. Larry will be remembered by his friends especially for his great desire for self-improvement. He is never satisfied with second-best and always tries to improve on the present. This desire along with his many talents give him a great potential for success in the naval service.

LARRY GENE SWENSON

"Varney" came to the Academy straight out of South Shore High School in Chicago, Illinois. He took plebe year in his usual happy, carefree stride, doing well in all he undertook. His classmates will always remember his cheerful attitude and willingness to help. Youngster year saw Kim start to progress academically, and he went on to take the additional work of overloads as a Sagundo. He enjoyed sailing and handball as his sports and really showed his nautical abilities out on the bay in fair weather and foul. His true extracurricular loves, however, were tea fights out in town, warming his pad, and sunning on the terraces. By the end of each summer Kim returned to the Academy looking like he had been tarred but not feathered. With his professional zeal the Navy will more than welcome Kim to the ranks of the commissioned.

Dave arrived at the Academy from Fenwick High School in Oak Park, Illinois with a pleasant personality and ready wit. Although he was best known for his academic achievement, where he overloaded in math and literature and maintained Supt's list grades, his activities were not limited only to the books. He devoted time to the French Club and the Brigade Hop Committee and was a steady and valuable contributor to company sports. Second class year Dave joined the debate team and quickly mastered the art of public speaking which he utilized in competition with schools throughout the country. In his last years at the Academy, he also unleashed a flair for art which never failed to amaze his contemporaries. With his drive and determination, there is no doubt that Dave will be successful in the Navy and all his future endeavors. He always has been, and will continue to be an inspiration to his classmates and the brigade.

DAVEN A. ANDERSON

JOHN F. BIRMINGHAM JR.

Jack, after leaving Massachusetts, attended the Army's Prep School at Fort Belvoir to prepare himself for the Academy. As the first year progressed, he saw it was going to be a four year struggle with the Engineering Department, neither side yielding! An avid reader, he showed a propensity for English, Politics, and Finance, however, which balanced his academic life and found him a member of the Newman Club, Foreign Affairs Club, and NAFAC. Using his basketball skill to advantage he played for the Plebe team, and later pursued other interests of swimming and golf. Although Jack was known to have occasionally brightened the yard with one of the sharper members of the fair sex, he more often than not could be found devoting spare time to books, other than academic. His reserved nature which commands respect has not only endowed him with a number of close friends, but reflects potential to accomplish whatever he so desires.

EDWIN PAUL GEIGER JR.

Ed came to the Academy from Lower Merion High School via Bullis Prep. and the Naval Reserve. He revealed his interest in sports immediately, playing plebe football and lacrosse. In later years he strove to establish rugby at the Academy. Known by all for his friendliness, he was a member of the Newman and German clubs. Ed was active in the Foreign Relations Club and particularly attentive to its banquet schedule. In pursuing his math interests, he joined the Math and Science Seminar. He had no trouble with academics and kept the departments off balance with a diverse overload program. Although inclined toward Dolphins, no matter where Ed sets up shop he shall be a welcome member to the team and a sure success.

RALPH CHARLES HESSE III

Chuck is one of those "Southern Gentlemen" who will always discuss any subject with you at any time. He will even change sides of the argument if you would like, just to keep things lively.

Chuck has taken part in many sports since coming to Navy, including plebe football and crew. He also found time for company basketball and volleyball. His latest sport, and the one he has enjoyed most, has been rugby. Chuck says he was inspired to play rugby by reading the "Andy Capp" cartoons. He may not be as clever as Andy but his 200 pounds make him a good man to have on your side.

Chuck's ready smile and friendly manner have made many friends for him here at the academy. He is always a hard worker at whatever the task and has proved himself to be a fine midshipman and all those who know "Heese Poo", know that he will be an outstanding officer and always, a "Southern Gentleman".

WILLIAM HIRAM HOUSE II

Bill, or "Humphry" as he is affectionately known by his classmates, easily made the transition from High School in Vienna, Virginia to Academy life. Academics were never any problem to Bill, but he took overloads and labored many hours to maintain a high academic average. Bill was a "rockem-sockem" type, playing football in the fall and fieldball during the winter. During the spring he lent his talents as a shot putter to the battalion track team. Although he didn't think dragging was a sport to engage in every weekend, he always managed to drag someone special a few weekends each semester. Bill's determination and strength of character will make him a valuable addition to the fleet.

NEAL CORNELL JENKINS

Neal came to us from Austin, Texas, complete with a Texan drawl and an affection for cowboy boots. Never one to sit back and watch, he ran for the cross country as well as the indoor and outdoor track teams plebe year. In this manner he could sit back and watch plebe year from the confines of the training tables. Later Jenks earned the distinction of being the lightest player on the company lightweight football team where he played defensive center. He managed to overcome his disgust for engineering subjects enough to become a frequent resident on the Superintendent's List. His knack for remembering Russian names has earned him a high place among history majors. Neal's subtle humor and sarcasm, foresight, and keen judgment will make him a credit to the Naval Service.

TWENTY-FIFTH COMPANY

FIFTH BATTALION

DONALD ROGER JENNINGS

Don came to the Academy from the Boston suburbs, Wellesly Hills to be specific, with a congressional appointment. His greatest interest was social science where he majored, taking as many as three overloads in a semester. Science, especially electronics always had it in for him but he managed to beat the old department every semester. Continuing his interest in his extracurricular activities, he was a member of the Foreign Relations Club and participated in NAFAC. Sports were always fun for him and it was rare to find him without a squash racquet in hand. But whenever swimming appeared on the PT schedule he wished someone had made a mistake. His free time was usually spent fooling around with his stereo equipment or in the rack where he logged many hours. Second Class summer was the one that he enjoyed the most but with his guaranteed second effort he is assured of success in any branch of the Naval Service.

After a background of schooling at Riverside-Brookfield High School and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Al came to the shores of the Severn via a N.R.O.T.C. appointment. Academics were no problem for Al as can be testified by his top ten percent class standing and all of the classmates who came to Al for assistance when the going got rough. The physical sciences are Al's forte and a major in chemistry has been his goal. Much of Al's time was spent either navigating for the ocean sailing squadron or timing a runner as a varsity track manager. Math and science seminars, Newman Club meetings and bridge games took up most of his spare time. Otherwise Al could be found listening to folk or jazz music while telling tales of his submarine cruise. In whatever direction Al sets his sails, he should find favorable winds.

ALLEN ROBERT KASPER

TIMOTHY C. KELLEY

Tim came to the Naval Academy from Whitefish Bay in Milwaukee, highly touted as a football player. Though a shoulder injury forced him out of the sport, he soon found himself in a varsity crew shell. As an oarsman, he paced the Blue and Gold to many victories and more than once he represented the Academy in the National Championships. Although crew seemed to be Tim's main concern, he was an excellent student and made the Superintendent's list more often than not. To many midshipmen who knew him well, though, Tim's high academic average is surprising since most weekends would find him escorting his very special girl about Annapolis. Tim's easy manner, friendly personality, and six foot four inch frame insure him a successful Naval career and will make him a great asset to the military service, just as he has been to the brigade, the class of '65 and the twenty-fifth company.

DAVID HUNTER LAIZURE

"Navy Davy" joined us from one of the finer parts of the world, Maryland. He is a Navy junior and both his father and grandfather graduated from the Academy. David is famous to his classmates for his amazing ability to sleep. Currently he holds the Academy indoor record at 27 hours and 14 minutes without a flick of an eye. That academics were not a burden is clearly shown by the fact that he is the only member of the graduating class to get new book prices when he sold his textbooks back to the Mid store. Dave's big "peeves" are officers and blind dates, both of which have caused him trauma in the past and shall probably continue to do so in the future. It must be admitted that the ladies like "Little David." There is something about him that makes them want to mother him. Dave is a mainstay in company sports wherein he excels at soccer and volleyball. His future lies with Navy line, with a bit of writing, and there is a slight chance for a sheep ranch in New Guinea. Once Dave decides what he wants, we know he will do it and do it well.

Bill came to U. S. N. A. after one year at Laredo Junior College in his hometown of Laredo, Texas. From the minute that Bill first stepped onto the athletic field at Navy he was a very active participant in all sports. He gained particular achievement in football, boxing, and wrestling. Bill also found time for extracurricular activities. Being a member of the Newman Club and Reception Committee kept Bill busy and out of trouble. With all his various activities and sports, Bill didn't seem to find much time to study, but when the chips were down he always seemed to come through. Bill set a Naval Academy record by getting out of more P-rades with a wider variety of excuses than any other Midshipman. Bill plans to go into Navy Air when he graduates and with his determination and skill he will be flying jets someday.

WILLIAM PATRICK LINK

GEORGE LIELL MAGER JR.

Lee came to the Academy from a pretty little town in New Jersey named Chester. Although quite short in stature, he did not let this stand in his way, but proved himself taller than others in other respects. A very likeable guy, Lee made many friends during his stay here. A very active person, he tried his hand at many activities, among these being handball, track, cross country, and the YP squadron. The latter occupied most of his time, and he did much to further the activities of the squadron. During his spare time, Lee could usually be found working with electronic equipment of some kind, or hunting for another pipe to add to his pipe collection. His career seems pointed toward the surface Navy, and he will prove himself a valuable asset in this field.

FIFTH BATTALION

Berry, an Air Force junior who claims Columbus, Ohio as his home, came here directly from Murfreesboro Central High, Tennessee. Berry never allows academics to interfere with his time in the pad. When he is not logging hours on the blue trampoline, he is dragging or reading a book.

After a tour with the 150 lb. crew team plebe year, Berry decided that varsity sports robbed him of his treasured hours of sleep. The crew team lost a good man, and company football gained one.

Being an Air Force junior, he has always wanted to fly but his eyes keep him from becoming a pilot. But since he is a man who never gives up, he will find a way into Navy Air through the NAO program.

Berry is known to all of us for his good sense of humor and his tenacity. Navy Air will gain a valuable-asset.

BEREND McCONNELL

RAYMOND EDWARD MOORE III

Ray came to the Academy from Lewes, Delaware. He was graduated from Lewes High School, and then attended Columbian Prep School.

Living on the Delaware bay seems to have had some influence on Ray, for he was out for the ocean sailing team for two years, and he has always been interested in most water sports. He enjoys hunting and snow skiing, and he excelled in squash and cross country while at the Academy.

Besides having an active interest in sports, Ray does quite well in academics, and he hopes to go into the nuclear power program upon graduating from the Academy.

Ray's effervescent personality enables him to get along with everyone, and this includes our friends of the animal world. Yes, Ray was mother and father to a pair of hamsters during the year.

With Ray's determination, personality, and quick mind he will no doubt go on to be an outstanding Naval Officer.

CLYDE T. MOYER III

Coming to Navy after a year of preparation at Columbian Prep School, Skip soon displayed the attributes which made him one of '65's most well rounded men. A good athlete, Skip played defensive backfield for the Plebes, was one of the more stalwart of the "Other's" in Lacrosse and won his N* with the 150's in football. Better than average with the books, Skip managed to attain Supt.'s List and those long weekends first class year, giving him a little extra time with that certain someone. He could no doubt write a good second edition to "How to Win Friends and Influence People", for dealing with people is his real talent. Affably known as "Red", he always enjoyed tinkering with hi-fi gear, admiring the latest model sports cars, and gazing across the Severn contemplating the future. And in the future, for Skip, lies success.

Don's congressman may well be proud that he sent to the academy a man who takes his primary mission to heart—to study in order to prepare for the future. It is a rare semester that finds Don, a social science major, without the grades for Superintendent's list. Somewhere in that Cleveland suburb of his, Don acquired the basic qualities of drive, fair play, and honor—the unembellished traits that hold a spirited body of men together—and coupled them with a mature outlook and sense of balance giving him his rightful place in the Navy. These facts are made manifest in each of Don's activities from squash to Reefpoints business manager. Somewhere a naval unit will greatly benefit by having him aboard.

DONALD C. RAILSBACK

GARY BEDE SIMKINS

Gary, more affectionately known as "Smikins", came to us from Port Angeles, Washington, after a tour with the Seventh Fleet. Known as the number one weight lifter at USNA, Gary could usually find time in his schedule to subdue the academic departments. He was never the one to grace the hall on weekends; in fact, he frequently donated academy time to more amorous pursuits, winning himself an honorary seat on the afternoon rifle (E. D.) team. His clear mind and sound judgment, which made him a valuable member of the company and sports squads, should lead him to a bright future in the service.

DARRELL P. SNYDER

Always ready to assist his less fortunate classmates with their academics, "Duke," who was known as a "slash" because of high grades, also had an effervescent personality that figuratively filled his roommates with bubbles. After graduating from the University of Detroit High School in the top of his class, "Duke" did a repeat performance at the Academy. During second class year he developed a musical inclination and spent long, hard hours of practice until he became quite adept on the drums. Always an outstanding member of the company sports teams, "Duke" excelled in volleyball, basketball, and softball. With an unquenchable thirst for nearly everything, "Duke" will attain success easily. Always ready to enter a fray with a water bomb or can of shaving cream, he created a four year era of prosperity for the shaving cream industry.

PAUL A. THORSEN

Paul came to the Academy after having spent a year at the University of Illinois, two years in the fleet as a submariner, and a year at NAPS. He quickly settled into Academy routine and has always been willing to lend a helping hand to any and all who ask. Paul never wastes a minute, and one can usually find him pursuing one of a variety of hobbies which includes reading, playing a guitar, or just listening to good music. In addition, he is an avid sailor and has been an active member of the ocean sailing team.

Paul's fine personality and his dedication to the Naval Service are assets that will greatly enhance his career, and wherever he goes he is bound to make a good name for himself.

JOHN A. WEBBER JR.

John Webber hails from Nashville, Tennessee, where he established a reputation for having a friendly smile and a helping hand at Battle Ground Academy. Short and stocky, John played on the BGA state championship football team.

Plebe year couldn't stop John, an organization man; he started at the bottom of the radio station ladder and was the manager before he graduated. The relaxing life of a sailor replaced the bumps of football for John, with a secondary result of keeping him off the gridiron field and allowing lots of time for sleep.

We'll all remember John's friendly smile and willingness to give of himself in any form. His years at USNA indicate that we will continue to see the Navy's job well done, with plenty of fun along the way.

BILLIE WAYNE WIELAND

Billie was about as predestined for a Naval career as anyone could possibly have been, having been born on one of the largest beaches in the world—New Mexico. "Wheels", as he has been better known since Plebe year, preceded his stay here at USNA with a year at the University of New Mexico, followed by a voyage aboard a sea going tug boat and a year at NAPS in that order.

A firm believer in the "open door policy", Wheels will long be remembered for the help and advice with which he aided his classmates.

Bill's great love for water led him to "volunteer" each winter for swimming; however in his off seasons he managed to find time for company cross country and battalion boxing. Even though he always considered sleep an end in itself, Bill managed to exert himself enough to be a regular member of the Superintendent's List. Bill's desire to succeed in whatever he enters into will serve to stand him and the service of his choice in good stead.

Hal might very well be called "The Most Unforgettable Character We've Ever Met", for assuredly he is a most unforgettable person. No-one has the same carefree love of life and undauntable laughter. Every dawning day brings new excitement and a different and unusual experience. The "lunar-probe", "Ams-corner", and the mug of water are his trademarks. Whenever a prank is plotted, Hal is the instigator (his innocent reply—"Who? Me?")

Hal is a Navy Junior who spent his pre-Academy days in many parts of the world, ranging from Boston and Jacksonville to Japan. His athletic prowess in high school is well known at the Academy, and it is certain he could have won three Navy "N's" had he not devoted his talents to the company athletic teams where he excelled at football, basketball, and handball. "Ams" is truly an exceptional athlete, and when he was not seriously studying, or more seriously sleeping, he was dragging one of many ravishingly beautiful blondes. Not to be forgotten is Hal's part in the "200-club" and his contribution of a "monster bi".

We all feel confident that his winning smile and magnetic personality will earn him many friends and assure him of a wealth of success and happiness in life. It is a pleasure for us to have been counted among his many friends, for truly Hal has been a most unforgettable character.

JONNEY L. BARTO

Jon became interested in sailing while he lived in Grand Rapids, Michigan, near the Great Lakes. His enthusiasm for the sport and his personal drive have enabled him to become an outstanding member of the Naval Academy ocean sailing squadron and one of the few midshipmen selected to participate in the 1964 Bermuda races. With a unique sense of humor and a genuine concern for everyone, Jon has always been liked and admired by all his classmates. A brilliant student, Jon has consistently been on the Superintendent's list for proficiency in academics, and will be a credit to the Navy.

HAROLD F. AMERAU JR.

DAVID LAURENCE BAILEY

Dave was born in Colorado Springs. Being an Air Force Junior, home has been in many places; however, he finally saw the light and now calls Rialto, California his home. After graduating with honors from Central High in Omaha he continued his record for high academic achievement at the Academy, with a fantastic number of Math courses taken in addition to the regular academic load. He was active and well-rounded in intramurals participating in Company Soccer, Softball, Batt Crew, and was the mainstay of the heavyweight football team. Quiet, unassuming, his humble attitude always set his classmates at ease and he was always ready to give help on any problem to someone in need. With Dave's calm, steady drive and outlook he will undoubtedly make a success of any career in the Navy that he chooses.

DONALD PHILIP BROWN

Don, an ardent Californian, came to Navy after graduating from Hoover High School in Glendale. Continuing his early athletic career, Don was a mainstay on the plebe and varsity track and cross country teams. Never one to let a free weekend go to waste, he was often seen in pursuit of members of the fairer sex. Although engineering is not one of his natural talents, Don came out the winner after a four year battle with the academic departments. All who knew him will remember his easygoing ways and sharp sense of humor that won him so many friends. Whatever his service selection may be, Don will make a fine addition to the Navy's officer corps.

ROBERT DAVID BROWN JR.

Bob, better known as "Brownie" to his friends, spent the first 16 years of his life in and around Brockton, Massachusetts, where he was born. A true-blue New Englander, he received a Congressional appointment to the Academy after two years in Maine, where he presently resides while not at USNA. Brownie's athletic interests lie mainly in the field of gymnastics, although he has also participated in soccer and cross country on the company level. A great believer in the old saying—"There's a time for everything," Brownie puts his time in on the books during the week, but puts them up on the weekends and enjoys life. Armed with a real desire to make good a career in the Navy and the determination to see it through, Brownie has a promising future ahead, and the Navy can look forward to a valuable addition to its ranks on graduation day.

JAMES JEFFERIES CARTER

J. J., known to everyone as an outstanding conversationalist, was welcome in any crowd with his quick wit and good sense of humor. He was always ready to amaze you with his storehouse of facts on any sport, especially baseball. Never one to miss an opportunity to use his voice, he was a member of the Antiphonal Choir. Academics came easy for him so he could always find time to work the daily crossword puzzle. Being from landlocked Springfield, Ohio, he demonstrated his tremendous interest in the athletic program here by spending a lot of his afternoons in the Natatorium—passing swimming tests. His ambition and determination will undoubtedly make him a success after graduation.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH DAILEY

Having a background as a Navy junior, and coming to the Academy from the Bolles School in Jacksonville, Florida, Bill might have been able to foresee a bit easier life than many of his classmates. The skinny department soon proved to be the great equalizer, however, and many pennies were poured into Tecumseh's quiver before Bill could draw an easy breath. Actually, it was only after he made the Supt's list during second class year that he allowed himself much social life.

A natural athlete, Bill tried his hand successfully at intramural tennis, squash, and badminton. The winters' chill made him seek indoor employment, and he became a strong battalion debater, losing only once in two years of competition. Naturally, all of his accomplishments took time and effort, so he soon became able to get the maximum amount of sleep in the least period of time. His success here is perhaps indicated by the fact that he claims the very singular distinction of having never slept in class.

Since his first and last love is flying, Bill plans to make his career in that field, and with his desire and determination, will achieve success as a naval officer, and will most certainly be a fine addition to the fleet.

Although a New Yorker by birth, Jack came to the Academy from the Southlands of Birmingham, Alabama. He had only routine problems adjusting to the rigors of plebe year, although he definitely found the upperclass lacking in Southern hospitality. During his stay on the banks of the Severn Jack made a fine record. While maintaining a high QPR, he also made a fine contribution to his company and the Brigade. He was a fierce competitor in every thing he did. An avid sportsman, he participated in a variety of sports, and gave of his few spare moments to the Catholic Choir and the Log Staff. With his winning smile and pleasant mannerisms, Jack made friends easily. The Academy's loss will be the Navy's gain no matter what service Jack decides to enter.

JOHN CHURCHILL DeVINE JR.

JOSEPH PHILIP FERRARA

Steve came to these hallowed halls straight from Lee High School. A well-travelled Army Brat, he found Navy life a little different Plebe year. Adjustment made, Steve became a worthy member of the Brigade and participated actively in intramural sports and concert band, where his talents on the trombone were not inconsiderable. His knowledge of his favorite hobbies, jazz, baseball, and photography ranked him as quite an authority on these subjects, and his subtle sense of humor was present to cheer us all up during the "Dark Ages". A diligent worker, Steve could always be counted on when the chips were down. Whatever field he chooses, Steve will do well and make a fine officer.

Phil came to the Naval Academy fresh from Roxbury Latin in Boston. A tenth company plebe, he found true happiness in the eighteenth company during youngster year in the role of waterboy and was commonly observed during study hour when his exuberance overflowed to others. When not dragging or playing golf on his weekends he could usually be found planning for cruise or his weekends for the next semester. "M. H." as his closer friends knew him took an active interest in the "200 Club" and when not actively engaged in club activities could be found on the company soccer or football fields. With his computer-like mind zat zating away Phil never really gave the academic departments a fair chance and much to their chagrin managed to pack his study time with many "monas" and "kublas" along with an ample supply of now famous and coveted letters. As for exams there were always those "monster" reviews with minimum sleep. One of the soundest sleepers of all times, Phil's room-mates' biggest problem was trying to devise a plan to harness the tremendous power which came forth from the upper rack in the form of assorted grunts and snores. Wherever Phil may go, he will always be liked and remembered for his enthusiasm and good naturedness which have been a trademark of his stay here.

STEPHEN JEROME FISCHER

This six foot five inch Irishman, hailing from the "Golden City" of San Francisco, will launch into an avid dissertation on the merits of "his" city at the drop of a dixie cup. Dan, an outspoken, somewhat liberal Catholic, is a man of high ideals, firm religious convictions and keen interest in politics. Appropriately, the name "Father Flanagan" has been bestowed upon him by many of his frustrated classmates who have attempted to argue with him over some point of religion or the political scene. His chief interests lie in the field of history and foreign affairs, two subjects which he hopes to pursue more intensely upon graduation. Dan's list of activities at the Academy includes an active part in the NAFAC Conferences, secretary-treasurer of the Public Relations Committee, member of the Spanish Club and part time basketballer. Once in the fleet, Dan's career should prove to be both interesting and successful.

DANIEL V. FLANAGAN JR.

A product of Lindenwold, New Jersey, Ed was lured away from the clutches of several Ivy League schools by the NAAA's zealous bird dogs and arrived in Annapolis for Plebe summer weighing some 200 pounds. One football season later and 40 pounds lighter, Ed and Navy football parted company, since there didn't seem to be much future for a 160 pound fullback on a team that boasted Pat Donnelly and Freddie Marlin at that same position. Navy got its money's worth out of Ed that spring however, as he hit .354 to lead the Plebe baseballers to a 10-4 season. Moving to the Varsity next year he proved to be a valuable addition, both as catcher and outfielder.

Ed, known as "the Bear" because of his fondness for hibernating in the pad on those long cold winter afternoons, didn't neglect the books either. Blessed with a tenacious memory for the duty formula and an adding machine mind, the Bear doesn't often make mistakes, and 1/c year saw him become the number one company slash. Future Mids will probably know him as a Nav prof, unless the Dago Department grabs him first to teach that strange New Jersey dialect of his.

EDWARD JAY HLOPAK

DENNIS ALAN JONES

Bob brought to the Naval Academy a winning personality and his wide and varied experience as an Air Force Junior. His prowess in the shells of the George Washington High crew team and his fame as "Most Handsome Boy at G. W. High" are well known among his many friends (just ask him). But all this was a mere preview of bigger and better things for the future.

A talent for fun and excitement and a love for pranks are as much a part of Bob as the all important mirror and his man Friday—"Ams". Bob has always been a leader, whether at work or at play. Few people have his ability for winning the respect and friendship of others (just ask Joe-Joe). In whatever activities he participates, he has always made an important contribution. "Chief" has been an outstanding member of the company's soccer and light-weight football teams and devoted the springtime to making himself a "massive" member of the 200-club. We suspect he is striving for "Most Handsome Midshipman".

Bob's sincerity and energy will assure him of success and happiness in whatever walks of life he may follow. We all join in wishing Bob the best of fortunes and smooth sailing.

ROBERT D. HENNESSY

Denny came to the Academy from the corn fields of the Midwest after spending one year at Fairbury Junior College and another at the University of Nebraska. His strong desire to win and inexhaustible energy made him a tough competitor on any team. Not only did he excel on the athletic field, but also in academics where his name could always be found among those on the Supt's list. Denny's easy-going personality and sense of humor has gained him the friendship and admiration of all those that he knew.

"Lebo" came to the big city from a small Ohio town way back when, and ever since, he has made quite a name for himself. His family and friends in Wickliffe are extremely proud of their representative at Navy and they have every reason to feel this way. Larry does quite well in the academic areas, maintaining Superintendent's List status each and every semester. In addition, he has been an active participant in Company and Battalion sports and also devotes a great deal of time to extracurricular activities, namely the Brigade Hop Committee of which he is the Chairman. Everybody who knows "Lebo" is impressed by his warm and sincere personality. He is very popular with everyone; they all like his casual and nonchalant way of life. Larry has a particular flare for fine clothes, expensive sports cars, and, in general, the finer things in life. He is always willing to lend a helping hand and through his work here, he has contributed a great deal to his friends and to the Brigade. No matter what the circumstances, Larry tries hard, smiles a lot, and listens to everyone. His future can be little but success.

LAWRENCE JOSEPH LEOVIC

ROY G. LYCETT

A product of the West Coast, Roy hails from Glendale, California. Foregoing a promising career as a hot dog vendor, he entered the academy directly from high school with full realization of the task which faced him. Roy has studied hard at Navy, but has always found time to entertain other "challenges." Delving into the complex academy sports program, he has played everything from association football to wrestling. This interest in sports is complemented by his working arrangement with the Public Relations Committee. Although Roy has little spare time, he has always been willing to lend a sympathetic ear to a classmate, or to help in any worthy cause. His innate friendliness will make him a welcome companion, whether in Annapolis or Hong Kong. Doubtless, his numerous academy friends will greet him for many years to come.

BRIAN EDWARD MUIR

Brian came to us direct from Robinsdale High School in Minnesota. He got through plebe year with little trouble and in the process showed the spirit and determination that has made him an outstanding classmate.

During the trials of his first year, he found time to win the Brigade Championship in Chess. Starting off Youngster year in a new company was of no hindrance to him as he quickly won the admiration and friendship of all he came in contact with.

Most of Brian's four years were spent on the Supt. list. His athletic ability was devoted primarily to the battalion crew team where he won several class numerals and the Brigade Championship three years in a row. Brian has made his mark here at the Academy, one that he can be proud of.

Graduation will see this man enter destroyers and take with him everything essential to a successful career and rewarding life.

Doug, a dyed-in-the-wool Californian, emigrated to USNA from Coronado high school where he was an all-around athlete, as well as class and student body president. After lettering in baseball for the plebes and helping them to a fine 10-4 season, Doug concentrated his efforts towards bringing home victories for the Battalion and Company Intramural teams, doing especially well in Battalion football and rugby. Much of Doug's time was also devoted to the Drum and Bugle Corps of which he was a member for 2 years. Along the way he has also found time to squeeze in a major in Bull which has always been his prime area of academic interest. Youngster cruise found Doug building a violent dislike for oilers aboard the USS Sabine. Second class summer Doug somehow found time to indoctrinate the new plebes in between afternoons on the golf course, trips to the Half-Way House and evening excursions to D.C. He spent 1/c cruise aboard a destroyer in the Med picking up vital knowledge both about the Navy and the local natives.

DOUGLAS MARVIN NORTON

J. PAUL REASON

A proud Washington D.C. product and commuter, Paul migrated to the academy following several years in sampling other collegiate institutions. What accompanied him was a personality, or more accurately, several personalities. In one instance, Paul could be the featured performer on any dance floor. The next glimpse might illustrate the student bearing down on some best selling novel. As his philosophy contained little sympathy for study, this approach might serve as a lesson for his classmates. A fine academic record, engagement in Antiphonal Choir activities, and duties as the Director of the Public Relations Committee attest to his success. What lies ahead is certainly the continuance of an interesting and entertaining career, both for himself and the benefit of his colleagues. We'll be looking for him in our respective wardrooms!

JACK URBAN

Jack, a product of St. Joseph, Missouri, came to the Naval Academy right out of high school—a notable four year career in itself. A multi-sport star in high school, Jack continued one of them here throughout youngster year, at the end of which he bowed to rising youth. However, his two years as a varsity and plebe tennis player were an achievement to be envied by anyone. Not to be outdone, Jack has since spent much of his athletic time with company sports squads, one of which he helped lead to a Brigade Championship during 2/c year. In academics, Jack has been a master of the art of achieving a maximum output with a minimum of effort. His achievements are many and his ability is limitless. To complement his academic prowess, Jack's sincere and fun-loving nature contributes to a personality that people find hard to dislike, and easy to love. His manner is quiet but his love for fun is matched by no one. Weekends find him where the fun is—never a dull moment is his motto and his standard. Not to be forgotten are his active roles in the Naval Academy Glee Club and the Catholic Choir, both of which have enjoyed four years of his efforts. Upon graduation, the Naval Service will find that it has a very promising young officer in Jack Urban, as will the people who will fall under his command. Jack will always have something to offer, no matter what he may choose to do.

RICHARD JAMES VOGT

Dick came to the Naval Academy after spending two years at Coe College on the plains of Iowa. His great desire to follow in his family's military footsteps gave him great leadership qualities and caused him to be an inspiration to his classmates. Dick's dynamic personality was not unmatched by his athletic ability and his desire to win. It was not uncommon to see him, at any time of day, on the athletic field or in the gymnasium. Dick will truly be remembered by those about him, as a tremendous personality and a wonderful friend.

We often suspect that Lynn was donated to the Academy by the Duluth, Minnesota Chamber of Commerce as a special agent in charge of making friends for his "Gopher State". It was a wise choice, for in extolling the many merits of his homeland he is tireless and convincing.

For four years the academic departments willingly provided harassment, but those long hours at the library have paid off. Lynn's grades, though never outstanding, have been marked by steady improvement throughout his sojourn at Navy. Athletically, the big Minnesotan is inevitably on the move. Cross-Country is his forte—and he wears that N-star with pride—while Batt rugby provides an off-season interest pursued with equal enthusiasm.

That combination of dogged determination underlying easygoing manner, tried and tested over the years, has won for him the friendship and respect of all. We shall hear more of Lynn in years to come.

LYNN ALLEN WEGNER

ROBERT MARSHALL WHITEHEAD

After starting his college career at Alfred University, Bob left his home state of New York and ventured south to Maryland to start his Navy career here at the Academy. As a member of Lambda Chi Alpha Bob put in his second plebe year in the old Navy and still came through with flying colors. Due to natural ability and hard work he had no trouble with the academic department and was on the Supt's list and wore stars. He put his voice and musical talents to good use as a member of the Chapel Choir and the Glee Club. In intramural sports Bob took an active part in helping the battalion handball and company volleyball teams to several Brigade championships. He also worked as a member of the public relations club. His good nature, friendly smile, and sense of humor won Bob many friends. We all know that whatever he attempts in the future will be successful and the Navy will be getting a fine officer.

Soon after graduating as valedictorian of his high school class, Dave left Hamilton, Ohio and entered the Navy under the high school airman recruit program. He had his basic training at San Diego, Cal.; airman training at Los Alamitos, Cal., and Memphis, Tenn.; and finally went to NAPS at Bainbridge, Md. While at NAPS he served as Company Commander of the First Co.

He graduated from the prep school in 1961, entering the naval academy three months later. Dave was a member of the Plebe gymnastics team his first year at USNA, then left on the U.S.S. Forrestal for his youngster cruise. For his first class cruise, he was one of that lucky group which got the SUBLANT cruise.

Asked what he remembered best about his years at the academy, Dave unhesitatingly replied, "leave and weekends".

DAVID D. AULD

GARY M. BURRIS

RAYMOND H. CLARY JR.

Obtaining a congressional appointment from Missouri's fourth district, Gary came to the Naval Academy directly from high school. Plunging into the rigors of plebe year, Gary had a hard time with academics. Nevertheless, he kept his nose to the grindstone and had no trouble with his subjects in the next three years. His small stature did not hinder his enjoyment of sports, soccer and squash being his favorites. Possessing a good sense of humor, Gary would always have a joke to cheer up his classmates in the midst of the dark ages. Gary has always had a strong desire for a career in the Naval service, and this desire will make him a valuable addition to the fleet.

Ray traveled from the distant shores of sunny California to make his four-year visit in the East. A tall and very likable guy, Ray made many lasting friendships here at the Academy. He always fought hard on intramural teams, playing both squash and softball, and in his second-class year he was an important member of the Brigade-champion softball team. Ray's spare time was spent bowling, starting snowball fights during study hours in the winter, and looking for his runaway hamster. Although having a true love for the water, what with fishing and water-skiing, Ray found a new love during second-class summer—flying. Thus, his career will probably be in Naval Aviation rather than in the water-borne forces. With his desire toward his career and his drive to excel, Ray should most definitely be a credit to the airways of the Navy.

THEODORE T. CZECH

Ted came to the Naval Academy directly from Thorton High School in the Chicago area. While in high school, Ted earned numerous awards for his athletic ability in football and wrestling. He pursued his wrestling talents further at the Naval Academy and was an outstanding member of the plebe team. Although Ted never got along too well with the science department, academics presented no problem to him, and he was able to maintain a respectable grade average at the academy. He will be remembered most by his classmates for his friendly manners and easy-going ways. Ted is sold on the Navy, and whatever his service selection is, his drive and enthusiasm will make him a valuable contribution to the fleet.

MARK DAVIS

Mark came to the Naval Academy directly from High School. After a season of lightweight crew, Mark turned his attention to the Naval Academy Sailing Squadron, where he has devoted his many talents. His constant effort in the squadron brought him a command at the beginning of second class year when he and his crew won recognition as top boat in the Academy fleet. Even summertime finds him very actively engaged in his favorite sport when he has participated in the Annapolis to Newport and Bermuda races. Consequently he was chosen Vice-Commodore of the sailing squadron. In the winter time you could find Mark running the hills of Hospital Point for the Company cross-country team. Once in a while he finds time to think about sports cars, an occasional drag, the academics, and the agility course. His quick-witted personality and academic ability are certain to be a credit to the Navy.

NORMAN PAUL FLUHRER

Norm hails from a place called Wyoming, not the state but a small town in central Illinois. Excelling in all sports in high school Norm chose a new one at Navy. Plebe summer found Norm in the fencing loft and first class year found him the captain of our fencing team.

Academics always kept Norman's friends worried but with a little hard work and the faithful left-handed salutes Norm constantly managed to amaze us.

Always first to volunteer his assistance to a classmate in distress, Norm's affable personality won him many friends throughout the Brigade.

Norm's future appears to be destroyers but should he change his mind he will be an asset to the Navy wherever he chooses to serve.

JOSEPH ANGELO GIARDINA

After graduation from Gilman School, Joe left home in Baltimore and made the trek South to USNA. Joe brought his athletic talents and enthusiasm for sports with him, and while at the Academy he excelled in football and lacrosse, where he played on championship intramural teams. Anyone wanting to know the scores of the Baltimore "Bullets," "Orioles," or "Colts" games, or the best pick at Pimlico would go to see the "Wop". A real lover of the pad, he will long be remembered by the mids who lived near him as the best barber in Bancroft Hall and the man with the most chow from home. After playing the role of an all around ladies man for a few years, Joe could frequently be seen in the company of a certain Army Colonel's daughter on weekends. After graduation, Joe hopes to go Supply Corps. His winning personality and love of fun will surely win him many more friends and make him a success in whatever he does.

Pete came to us from a suburb of Cleveland, Ohio after one year of preparation at New Mexico Military Institute. Participating in numerous sports both in high school and at New Mexico, Pete easily acclimated to the physical test of plebe year, and managed to find a little leisure also. As an upper-classman, each fall Pete found himself on a strict diet for the 150 pound football team.

Never bothered by academics, Pete excelled in the classroom. It was a rare occasion when Pete's name was not on the Supt's List.

With all his determination, drive, and excellent sense of humor, the Academy is losing a good man, but the Navy will gain an excellent leader.

DOUGLAS JEFFREY KATZ

Hailing from the hills of West Virginia, Doug came to the Academy after spending one year at New Mexico Military Institute. During his stay at the Academy, Doug was known for his friendly, outgoing personality and for his complete unselfishness in helping his classmates with their studies or any other thing in which he could give assistance. While at the Academy, Doug was devoted to four time consuming endeavors; academics, varsity football and lacrosse, and writing "extremely masterful" letters to his girl. Many people believe that the latter category occupied more of his time than anything else. During study hours, when Doug was not studying or writing a letter, he was very often engrossed in developing a new way to make money so that he could afford his periodic weekends. He, admittedly, enjoyed these weekends more than anything else at the Academy. Doug will always be remembered as one of the best liked members of his class. The many good friends that Doug has made at the Academy will readily admit, that, with his tremendous desire for perfection and his sincere, magnetic character, he can not help but be a success in whatever branch of the Navy is lucky enough to acquire his service.

Jim came to USNA directly out of high school. Taking full advantage of the elective program, Jim has excelled in the regular academics of the midshipman and still had time to complete a major in both the fields of math and physics. To prove his academic prowess, Jim has worn stars for the past two years. As for athletics, Jim has proved to be an accomplished squash player playing for the plebe team and on the company team. He also excels in football and swimming. On any given afternoon one may find him participating in one of these three. Jim is a very active member of the Brigade reception committee and the USNA Gun Club. Having a passion for photography Jim has a regular library of wildlife pictures. His conscientiousness and determination will carry him through any situation and guarantee him a successful career in the Navy.

JACK EDWARD KOHL JR.

Jack hails from Seaside, Oregon and came to the academy after attending Millard school and Portland State College. No slouch in academics he supplemented the normal curriculum with various overloads, and his name was familiar to all those who checked the Superintendent's List. Jack sought the more active sports and was the mainstay of the company football and soccer teams. An unreconstructed Cowboy at heart, "the Dude" was a leader in the reorganization of the Gun Club and served as its Vice President. Naturally good natured and easy-going he is probably the world's greatest booster of Oregon, and made many lasting friends at the academy. Jack has considered all aspects of the Navy, but at present his plans are not definite. Whatever his choice the service will receive a fine officer.

A Navy junior, Mac grew up on various Naval Stations from Spain to San Francisco, but he calls the latter area his home. During his travels he picked up the sport of soccer, which he played for the Navy Plebes and later the Junior Varsity. A man of many talents, Mac was famed for his ability to answer any question with the use of a slide rule and a few ratios, and is probably the only man ever to take his slide rule to a Bull final.

A Dago slash, Mac spent first class cruise with the Peruvian Navy, although we suspect that he spent more time studying social customs ashore than he did at sea. He also found time to acquire a major in Engineering.

Mac has been a fine classmate and a real help to those of us who didn't have his ability in Steam and Skinny.

MICHAEL JOHN McGARAGHAN

RONALD WILLIAM MEYER

Ron came to the Naval Academy after graduating from Dubuque Senior High School, Dubuque, Iowa in 1961. He wrestled in the 130 pound class on the Plebe wrestling team. At the end of Plebe year he went on youngster cruise aboard the U.S.S. Kaskaskia (AO-27) and acquired the nickname "Stumpy". Ron was on the varsity wrestling team and worked on the Brigade Activities Committee Public Information staff. He took his first class cruise aboard the U.S.S. Damato (DD-871) in the North Atlantic. Ron spent one of his best summers at Pensacola, Florida, learning the basic ups and downs of flying and often playing the drums at the Officer's Club.

JACK MALCOLM MOORE

Skip came to the Academy from Belleville, Illinois, by way of four years as an electronics technician in the Navy and a tour at the Naval Academy Prep School. He is particularly noted for his determination and ability to get any task done whether academic, athletic, or military. This trait is best pointed up by his successful bout with the sometimes rugged academics and his all out participation in the Company sports program. A mainstay of a successful fall cross country team, Skip turns his winning ways to football in the winter and softball in the spring. His hard-charging attitude continues into the summer as shown by his trip to Fort Benning, Ga., over second class summer to qualify for his airborne wings. Far from one for all work and no play, Skip devotes considerable thought to the women of his life and can always be counted on to be the life of the party. Combining an ability to get along well with everyone with his strong leadership ability and devotion to duty, Skip will prove to be an outstanding contribution from his class to the Naval Service.

FIFTH BATTALION

Mike, or the Golden Greek as he is known to many of his friends hails from the city of Lewiston in New England's northern-most state. One of Navy's most ardent fencers, Mike was a member of the varsity team and his skill with the sabre led several intramural fencing teams to championships. Consistently bragging about his native state, Mike is a lover of all sports from deer hunting in Maine to pro basketball, especially the Boston Celtics. His other interests include anything connected with his Greek ancestry to music of all types, especially jazz. An ardent lover of the blue trampoline and late hours, Mike still managed to keep up his grades and was especially proficient in the Liberal Arts. During the weekends, he could be found in the company of his one and only hometown girl. Mike seems to be headed toward a career in Navy Line, and his good personality and fun-loving nature should make him an asset wherever he goes.

MICHAEL JOHN MOSCOVIS

DAVID LEWIS NEAL

After being born and raised in Toledo, Illinois, Dave spent a year at the University of Illinois. As a member of the NROTC unit there he found the military life much to his liking and transferred to the Naval Academy. Plebe year was no problem for Dave. He had little trouble with his academics and as a member of the Plebe track team he continued to use his natural athletic ability. When he wasn't running track, Dave could be seen bolstering company activities during the weekdays and relaxing on the weekends. In addition, he was always ready to share his chow packages or lend assistance to anyone who asked. Throughout his four years, Dave could be counted upon for his cheerful friendly attitude and humorous observations. Dave's strong character, cheerful outlook and enthusiasm will make him a fine leader and a welcome addition to the service.

JON L. NEARY

Jon came to the Naval Academy after a year of engineering at Kansas University. He had little trouble with plebe academics, and he could always be counted upon to help a classmate. Jon's free time was usually spent in the amateur radio shack, W3ADO. He was elected Sec. Treas. of the radio club his second class year and became president his first class year. Jon always liked flying dating back to his high school days in Kansas, and he never passed up a chance to log a few hours of flying time. After graduation Jon will start a career in Naval Aviation and I am sure he will be a dedicated addition to the ranks of the fly-boys.

Bob, known affectionately by his closest friends as "Babes," came to the Naval Academy from West Hartford, Connecticut, immediately after his graduation from high school. An avid fan of almost every major spectator sport, he could always be counted on to give detailed information on the Phillies and the Giants football team. When it came to participation in sports Bob could, with very little effort, develop a good game in almost any sport he chose. On the intramural level he spread his talents to a wide range of activities including football, tennis and squash; on the varsity level he specialized in golf, making the squad every year, with the exception of Youngster Year when his game was interrupted by an untimely shoulder operation. No matter what branch of the Navy Bob enters, his untiring drive, good sense of humor and interest in the Navy will make him an outstanding officer.

ROBERT BUTCHER PARKER III

WILLARD OWEN POOL

Owen, or "Wuggy" as he was known to friends, left his native Georgia for the wider horizons of the Naval Academy and soon demonstrated that the rigors of midshipman life held no problems in store. Except for a slight misunderstanding with the Foreign Languages Department he easily handled the best the Academic departments could offer and added insult to injury by overloading. A skinny "slash" Owen amazed his associates with his ability to construct ingeniously simple electronic devices to short circuit the Bancroft power system. On the athletic field Wuggy made his mark in such diversified areas as handball and lightweight football as a member of Brigade championship teams in both. Squash, cross country, and volleyball round out the list of sporting endeavors by this athletic-minded southerner. On weekends Wuggy could be found attending varsity sporting events and dragging members of the opposite sex, among which he had a large and devoted following, but rarely if ever in "Mother B." A potential career man Owen is interested in submarines. His academic ability and aggressive spirit insure him success in his desire and will make him an outstanding naval officer.

LEE F. RATHBUN

BUNS, as he is affectionately known by his classmates, came to the Academy from prep school. He was a member of the plebe football team until injuries forced him to finish the season as a plebe squash player. After a few close calls with 4/c academics, he decided to settle down to the rigors of academic life and the less time consuming intramurals wherein he has since excelled. During 2/c year he was undefeated in Batt. handball and lost only one match in company squash. When he isn't studying or contributing in the sports program, he can be heard expounding on the laurels of Mack diesels or Caterpillar tractors. He has also found time to drag occasionally and, like many of us, has been deeply embarrassed when hometown girl met Crabtown girl by chance—not by choice. His quick wit, knowledge of current events, and the professional Navy will enable him to take up in the fleet where he left off at the Academy—a competent, well rounded Naval officer.

FIFTH BATTALION

Hailing from Callicoon, New York, Ed came to the Naval Academy via Alfred University in New York. After an average Plebe Year, he generated an intense desire to excel. Armed with this weapon, and not being afraid to burn the "midnight oil", Ed soon became the top man in his company academically. However, he still found enough time to devote to rugby, becoming an outstanding player. He enthusiastically gave much of his time in helping others and twice a year settled down to prep his classmates for the oncoming rush of exams. Ed's sincere manner is certain to make him as successful in the fleet as he has been here at the Academy.

EDMUND TAYLOR RUMBLE III

RONALD M. SLUSSER

Ron, coming to the academy from "Delta Tau Delta" of Purdue University, brought to us not only a tremendous personality and that needed collegiate air, but a relaxed, yet sincere desire to be the best in whatever his endeavor. Ron, at the end of his first year at Purdue was named the outstanding freshman NROTC midshipman. It qualified him for competitive examination for entrance into the Academy, and in it he stood fifth in the nation. This was just the beginning of Ron's outstanding accomplishments. Although hindered his first two years by a couple of unavoidable tours in the U. S. Naval Hospital, this did not hold him back in either academics or athletics. His grades were always of the highest caliber, earning him "stars" his final year; and in athletics, even though basketball was his favorite, and a sport in which he never failed to excel, he was a constant asset to the company every year in whatever sport he participated. Although never a man to ignore a bridge game, often as much as seven full nights a week, a movie on the weekend, or just a good ole round of cheer, his qualities of industriousness and initiative, and his ability to do well under the strongest pressures, will make him as invaluable to the service as he has been to the brigade.

WILLIAM E. STAWITZ

Bill came to the Academy via NAPS from the fleet where he spent four and a half years working as an aviation electronics technician. He has been very successful in intramural sports and has been on several brigade championship teams plus a regimental championship team. His all around ability is shown by participation in cross country, volleyball, handball, and soccer. Although academics were never his strong point, Bill's average has increased steadily over the years. Since the end of youngster year his major outside interests have centered in his particular O.A.O. with hopes of making this situation permanent at graduation. This interest has resulted in some good natured ribbing from his classmates but his affable nature takes it all in stride. A wife, a Volkswagen, and a profitable Naval career are in store for Bill after graduation, and if his desire and ability to do a good job in the fleet are as high as they have been at the Academy he will be a valuable asset to the service.

Rick came to the Naval Academy after a year at VPI; a true glutton for punishment. Rick is a navy junior and can call no place his permanent home. Most of his leave at the Naval Academy, though, he has spent on the sunny shores of the bay of Naples. During his years at the Naval Academy, Rick ran undoubtedly one of the biggest "lonely hearts" syndicates to exist among his contemporaries. Contacts in foreign ports enabled him to fix up classmates for cruise as well as weekends. Not all arrangements were successful, however, as witnessed by the tragic day on which Rick's company was bricked en masse. It must be added, however, that even our hero did not leave the field of carnage unscathed.

Rick's activities keep him extremely busy, and the length of this biography does not permit a complete list. Suffice it to say that Rick was an outstanding chairman of the Ring and Crest Committee and proved the decisive factor in carrying the company cross country team to victory.

If Rick's performance at Annapolis is any indication, his future will be promising.

FREDERICK JAMES BRUSH JR.

FRANKLIN WINFIELD CALKINS JR.

FRED JAMES CLIFT

Frank came directly to the Academy from Springfield High, giving up huntin' and his beloved Green Mountains for a sextant and the deep blue sea. During his four years by the Severn's shores he majored in sports and women, minoring in academics the night before exams. Had Frank spent much more time studying he would have probably rewritten the text books since he easily mastered his many overloads. Thanks to his efforts at the oar in the fall the Batt crew team was the Brigade champions year after year. Winter and spring found the Vermonter always willing to give of his athletic abilities wherever they were needed within the company. Frank's New England twang plus his Yankee sense of humor summed up to a most interesting personality which he readily shared with all. Scholar, athlete, friend, Frank is a credit to the Navy and an officer we can all be proud of.

JOHN PATRICK COLLINS

Jim, "The Moose", spent a year at Oregon State before he decided to leave his beloved home state and come east to USNA. "Moose" brought with him a sharp mind, quick wit and an ever present smile that people came to know so well. Plunging wholeheartedly into the strange Navy life, Jim quickly became master of the daily routine. Being an accomplished musician, he joined the Drum and Bugle Corps and watched the rest of the Brigade carry rifles to P-rades for the next four years. Studies never got the best of him for his name adorned the Superintendent's List most of his stay at Canoe U. Neither studies, athletics, D & B, nor the Executive Department were able to cut in on "The Moose's" dragging time. Different drags each week and voluminous quantities of mail always made it necessary to inquire as to what girl he was talking about. Jim's most outstanding accomplishment was the winning of many friends. He was one of the few people who had a hard time carrying on a conversation on the way to class because he had to give a cheery greeting to everyone he knew. When he's commissioned, a dedicated and able officer will be added to the Fleet. No matter what branch he finally chooses, he will do his best and be known for his fine work.

John, or "Turtle" as he was known to his friends, was as much at home on the Chesapeake Bay sailing a knock-about as he was, in the classroom leading a discussion of the world situation. Being a lifelong Washingtonian, nothing in the D.C. area escaped Turtle's attention, whether it be a cabinet shake up or a change in the local disc jockeys. Though his thoughts were constantly occupied with academics or the latest current events, he still was quick to organize a touch football game on a crisp fall afternoon. No one will ever forget his demonstration of pinpoint kicking in the company Turkey Bowl game. Turtle's quiet ways, mixed with a wealth of understanding and patience gained him the friendship and respect of all who came in contact with him. The Navy will always be proud to count John among its own.

JOHN ARTHUR GENERAL

After John had completed a year at Columbia University, where he was an outstanding member of the NROTC, he decided to come to USNA. And everyone who knows John has to agree that John's move was definitely to the Academy's and the Navy's advantage. Throughout his four years here at the Academy, he has always ranked high in all his endeavors, whether in the classroom, on the parade field, or on the athletic field. His keen sense of competition on the athletic field has won him many awards, the outstanding one being a record in USNA's track record book for the triple jump. His participation on his company soccer and basketball teams caused these teams to enjoy several seasons of success.

His good-natured, easy-going, friendly manner has won a multitude of friends, both here at the Academy and in the outside world. With these attributes, we, his classmates, are proud that he is one of us and we are sure that his career in the Navy will be a credit to himself, his classmates, the Navy, and the Academy.

Dave, "Dizzy" to his many friends, came to the Academy from Merchantville, New Jersey, and before long made himself known throughout the Brigade. In high school, while captaining his track and football teams, Diz was named South Jersey's Lineman of the Year on a team that didn't win a game in three seasons. This same competitive spirit made up for his lack of size as Diz made more tackles on the Plebe team than any other man for the season. When he isn't on the football field, Dave finds his relaxation and enjoyment in all forms of literature and is quite well-read in contemporary novels. Always near, and occasionally on the Superintendent's List, Dave was often in the enviable position of having too many weekends and not enough time to take them. Never without a date, Dave was continually seen dragging beautiful girls and generally having a good time. With his easygoing nature, quick smile and perceptive mind, Dave will brighten up the wardroom of any ship afloat and be an asset professionally to the ship's company.

DAVID DOUGLAS GILLESPIE

RENÉ E. GONZALEZ JR.

René came to the academy an old salt with a nautical heritage, his father having graduated in '43. Coming from California, Virginia, and Florida, René adapted very well and proved his ability in academics and athletics. A slash in all departments, much of his free time was spent piloting the buckets through treacherous academic waters. Sunday afternoon would find him relaxing with a book of French poetry while light classical music played in the background. Much to their dismay, wine, women, and song come second to the service with René, but it is a close second at worst. His congenial manner and sharp wit put him in demand as a roommate and friend, and his refreshing sense of humor made him a boon at any party. With his quiet aggressiveness, René should prove to be a formidable opponent in the competition for promotion in the service.

Gary, more commonly referred to as "Gimp" or "Granny," came to the shores of the Severn after a youth of hunting and "city livin'" on Long Island. With a sharp mind and a great deal of determination, "Gimp" quickly established himself as a leader and a hard worker. During his stay at USNA, he was seen often on the athletic fields, and as often in overload class. Working diligently to complete a double major in mathematics and physics, he excelled in his studies and found his name on all tablets of academic and personal excellence wherever they appeared. Most weekends he could be found hitting the books, skeet shooting, or dutifully pursuing the girls, well-armed with a new twist on the Navy Line.* His interests included hunting and shooting, learning of all forms, and any discussion, and he worked hard at all three. The Gun Club was his pet and he spent much time in its formation and activities. With graduation, the service will find in Gary a devoted and valuable officer.

*Well-known for his manner of "putting it where he could find it," then losing anything, and the "ER" for "A" in Omeger, Gary's friendliness made him many friends.

ROBERT ANTHONY GREEN

"Join the Navy and See the World", as the old slogan goes, but "Man Mountain", a name Bob was dubbed plebe year, being a Navy Junior had already logged in most of the ports around the globe before he entered the academy in the summer of '61. Bob could always be picked out of the crowd by his "unforgettable smile" and cheerful attitude. A hard worker from the start, "Man Mountain" was both our Honor Rep and Lucky Bag Rep, using his spare time to coordinate business affairs in the French Club. Bob was able to secure a Major from the Bull Dept., reading everything from Russian History to Fanny Hill, the latter not contributing greatly to his Supt's List Grades. Whether it was fencing, sailing, badminton or cross country, "Man Mountain" was always bringing home the gravy. His appreciation of fine music could not be matched, and he spent many hours enhancing his library of tapes. Whatever Bob did left an impression with us all, and the memories of Friday night popcorn sessions and Saturday night struggles with the wardroom door will never be forgotten. Bob's future is a bright one indeed, and Uncle Sam could not be getting a more capable or honorable mariner who is sure to find continued success in all his future assignments.

JUDD GILBERT HALENZA JR.

After graduating from Richfield high school in 1961, Judd came to the Naval Academy with a high interest in academics and the ability to excel on the athletic field. As the starting left guard on the varsity 150 lb. football team Judd displayed the outstanding sportsmanship and the abilities of a great athlete. Judd is looking forward to obtaining the golden wings of Navy Air and seems destined for post graduate school after graduation.

With his fine leadership qualities and good nature, the Navy is gaining an officer of the highest caliber who will add greatly to the service and his profession.

Jim came to the Academy from one year at West Virginia State which is near his home town of St. Alban's, West Virginia. After leaving one disaster area for another, Poopsie, as he is affectionately referred to, had no trouble adapting to Naval Academy life.

Poopsie never had trouble with the academic departments; he ignored them and they ignored him for four years. His athletic prowess extended to such sports as company football, batt handball and lacrosse, enabling him to be a top player in every sport that he participated in.

Poopsie is the chief interpreter for rock and roll hit records, which he enjoys as well as his folk music collection. A lover of informal hops, he could be found on the weekends with his favorite girl listening to the "Spiffies".

A sometimes serious, sometimes jovial, always witty, and never dejected person, he is sure to be an asset to the service in the years to come.

JAMES EARL HATFIELD

"Brutus," as he came to be known Plebe Year, hails to the Service from the small farming community of Jasper, Minnesota, with an unfailing high spirit and a very long pair of arms. He put both features to good use during those first rigorous months, never losing his sense of humor, and churning the waters of the Severn vigorously enough to earn a berth on the first boat of the Plebe Crew.

Easy-going fellow that he is, Brute amazed many with his ability to handle academics with a minimum of study hour time, while others found themselves hard-pressed to survive. Weekends rarely found him in his room, as he traveled with the Glee Club or Chapel Choir, performed in the Musical Clubs Show, or indulged in his great weakness for women—and with notable success, for the most part.

We feel certain that there is a fine future in the Fleet for this tall farm boy with the winning way, ready smile, and uncommon share of common sense.

Fred is a gift to Navy from the party school of the Midwest, Wisconsin. As testimonial to this fact and to Fred's good nature the Executive department granted him two citations for conspicuous achievement in this area. Fred's talents are even more recognized and rewarded in other fields though. His athletic talents left many a subdued opponent in the squash courts, amazed the opposition's wings and halfbacks, and contributed many buckets from the foul line and the floor. Aside from his obvious value to 28 in these sports he also had more than enough ability left over to quarterback the undefeated Turkey Bowl team, his grand finale consisting of passing for two touchdowns and carrying for another. Fred's academics, considering that they competed with other areas of interest, never suffered accordingly and on more than one occasion he displayed an uncanny knowledge of European History. The Academy loses a competitor and many of us lose a friend on graduation day but separate ways will not erase Fred's mark on the Academy or ourselves.

BRUCE D. KALLSEN

FREDERICK CHARLES LENTZ JR.

PATRICK EDWARD MARTIN

Pat, popularly known as Magoo because of his striking resemblance to the famed cartoon character, came to the Academy from Schenectady, New York. He spent a year at Union College before turning his attention to the more challenging life at Annapolis. During his Academy career he participated actively in company sports, excelling both as a player and manager. His pleasant manner and wide grin, coupled with his gift of conversation, won him numerous friendships. Besides being on the Supt's list, one of Magoo's favorite pastimes was keeping tabs on world affairs. To keep abreast of the news, he eagerly read newspapers and national news magazines. Still, he always found time to help a classmate whether it be an academic, financial or girl problem. Pat's pleasing personality plus his keen interest in the Navy will continuously prove him to be an officer we can all respect.

TWENTY-EIGHTH COMPANY

FIFTH BATTALION

Steve came to us from Coral Gables after several years at the University of Miami. He seemed destined to come to Annapolis, as most of his life has been centered around the water, whether it was swimming, sailing, skiing, or just "Island Hopping" in the Bahamas. During his four years, he spread his time amongst academics, sailing, and projects worked out in the Engineering Labs. Academics usually took third place behind sailing and the projects, although one could frequently find him in his room studying for a "skinny" quiz. Electricity, which was his major at "Suntan U." never ceased to be his nemesis at Navy. Whenever there was a laugh to be had or a joke to be played, Steve was sure to be in on it and likely as not to be the leader. Steve will long be remembered by his classmates for his easygoing ideas and nature.

STEPHEN SMITH McDONALD

PATRICK JOHN MILLIGAN

PAUL LAWRENCE NELSON

Nels came from Green Bay, Wisconsin, and his love for the Packers was only matched by his love for the Navy, which he picked up in three years in the fleet before coming to USNA. Paul's extracurricular activities were numerous and varied. For three years he was a member of the crew of the Academy schooner Freedom. Paul also maintained an avid interest in the trombone as a member of the NA-10 and Concert Band, although he was sometimes chided for his fuddy-duddy taste in music. Paul's years in the fleet established him as an international playboy, and much spare time was spent corresponding with one of his many European acquaintances. Paul was admired for his ability to stick to a project. Youngster year he took it on himself to learn the Danish language which he learned almost as well as French. The "Practical Navigator" could often be found curled up on his pad with his treasured copy of Bowditch. Everyone who knew him was impressed with Paul's straightforward, conscientious manner. These qualities should give him every success when he rejoins the fleet.

"P. J." came to the Academy right after graduation from Saint Mary's Springs Academy and a year and a half in the Naval Reserve. Adapting readily to the rigors of plebe year, he managed to participate in plebe wrestling and became a coxswain for the plebe light weight crew team. Since then P. J. has successfully led the fourth batt crew team to several brigade championships. Although P. J. is a bit difficult to get up in the mornings, he is truly a whirlwind of action. Never in academic trouble, Pat always had time to offer his advice and to enter into any discussion or argument. His perennial nemesis was Y. P. drills, with weapons a close second. His self-reliant nature and timely sense of humor will assist him in his future years, and, although his first love is a green uniform, his love for the service will assure his success wherever he goes.

WALTER L. OGLE

As a third generation Naval Academy graduate and as the son of a Navy Captain "Wally" has seen a lot of this world, but calls Imperial Beach, California, his home. He joined the swimming team Plebe year and is now one of Navy's top divers. His sparring matches with the Second Class during Freshman year won him Brigade-wide fame. Looking at his stellar academic record, Walt is a sure bet to return to USNA as a "Skinny" Prof. and many a Plebe has found to his chagrin that Wally has a profound knowledge of our Navy—past and present. This knowledge coupled with his congenial personality will make him welcome wherever future roads may take him.

RONALD A. PASQUA

Ronald A. Pasqua (or Little Italy to his closer friends) came to us from the fleet as a third class electronics tech and a true destroyerman having spent two years on the Dew Line.

At Navy Ron has made his reputation as the duty electrician. In the Y.P. Squadron his foot has proved invaluable in repairing the radar repeaters on board. Ron has also distinguished himself aboard in seamanship and boat handling as evidenced by the portion of the hull of YP 663 which hangs in his room.

After graduation Ron plans to go back to his first love the destroyer, where he should prove an invaluable member of the ship's company.

WILLARD DAWSON RICHARDSON

Daws, a Coast Guard junior, came to the Naval Academy from Cambridge, Maryland. A good athlete, he was a valuable asset to company soccer, company basketball and battalion tennis. He was an outstanding member of the Brigade Activities Committee and could always be counted upon to contribute more than his share. Study hours passed by quickly as an unending stream of visitors was always coming into Daws' room. Weekends never found Daws studying, but rather, dragging one of a number of attractive members of the opposite sex. To the many that know Daws, he has been a constant source of humor and is well-liked by all. As Daws follows a career in the service of his country, he will always be remembered by his classmates and all who knew him and is certain to be a success in all he attempts.

DAVID WALTER ROBINSON

Dave came to the Academy with quite a few high school academic honors behind him and continued to excel in the classroom here at Annapolis. Not one to spend all of his time on studies, "Robby" also participated in intramural sports where he was most successful at waterpolo. His extracurricular activities included the Russian Club and debating, not to mention dragging. Dave was always ready to lend a classmate a helping hand academically and this earned him the nickname of the "human computer". He took this good-natured ribbing in stride, however, and with his easy-going nature and high intelligence he should be a credit to whatever branch of the service he enters.

FIFTH BATTALION

Saddle River sent its favorite son to the Naval Academy in the person of "Tres" Schineller. Tres came straight from Ramsey High School, where besides being president of his class, he lettered in football, track, and baseball. He quickly gained attention plebe summer, and remained in the limelight during the next three years due to his numerous escapades. Tres's hectic love life was a constant source of entertainment to his classmates. With a minimum of studying, he maintained good grades, devoting his spare time to bridge, chess, and logging hours in the wardroom. Always one willing to spring to the defense of the underdog, Tres will always be remembered for his eloquent description of his beloved New Jersey. With a heart as great as his appetite, and a winning personality, Tres will surely gain many friends throughout his life.

FREDERICK JOHN SCHINELLER III

DAVID EMMETT HEAUME SECREST

Coming from a Navy family "Secs" did considerable traveling before settling down for two years at Severn School and then on to Canoe U.

Never one to worry much about studies, the academic departments managed to give Dave a couple of close races but always lost in the end.

Dave integrates a rich sense of humor with a magnetic personality. He is always able to find the funnier side of any situation. When the pad wasn't calling too strongly he might be found running cross-country or playing squash where he contributed to two Brigade Championship teams. He also found time to work as a member of the Splinter staff and was active in the Spanish Club.

Always the last one out of the mess hall, Dave could pack away enough chow for any three mids and still remain slim and trim.

A fine golfer, he was often seen chasing a golf ball around the links. On weekends he was usually chasing a charming lassie.

With his dedication and determination the Fleet will find a willing and capable officer.

TERRY DUANE SMITH

Terry, from the Land of Sky Blue Waters, graduated from Washburn High in Minneapolis, Minnesota. He then spent a year at prep school before coming to the Academy. At USNA, Terry quickly gained recognition among his classmates by firing the top pistol score during plebe summer, and has fired for the Varsity Pistol Team ever since. T. D., with his love for the outdoors, discovered Ocean Sailing second class year. There were very few afternoons when he wasn't out sailing on the Chesapeake Bay. Terry's interests are many and varied. Attesting to this fact are his large record collection and the many souvenirs that he has acquired on his travels to South America and Europe. After he discovered Plebe Year that his eyes weren't good enough for Navy Air, Terry quickly switched his loyalties to Navy Line. With his strong professional interests and his desire to do an outstanding job, Terry will set a fine example in the fleet.

Ken, more popularly known as "Skee," fares from Cleveland, Ohio, where he grew up. Before reporting to the Academy he spent a year at the Naval Academy Prep School in Bainbridge, Maryland. "Skee" has many interests which go all the way from playing bridge to sleeping to bowling. On the athletic field Kenny is a real tiger. Full of life, he gives one hundred percent of himself and particularly enjoys "mashing" his opponents in contact sports—all in fun, of course. Always able to roll with the punches, Ken never lets anything get him down, but comes back with a cheerful "I'm ready to start the next round" attitude. "Skee's" fun-loving character has made it a pleasure to live with him for the past three years, and I know he will be welcome in the fleet.

KENNETH JOSEPH ANDRZEJEWSKI

RONALD MANN BANCROFT

WILLIAM MARTIN BIGGS

Bill came to Navy directly from high school in Paducah, Kentucky. Depending upon what time of day you were looking for him, you would find him with an eye shade and a desk lamp poring over the books late at night, and during the day the rack held intriguing mysteries which he continuously explored. His guitar has inspired many hootenannies which sometimes drove the neighbors to pounding on the walls, but for him this just filled the absence of a drum. Company cross country filled many of his afternoons at USNA, and in his spare time he tried to raise the morale of the company with new projects from the BAC. His real desire lies in submarines which was evidenced by his giving up a foreign cruise when he volunteered for a SUBLANT cruise. His determination and his hard-working nature will carry him far in achieving his goals in the fleet.

Ron, hailing from the rock bound coast of Maine, came to us right out of high school. He quickly adapted to his new home and took an active interest in Academy life. In academics he set a pace that quickly put him in the top of his class. His affinity for vigorous athletic competition made him an indispensable man on the Rugby Club Team. During the off season he could be found sparking the company basketball team on to victory or churning his way through the blue waters of the Natatorium. He could always be relied upon to help anyone with academic problems. His many friends throughout the Brigade attest to his pleasant personality, a real bon vivon. Ron has a potential that he is ever increasing through his own persistent hard work, a sure success in any field he chooses.

DONALD E. BONSPER

Don hails from the backwoods New York town of Portville which he explains is just over the hill from the mushrooming metropolis of Olean. His small town origins have held him in good stead however, as he has never found himself too big for anything or anyone. Of course the converse is true also. Whether on the athletic field, in the classroom, or in the moonlight he has seldom met his match. His athletic abilities found their outlet as a promising outfielder for the plebe baseball team, but his springtime energies soon found themselves enthusiastically devoted to helping promote rugby at U.S.N.A. Football skills and natural coordination made him a three year standout on the Academy exhibition rugby team. Although Don was rarely found with his nose in the books during the week and never on the weekend, his astronomical grades made him the mecca for help with tough skinny, steam, or math problems. He has met every problem from plebe year on with such enthusiasm that everything is fun, and his achievements are terribly discouraging to jealous competitors. Don will be a welcome addition to the lucky service he chooses.

ROBERT L. CHAMPOUX

Bob came to the Academy from Seattle, Washington, through the reserve program. To most of his acquaintances, he is known as "Champs" but to those of us who knew him best, he is "Old Baldy." It is reasonable to say that Champs probably spent more money plebe year than in the other three years combined. He became widely known for his prudent economic program that he designed to cover the expense of two rings. His industriousness and ingenuity were channeled into a Weapons Department project which involved the principle of auto-rotation as applied to the recovery of spacecraft. It is a field that previously has enjoyed little research and only limited success. While at Canoe U., Champs has become one of the top dingy sailors although he had no previous experience in this sport. His drive and genuine honesty in everything he undertakes is certain to lead Bob through a very successful career.

Leaving the 'Hoosier' state behind, Dave came to the Naval Academy with a Congressional appointment. While attending Richmond High School in the city of the same name, Dave displayed superior talent as a golfer; such ability was not to become dormant for upon graduation he journeyed to Canoe U. to become a member of the Plebe Golf team. Continuing on to the varsity ranks, Dave earned his varsity N during Youngster Year, a trend which was to continue through graduation. When not on the golf course, Dave could be found participating in touch football and cross country.

Although quiet in nature, Dave's witty quips earned him many friends and much respect from all for his unique sense of humor. Never lacking in academic ability, Dave's name could occasionally be seen gracing the Superintendent's List.

Dave's purposeful determination, unassuming, yet confident manner, and his witty sense of humor cannot help but yield success for Dave in all which the future may hold.

DAVID D. CONNIFF

FRANK L. CORAH

Frank, affectionately known to many as "moose" (in honor of his mother by the same name) is another of our class hailing from a small town. When he packed his bags to leave East Aurora, N. Y.'s loss was the Academy's and the Navy's gain. Sleeping through a good part of plebe year, after having given plebe football a whirl, "moose" soon found himself a youngster and liked it. The next three years were full of sports, humor, fun, and studies. Frank always managed to maintain a very respectable average, although at times his thoughts turned to the fairer sex. The advent of rugby at U.S.N.A. was partly due to "moose's" enthusiasm. Whether running over would-be tacklers in rugby and football, playing hard defense in fieldball or playing a hard-charging offense in the moonlight, "moose" has found winning to his liking. Frank is an outstanding graduate and is sure to continue his winning ways in the service he selects.

The son of a Navy Chief, Aus came to us from Hialeah High School by way of the Navy Reserve. As a plebe he was a crew coxswain, but upon discovering the merits of Navy chow, his interests turned to activities requiring less arduous diet control. These sports included intermural squash and handball, and he demonstrated notable proficiency in both. Outside of sports, he was a member of the French Club. He believed there was nothing to compare with a good book, and if given the choice between reading and studying, nearly always chose the former, nevertheless maintaining enviable grades. Easygoing and always glad to help his classmates who were not as well off academically, we feel sure that Aus will be a welcome addition to the Navy in any field of endeavor.

LOYD AUSTINE CROWE

ROBERT S. FRIEDRICK

The son of a Naval Academy graduate, Bob, better known as "Elf", came to the Academy from Sayville High School in Sayville, New York. While at the Academy, "Elf" has always displayed a serious and dedicated attitude toward being an outstanding Midshipman. His name consistently appeared on the Superintendent's List, and his high standing in aptitude reflects his interest in the service. His lack of size did not stop "Elf" from being an outstanding competitor in intramural football and fieldball, and when Rugby was introduced at the Academy, he also won himself a starting position on that team. Bob has always been an active member of both N.A.C.A. and O.C.U. All of us who know Bob are sure that he will win the same respect from those he will serve with as he has won from us.

WILLIAM J. FRIGGE

Bill hails from Vincennes, Indiana, where he attended Central Catholic High School and then sampled college life for a year at V.U. before coming to the Academy. "Frog", as he is known by his classmates, had his eye on the Navy for a long time prior to arrival at USNA.

Academically speaking, Bull and Bull overload head his list, while playing games with the Skinny Department occupied the rest of his time. Sports wise, Bill is an ardent Ocean Sailor in the fall and spring and a dedicated Company 150 pound football player during the winter months. Always ready for some good conversation to break the routine, he was well up on what was happening behind the scenes at USNA and within the company. A dedicated proponent of Navy Line, Bill's serious, but easygoing manner will make him a welcome addition to the Navy and his ship's wardroom.

HOWARD WAYNE GOODROE

"Goody," as his many friends affectionately call him, came to the Academy from Oneida High School where he gained the reputation of a student-athlete. Because of his wide reading interests, he never had any trouble with the social sciences or literature, and the only time he had trouble with science and engineering courses was at exam time when he discovered that he was really expected to use the books that were issued. His prowess as an athlete carried over from Plebe Track into company and battalion sports where he became the mainstay of the football and cross-country teams. Goody's reputation for dependability and a job well done came about through his willingness to take on any job that needed doing and to do it to the best of his ability. Along with his ability, his sense of humor and good-nature will make him a welcome addition to any wardroom.

MICHAEL AIREY GRIFFIN

Having come from a Navy family Mike was no stranger to the ways of Navy when he entered the academy. Departing his beloved San Francisco a short nine days after graduating from high school he soon discovered a distinct contrast between Navy and USNA ways. Undaunted, he struggled on, and after a shaky start plebe year he discovered that the key to higher grades was "a drag every weekend". Utilizing this principle he attained the Supt.'s List on and off for the rest of his stay here. After spending some time with the Russian Club and the Sailing Squadron, where he attained his Yawl Command, he devoted much of his time to nurturing better relations with our sister school in Annapolis, where he was fondly known as "Mike the Middie". He also holds a slight claim to fame for his four year support of the Bell Telephone Co. with frequent and long coast-to-coast calls. Through the varied and hectic years his time spent as a Plebe Summer squad leader stands out as the fondest of his memories. As he joins the fleet, many expectant eyes are set upon him; with a willingness to try his best, he will not disappoint them.

WILLIAM S. HART II

Bill is a blue-grass Virginian in the scenic Shenandoah, transplanted from the Blackboard Jungles of Queens, New York. Ample stories have followed him to the farm and to USNA about his gangster background, but his warm friendly smile belies his killer instincts and he fails to frighten even little children any more. Bill has skyrocketed from his standing in the middle of his class in Stuyvesant High School, to an average which generally hovers around Superintendent's List (2.7499999). His athletic abilities also hover around the varsity level, and he is feared as a powerful hitter, a sure gloveman, and an ace pass receiver and defender in intermurder softball and football. Bill is always ready to speak his mind and has won many friends and much respect through his level-headed, good-natured personality. He is a sure-fire bet to quickly make his mark in the outside world.

Denny came to the Academy from Sarasota High School. During his four years at USNA, he seemed to take everything in stride, even though he had more than his share of shortcomings academically. During plebe and youngster years he was a member of the ocean sailing squadron, but in the end his primary interest, girls, was triumphant. "Luff" was known for his good nature and he made many close friends at the Academy. He has a variety of interests and still spends much of his leave time in the outdoors, showing still another aspect of his vigorous and adventurous outlook in living a full, respectable, enjoyable and rewarding life.

DENNIS ELLIOT LOUGH

DENNIS RICHARD NEUTZE

A graduate of Baltimore's Parkville High School, Denny earned his way to the academy through the Naval Reserve. Though never an academic slush—largely due to a neverending dual with skinny and steam—Denny always displayed a marked ability in the social sciences and literature. Extremely well read and quick-witted Denny is always quick to make new friends. This ability coupled with a complete fluency of the Spanish language should make Denny one of the Navy's finest ambassadors. The son of a Navy Chief, the Navy way of life was early instilled in his blood. His life long ambition has been to become a career Naval officer. With a keen mind, a deep dedication, and a winning smile Denny will be a great asset to the Navy and always be a credit to the Brigade.

ARTHUR WILLIAM NEWLON

A Navy Junior, "Willie" chooses to call Annapolis his home town, though he spent his high school years at Norwich Free Academy in Norwich, Conn. Graduating near the top of his class, Bill was not content to rest on his academic laurels and decided on a year at Severn School before starting the good life at USNA. An avid sailor, weekends usually found him challenging the winds and currents on the Bay. Basketball and football occupied the intervening winter months where he was a definite asset to the Company Teams. Never having much trouble in surmounting the Academic obstacles, Bill could always be relied on to supply an answer to a tricky Math problem.

A sense of humor and a demonstrated capacity for hard work make Bill a valuable addition to the Navy.

Calling Salt Lake City his home, the smell of salt in the air was nothing new to the "Rammer." Arriving at USNA right after graduating from Granite High, he took to the Sailing Squadron like the proverbial duck to water. Weekends always found him, rain or shine, engaged in drag sailing. Having no fear of the Academic Departments, taps usually found Bill adhering strictly to the letter of the law.

Being gifted with a set of nimble fingers, Bill spent a good part of his free time keeping his friends well supplied with leather wallets and belts.

With a ready smile and easygoing manner, Bill should have no trouble in adjusting to the life of a junior officer and will make a fine addition to the Fleet Navy.

WILLIAM R. RAMSEY

RALPH ELLIOTT RICKARD

Rick, as he was better known by his many friends, came to the Academy soon after his graduation from Fort Lauderdale High School in the Sunshine State. Always possessing a great love for the sea and sailing, he easily found a position on both the Plebe and Varsity Dinghy Sailing teams which occupied his afternoons during the fall and spring. Rick took his studies seriously and his efforts were not without their reward for more often than not his name appeared on the Superintendent's List. During Actramid second class summer, he was instrumental in the organizing of a musical group, the Salvation Army Band, which more than delighted the Brigade each time it played. He was also an active member of the Concert Band. In his spare time Rick could be found organizing Popular Music Concerts for the entertainment of the Brigade as a member of the WRNV Popular Music Concert Committee. With his ambition and desire, Rick will certainly be a welcome addition to the Navy.

GERALD ERNEST SHELDON

"Jer" came to the Academy after a year in the fleet as an Electronics Technician. Hailing from Glen Rock, New Jersey, "Jer" firmly believed that the only real city in the world was New York City.

After a close fight with Plebe "Skinny", the "little scrapper", went on to excel in academics and, except for Plebe year, was always on the Superintendent's List. "Shels", always eager to help anyone with academic problems, was the man to see when the studies got rough.

A member of the Sailing Squadron, "Jer's" love for the sea was outdone only by his liking for a good bridge game and by his fondness for the blue trampoline.

Whether on the athletic field or in the classroom, "Jer" was always striving for improvement. His conscientious manner and friendly personality won him the respect of his classmates and should carry him far in his service career.

ROBERT LAIRD STARKEY

Bob came to us from Philadelphia, Penna. He swung easily into Academy routine, and academics were never any problem for him. He also proved to be a veritable storehouse of miscellaneous facts and was usually one of the first with the latest word.

Bob's athletic ability is attested to by the fact that he earned his first letter youngster year on the cross country team and was also the brigade triathlon champ of that year. He excelled at endurance sports such as running and swimming, but not to the exclusion of other sports. He showed great courage on the rugby field, a trait which earned him a bent nose of which he is proud.

Bob had a good sense of humor, which contributed greatly to his classmates' morale during hard times such as the "Dark Ages". He was always ready to join in any of the evening activities around Bancroft Hall, such as water fights and laundry bag battles.

Bob's will be an invaluable contribution to the Navy, and he is sure to excel at whatever he does.

Winning Kentucky's Second District Congressional appointment, Ben came to the Severn's shores straight from Franklin-Simpson High School in Franklin, Kentucky. His pleasant smile and eagerness to help his classmates have won him many friends during his four years at Navy. He was not what you would call a slash in Bull or Dago, but his prowess in the Engineering and Science departments has made him the envy of many of his classmates. His mastery of academics has left him leisure time to devote to playing the guitar or working out on the blue tramp. Always a hard worker, Ben has spent many hours working on his aeronautical engineering major and hopes to do graduate work in that field someday. An aspirant of Naval Aviation, Ben will quickly tell you that his most enjoyable days as a midshipman were spent at AIR-TRAMID. His warm personality and gentlemanly manners will make him a welcome member of any group and a success in whatever field he chooses.

ANTHONY DRAKE VINSAVICH

KENDRICK WAYNE WENTZEL

Ingenuity, a keen mind, and a love for life best describe Ken. Always willing to try anything, Ken has made these four years very rewarding. As an active member of the sailing squadron, Ken often drag sailed on the weekends. Wintertime found Ken running for his company around the windswept course on Hospital Point. His extracurricular activities include the Gun Club and the Reception Committee. Ken found little trouble with academics and made use of his extra time with literature overloads. The naval service will be certain to benefit from Ken's many attributes.

Clyde came to USNA from San Mateo, California, via the University of California where he spent one year. He gave up his hobby as a sports car buff and turned his energies to the Midshipman Sailing Squadron. He participated as a crew member his first two years and as a skipper for his last two years. In addition, he was elected as Commodore of the Sailing Squadron in his last year. He is renowned for his escapades among the young ladies and his classmates are constantly amazed at the tight spots he gets out of unscathed. The Academic Departments have "fun" with Clyde. In his constant game with them he always comes out on top although there have been many close calls. This quality to pull through when the chips are down will stand him in good stead as he pursues his career as a Naval Officer.

CLYDE LEROY BINGHAM

PAUL DOUGLAS BURGESS

MICHAEL JON EPPRECHT

Slick Mike came to USNA straight from high school in Hartford, Wisconsin. Having already been indoctrinated in the ways of wayward boys, he had more than a little trouble in adjusting to the ways of the Brigade. During his four year stay, he tried his best to transform the austere Naval Academy into a frolicking party school, and with smashing success. Always working on a new angle to make life more pleasant, Epps could always be counted on to have some new scheme up his sleeve. A prime mover among the Seven Dwarfs, he will always be remembered for his ready smile and cheerful disposition. Although a standout on the batt badminton team and a whiz kid on the company volleyball courts, his athletic prowess was best observed on the big blue trampoline. A dedicated Midshipman, and a good friend, Mike will undoubtedly be a credit to the fleet.

You never know what turn Doug's interest will take next, but, whatever it is, it is bound to be interesting. He can always be found tinkering with something, be it an automobile engine, a sextant, scuba gear, or a target pistol. An avid reader, his tastes show many facets here as well. You are as apt to find him reading a collection of romantic poetry, the latest thriller, a history of Scottish castles, or a car magazine (he possesses perhaps the best collection of car mags in the Brigade). His varied career in athletics has seen him in the natatorium sparking the swim and water polo teams, on the pistol range, on the rugby field, and lately upon the wind swept sea, as a member of the sailing team.

Doug came to the Academy via "the Big B" (Bullis Prep to the uninitiated) and calls Orange, Connecticut, his home, though he spent his tender formative years in Chicago.

JOHN KIRTLEY GLENN JR.

Having attended Georgia Military Academy near his home in Atlanta, Georgia, John adjusted very quickly to life at USNA. A practicing advocate of good fun, he often defeated nerve-racking studies with calm perseverance. However, he always managed to keep abreast of his books, and he maintained a high academic standing throughout his years at Navy. In addition, John was a real enthusiast in intramural sports, helping in wins for the company. John intends to be the first in a long line of seafaring Glenns, and judging from his success with the fair sex, he should have no problem. John aspires to have an interesting and enjoyable Navy career, and with his natural assets, he undoubtedly will.

HARRY A. HADD

Harry Alben, affectionately known as Hap, entered the Academy fresh out of Washington-Lee High School of Arlington, Virginia. Not only excelling in academics, Hap also made a name for himself as an All-East 150 lb. football player as a defensive back. He likewise was an asset to all company sports in which he participated, basketball and softball. Hap's exuberant desire to play his rock 'n' roll music long and loud on his rock 'n' roll record player, made him a prime contestant for the Harry High School award. Happy was forever smiling, with the possible exception of returning from a weekend, and his love for a good time made him a most enjoyable person with whom to associate. He is looking forward to a fulfilling career in the United States Marine Corps and with his potential we are sure he will succeed.

Bob has had an outstanding record over the past four years. He entered the Naval Academy after graduating from Whitesboro Central High School. His capacity to slash the "academic stuff" enabled him to capitalize on the opportunity to take overloads. He often spent the majority of his evenings explaining subjects to his classmates and yet he managed to consistently be on the Superintendent's List and wear stars. Bob's extracurricular activities included the Drum and Bugle Corps, the Concert Band, and membership in a band of musical misfits called the Salvation Army Band. In sports Bob competed for his company in cross country, soccer, and squash. With this outstanding background, Bob is sure to have a successful naval career.

ROBERT SHIREY GRIMM JR.

GEOFFREY JACKSON GROVES

Geoff came east to Navy from Altadena, California, or "God's Country" as he calls it. Blessed with a natural athlete's build he was a standout football captain and an excellent hurdler at John Muir High School. Played Plebe and two years of varsity football during the fall season while winter and spring found him earning points for the company in intramurals. His interest in literature and desire to keep abreast with current events keep him reading continually. Geoff is never one to go unnoticed in a group. His presence is felt by his competitive spirit, temper, and common sense in discussions. A never-ending source of amazement is his sports knowledge and his healthy appetite. Being quick to learn, very friendly and having a sense of responsibility in doing a good job will make Geoff an excellent officer. I predict he will be pestered by success the rest of his life in or out of the service.

Joe, more affectionately known as "The Khaki Tower", came to the Academy well-grounded in the life of military discipline through the Marine Corps Reserve and Bullis Prep. With this solid foundation there was never any doubt in his mind as to service selection; it was "Semper Fi" all the way. Always interested in vigorous outdoor activities, Joe parlayed his height and reach to good advantage in four years of Plebe and Varsity Crew. In the off season Joe added to his varsity accomplishments as a member of the Pistol team, not to mention active participation in the Scuba Club, Gun Club and Public Relations Club. With such a schedule it is no wonder that Joe acquired his other distinguishing trait in his four years by the Severn, a constant and undying affinity for his rack. Whether it be morning or afternoon, a free moment would find him clambering to his blue haven for the contemplation of the deeper thoughts of life.

Noted for his easy-going, affable disposition, Joe should quickly adapt himself to the increased responsibilities of a Second Lieutenant and be destined to a long and fruitful career in Marine Green.

HAROLD DALE HANSEN JR.

JOHN CARL LINDAHL

Having been born and raised in the Midwest, it was only after two years of work at Bethany College of Lindsborg that John could tear himself away and come East to receive his copy of Soldiers of the Sea. The combination of this firm educational background and his attributes of quiet determination and hard work enabled him to stand high in his class throughout his years at the Academy. His nickname "Poco" must be regarded as a misnomer, for it could not have referred to either his capabilities as a Midshipman or to his athletic prowess. He asserted himself both on the varsity tennis courts as an outstanding doubles man and as a member of the Portuguese Club. Despite his activities, he was never reluctant to devote a small portion of his time to dragging some femme fatale. Coupling his intelligent mature outlook with his subtle sense of humor, it is easy to see that John will be a valuable asset to the Naval Service.

JOHN LEE MacMICHAEL

"Skip" came to USNA after bidding a fond farewell to his fraternity brothers and the soft life at the University of California. Give up the soft life he did; very few have attacked weekend liberty with as much vigor. With a well developed talent for last minute cramming Skip managed to stay on the Supt's List consistently. Despite his abundance of overloads he found time for the Foreign Affairs Club; the Auto Committee; and his favorite pastime, a good bull session with his friends. Sports wise, Skip, an excellent swimmer, was a member of the Plebe swimming team and an avid water polo player. A try at Airborne Youngster year convinced him he was more at home in the water than on land. Skip's drive, ambition, and his wide range of knowledge coupled with a gift for expressing himself will undoubtedly serve him well in the future.

Doug attended East Stroudsburg State College for one year before entering the Academy. He breezed through plebe year, cruised through youngster year and fairly flew through "cow" year and considered validating first class year. Academics were no challenge during the year but final exams proved to be the stumbling blocks that kept him off the Supt's list. He acquired the nickname "Moonbeam" along the way due to his fanatical desire to continually play Johnny Mathis and Lettermen albums, staring longingly at the town of Annapolis, and the outside world. Metz started well at the Academy, playing second team plebe soccer but frequent injuries hampered much of his abilities to really excel. The smiling D.P., never one to be glum, brought a little joy into everyone's life and will be an outstanding contribution to the naval service.

DOUGLAS PHILIP METZGER

Mike chose to follow in the footsteps of his father and make the Navy his career. Meeps, as he was commonly known by his classmates, has known many ports of call, including Naples, his favorite. Always being able to maintain good grades without much trouble, Mike spent his spare time organizing company activities or working with the sailing squadron. To liven his weekends, he either dragged stunning brunettes from the area or kept the wardroom gang in stitches with his wit. The famous Meeps walk has amused many a Mid and bewildered more than one O.D. Still, one of old Nineteen's Seven Dwarfs had the capacity to be both serious and jovial at the proper time. A natural sense of humor coupled with a keen mind make Meeps an outstanding addition to the service.

MICHEAL EUGENE PAUL

JAMES ARTHUR ROORBACH II

After living with Dick for three years, we feel well qualified to write about this favorite son of Darlington, Wisconsin. Entering USNA directly from high school as a congressional appointee, the "Newt" had an interesting plebe year. Dick's four years at the Academy seemed to be a running battle with the academic and executive departments, but it was a battle he generally won. Dick was a consistent standout in company sports, especially football. He was admired for his wit and ability to be the butt of a joke now and then . . . remember the cruise box, Newt? His musical abilities earned him berths in the Chapel Choir and the Glee Club, but the majority of his singing was done with the Gandhi Jamboree Trio, where he also composed and accompanied on the guitar and banjo. His talents ran further than just music and sports, however, as he was admired for his fine taste in drags. One of his less conspicuous activities was as a member of old Nineteen's Seven Dwarfs. We look forward to seeing Dick again in the fleet.

RICHARD NATHAN OLDS

Jim is one of the elite group who decided to show his attachment to the Academy by holding longevity honors over most of his classmates. This time was put to good use as he lives the true Navy life, on the sea. After three years of dinghy sailing on the Severn River with other collegiates, he saw a more comfortable way to spend days and nights at sea.

While sailing has been a major part of Jim's Academy life, there has been another big factor. Jim has been caught up in the new academic surge, probably more than others. While he has tried to hide from Skinny and Steam behind his favorite computer in the Weapons Lab, such attempts kept him staying up late paying homage to these sacred institutions.

"Roors" still could manage to find time to indulge in the finer things in life. Some of us never could understand why he preferred to date a certain young secretary than sail. Regardless, after "being saved" from the life of liquids on a football trip, Jim blended the qualities of a future Naval Officer a little smoother, now producing an officer with everybody's stamp of approval.

"Champagne Dan" hailed from Baltimore but reported for duty at the Academy by way of a year's stay in enemy country at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson prep school. While academics proved challenging to Rums, he never failed to neglect the wine, women and song side of Navy life. Whether he was exercising his deep baritone voice with the Catholic Choir at Sunday mass, or dragging a cute B-more girl or throwing one of his famed term leave parties, Rums enjoyed life to the fullest. Extrovert is a mild word to use in describing a man such as D. L., who treated all his friends from Admirals to stewards equally. Possessed with a quick smile and a sincere "Hello" Rums never failed to brighten his fellow classmates' dark days. With a firm desire to succeed, a pleasing personality and an unconquerable spirit, Rums is certain to become an outstanding Naval officer.

ROBERT EVAN STEVENS

Bob realized the fulfillment of a life-long dream when he left the halls of Altoona High School to embark on a very successful and rewarding life as a midshipman. His competitive spirit and drive brought him laurels on the company basketball court, the honor of wearing stars for his academic prowess, and the privilege of being on the Superintendent's List in each of his four years at USNA. A consistent headliner in his hometown paper, Bob could always be counted on to lend a hillbilly accent singing with the Gandhi Jamboree Trio. Bob's wealth of knowledge on almost any subject was admired by all, especially the members of the fairer sex, and Bob's taste in drags left nothing to be desired. With his studious manner, sense of humor, and deep sense of dedication to the Navy, Bob is destined for a rewarding career in the service of his country.

Frank came to the Academy from Stoneham, Massachusetts. He attended Notre Dame High School in Cambridge and came to Annapolis right after graduation. Frank's arrival at the Academy found him one of the youngest members of the class, but his various encounters with the "Skinny" Department have added more than four years to his life.

Frank, an avid Yankee fan, is an ardent follower of professional sports. His knowledge of sports was constantly drawn on by the members of the fourth class to help answer their "Pro" questions.

"Young Frank" should be one of the better swimmers to graduate from the Academy, because he has had so much extra instruction in aquatics. Frank was one of the few people who combined the 200 yard swim and the 40 minute swim into one lesson—he swam 200 yards in forty minutes.

One of Frank's better traits is perseverance. He has won the respect of his classmates by applying himself most arduously to the obstacles that presented themselves. This trait should prepare Frank to meet the challenges that present themselves after graduation and he should become a fine officer.

JAMES E. TUCKER

After two years in the fleet and one at NAPS, "Old Man" Tucker came fully prepared for the exacting life as a Mid. Jim is originally from Selmer, Tenn., "only ninety miles from Memphis", where his experiences on the farm produced many a good tale, which he related in his flowing southern drawl. School work never bothered him in his pursuit of a good time. On solid ground Tuck was an outstanding and boisterous athlete but found his Waterloo as an annual member of the varsity subsquad. Uncle Tuck, as he was affectionately called by members of the freshman class, spent many an hour at the bridge table, even though studies were piling up. His ability on the guitar coupled with the flattest voice in the world, produced many a memorable song fest. Jim is quite an individual and whether flying as a Navy pilot or plowing up the back forty, his friendship will be desired and long be remembered.

"Van" came to the Academy from Bay City, Michigan, spurning an offer to wear West Point grey in the process. Switching to company lightweight football after a season on the plebe track team. Van soon became the team's foremost booster and once spent an entire evening gathering signatures on a petition to prevent the abolition of his favorite sport. His ability in broken field running served him in other areas as well; despite numerous attempts the skinny department was never able to tackle him for a re-exam. Undoubtedly the best-dressed man in the company, Van could often be found on "Robber's Row" eyeing a sport shirt or tie. However, the general consensus of the fairer sex was that his eyes held far more charm. With his quiet determination and ready wit, Van will make a welcome addition to the Naval Service.

CARY GRANT VAN HAAREN

DOUGLAS SCOTT WRIGHT

Bismark once said, "To youth I have but three words of counsel—work, work, work!" After a carefree country club existence plebe year, Doug decided to tackle academics and take this advice to heart. And from that time on, the hometown papers of Stonington, Connecticut received PIO releases every time grades came out. Although a conscientious worker and a veritable "slash", Doug still managed to find time to indulge in a favorite pastime—sleeping. This neither kept him off the Log and Splinter Staff nor from participating in such company and battalion sports as lightweight football, squash, and tennis. We are all sure Doug will have bright horizons ahead of him in the naval service.

The Cornhuskers lost one of their own when Wayne accepted his appointment after two years at the University of Nebraska. Since his entrance Wayne has achieved high standards in all endeavors. He is right at the top academically and always ready to lend a hand. In sports he was a zealous participant in a varied number of company sports. Basketball, volleyball, football, and softball are a few. Battalion football was also a magnet to him and only a freak accident prevented him from starring there as he did in all other fields. Bridge and girls ranked right along with Skinny and Steam as 4.0 subjects. A good friend and a cheery classmate, Wayne is assured a successful future just as he is assured of the friendship of all who know him.

GEORGE EUGENE WILSON

With a year's college behind him at Mississippi State, George decided to come to the Naval Academy and soon was engrossed in the activities of Plebe year. Being well-suited academically and athletically with an outstanding high school record, George found Plebe year academics fairly easy and devoted a good deal of his time to boxing, earning a varsity 'N' and taking the Brigade championship in his weight class. 'Bullet's' abilities however, were not confined to merely one sport as he made a name for himself in each one he played. When not reshaping a punching bag or lifting weights, he might be found studying steam or spreading humor in the wardroom. A great fun-lover of 'Seven Dwarfs' fame, George spent many of his weekends dragging or contemplating the next leave's festivities. His friendly smile, all around ability, and easy going Southern manner have earned him many friends. He is a man whose outstanding character will see him to success throughout his career.

SIXTH BATTALION

After a year at the University of Colorado Rand made the big step to Navy coming East from the high country of Colorado. He met little opposition from the academic demands on the shores of the Severn but fitting Rand to a sport was a chore. Being a basketballer of sorts and an ardent skier the natural thing was for him to turn to crew. In this new found challenge Rand became quite successful pulling a mean oar for the 150 pound crew team all four years. It was his association with the sport and closeness of the team, especially at the ice cream parties after weekly weigh-ins, that provided Rand with his most pleasant memories of Navy. As ardent as Rand was at sports his enthusiasm for having a good time remains unsurpassed. His roommates readily testify to Rand's ability to accomplish all his studying during the week in preparation for the coming weekend in Washington or wherever he might be found. By these things will his classmates remember him—best of luck, Rand!

RANDALL M. CASE

CRAIG WILLIAM CLARK

RONALD LOUIS CLAUSSEN

Ron arrived at the portals of Mother Bancroft after a brief tour of service in the enlisted ranks. Being one of the more fortunate individuals, Ron managed to maintain star averages without "cracking a book". Although his books remained lonely, his mind was always active. Whenever another Mid needed help, you could always find Ron ready and willing. There were many nights when over-load hand-ins were delayed and turned in late because Ron had helped a friend in need. His friends can also remember Ron's strenuous efforts to swim. Watching "Blub-blub" swim was always good for a laugh. Ron even became "Captain" of the sub-squad as a segundo. Contact sports were a favorite with Ron and company lightweight football led the list. Seeing as how Ron normally weighed 180 lbs. he spent many dreary hours trying to make weight. He always managed to make it, but he was never able to complete a season. Someone always managed to break a bone just when he was needed most. He still managed to lead the team in touchdown receptions. His even temperament and initiative will form a firm basis upon which to build his career.

After spending two years at Kilgore College in Texas, Craig decided to turn to the sea. The transition from civilian to military life came easily for the "Bear" and he quickly established himself as a credit to the Brigade. Unable at times to successfully outwit the academic departments Craig turned to the athletic fields. He played plebe and varsity football until his eligibility expired, turning then to the field events on the varsity track team. Craig's willing laugh and ready smile have gained him many lifetime friendships. If he continues his willingness to work and maintains his desire to succeed he will do well in whatever he undertakes.

ARTHUR HUGO CZERWONKY

With home ties in Arlington, Art has been a busy-body ever since. he came to Navy, after going to Sewanee Military Academy and spending another year at Columbian Prep as a reserve sailor. When not busy on the weekends dragging, he either counted money as Business Manager of the Log or slept. On winter weekends "teddy bear" could be found breaststroking, for the swimming team, at the pool. One of his most cherished possessions is his first gold "N" and sweater. His interests also include political and foreign affairs. He worked as recorder and conferee for the Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference for three years and was a member of the Foreign Relations Club, serving as secretary, and later as president. On Sunday mornings any strange sounds from the JV Choir were probably from Art's corner. Art will always be remembered for his quick and friendly smile, and for his determination to do any job well.

JOHN STAGER FOARD JR.

John came directly from high school to the school that seems to be the predestined lot of many Navy Juniors. In his first year at the Academy John played on the plebe lacrosse team, but during his last three years he dropped his interest in varsity sports to contribute to the company and battalion teams, where he was always a valuable asset. John's keen sense of humor and natural ability for making friends always made him a welcome party to any group. Being such an easygoing person, he even proved to be a pushover for the co-eds. With June Week of youngster year fast approaching, John found himself in the predicament of having four dates. But being the intelligent person, and always one to make the right decisions, John made his choice and thereafter was a pushover for only one co-ed. With his persistent enthusiastic determination and uncanny sense of doing well, John will be as much a credit to the Naval Service as he was to the Brigade during his four years by the Severn.

FRED PERRY GUSTAVSON

A native of the state of Washington, Gus has left his mark on the academy as one of '65's most well-rounded Mids. Although he never graced a varsity team, many a company sport fared better for his efforts, and his three-year battle to achieve academic stardom rarely saw his name absent from the Supe's List. An ear for fine music led Gus to many pleasant hours at the tape recorder, saving his favorites for posterity. A diversity of interests and a great desire to win mark him as an asset to the Brigade and the Navy. A cheerful and friendly outgoing personality earned him the respect of many of his fellows and netted him many lasting friendships. Possessed, also, with an inimitable spirit and an iron will, Gus should prove to be an outstanding addition to the officer ranks of the Navy.

LESLIE RICHMOND HESELTON III

A Navy Junior from San Diego, Les now hails from Fairfax, Virginia. He was treasurer of the Foreign Relations Club and also served as Chairman of the Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference Finance Committee. Weasel, as known by his fellow members of the swimming team, swam the 100 and 200 yard freestyle events and helped to break many freestyle relay records as well. During the spring he could be seen playing water polo for his battalion team, where his squad was more than successfully led to many victories by his right hook and left elbow. Having spent cruises on both a destroyer and a carrier, 'Puppy' (as affectionately known by his wife) is certain that the floating city is the only way to travel. He will always be remembered for his bad eyesight and yet unhindered ability to see the girls anyway.

SIXTH BATTALION

An air force junior from everywhere, Jerry came directly to the Naval Academy from Douglas MacArthur High School in San Antonio, Texas. Being quite versatile, Jerry's interests have varied from the Y.P. Squadron to sleeping, from Airborne Training to sleeping and last but not least sleeping while listening to Gleason, Mancini or similar good music. Although plagued with the nicknames Combat, Jumper and Marine for going airborne, his interests upon graduation lie in gracing the Officers' Club at Pensacola, Flight Surgeon willing.

JERRY THOMAS HICKMAN

TIMOTHY HOLDRIDGE HODGENS

After graduating from high school in Tuscaloosa, Alabama, Tim came north from the swamps of the South for the first time in his life. All the way north to the Naval Academy, where for the first time in his life he got two new pairs of shoes at one time. Each summer has convinced him more that thirty years is for him. Besides girls, his next love was for badminton, where he was an eagle-eyed, red-shirted warrior for his battalion team. His favorite hobby being music, he plays the tuba, the guitar, and the radio, all questionably. Affectionately dubbed, "The Ears of the Fleet" Tim hopes to always remain true to the Blue and the Gold.

FORREST AUSTIN HORTON

Having come from a small farm in Blue Hill, Maine, Forrest brought with him a dominant New England accent which we are forced to accept. Never satisfied with enough to do, he carries with him an enviable past of being an Eagle Scout, President of his class, and four years of high school cross-country, track, and basketball. If you thought you were seeing double when you met the president of the senior class at the University of Maine, you weren't, it was his brother Horace, an identical twin. Both Forrest and his brother are very much liked and are the kind of guys that are always broke yet can take that weekend trip or buy another jazz record anyway. With his subtle quips, yet quiet nature Forrest became a natural for the nickname—FLASH—attained youngster year. This was due to his plebe and varsity cross-country and track careers at the academy in which he competed all four years. After a few N*'s Forrest completed his cross-country career as team captain first class year. As our favorite harrier and classmate, we salute you always, FLASH, and wish you the best of Luck.

Humph entered the Naval Academy after a varied career at many academic institutions along the East Coast. The continual kidding he received about being a career student never bothered Tom, as he maintained a star average for the duration. Academics, though important, many times took a back seat to Tom's avid interest and participation in the intramural program. He could always be depended upon as a mainstay on both Batt. and Company teams. Every Saturday, Tom could be seen wending his way to the drag house, with Marty, his fiancée, on one arm and a bag of groceries in the other. Tom and Marty were so inseparable that it is impossible to conceive of one without the other. No matter what career path Tom chooses, the two of them are sure to have a happy and successful life.

THOMAS BLAKE HUMPHREYS

GEORGE EDWARD HURLEY JR.

George arrived at Navy from Stoneham High where he graduated as a letterman in hockey and as captain of the golf team. He quickly adapted himself to the plebe system and breezed through that year making friends among all the classes with the same easy-going manner that had earned him the title of "Class Sweetheart" the previous year at Stoneham. Since "Bootie", the origin of which has been classified, had few troubles with academics, he could usually have been found playing golf, his O.A.O. that will be replaced only by the likes of a female Sam Snead. George will always be remembered by such classic statements as "All right, fly, you've had it now . . . damn, they're fast!" It is certain that, with his personality and inherent dedication to his goals in life, George will be as fine an officer as he was a midshipman.

DENNIS NEILL McCOMB

Dennis Neill McComb is one of those born to be USNA grads. A native of Sherman Oaks, California—Denny has always loved the sea and all that goes with it. Whether it be sailing, cruising, or surfing—Denny is a natural.

His great love for baseball is well displayed in his goal to pitch for the varsity nine.

Viewing academics with disdain, "Den" has sailed a merry course, expertly avoiding the pitfalls of USNA life.

His willing way, strength of faith, and friendly hello has gained him a high position among his fellow classmates and friends. With these attributes, anything other than a successful career is hard to imagine for Denny.

SIXTH BATTALION

Bob hails from Charlotte, North Carolina, and came to U.S.N.A. straight from High School. Bob has a love for cars of all types and has quite a knowledge concerning all phases of their operation.

After a brush with the Academic Department plebe year, Bob has shown a definite academic improvement and boasts grades better than those necessary for supt's list.

Bob is a true example of the southern gentleman. He is living proof that there is such a thing as southern hospitality.

Bob's easygoing personality and ever present common sense will make him a valuable asset to whatever field he may choose. His kind of friendship is something that's not easy to find and not easy to lose.

ROBERT KIMSEY PORTER JR.

PHILLIP LANCE REED

Phil entered the Naval Academy direct from Rootstown High School in Ohio. During his four years at the Academy, Penguin, not to be bothered by academics, was very active in extracurricular activities. The Brigade Hop Committee, the Ring Dance Committee, the Lucky Bag Staff, the Sailing Squadron, and Cheerleaders were all graced by Penguin's presence and pleased with his easy ways and winning smile. While not participating in one of these activities Penguin could either be found checking his eye-lids for light leaks or playing at squash with one of his aging roommates. The games were notoriously funny in that the ball got progressively colder as the heat of the game soared. Penguin's success in squash was only surpassed by his success in blind dating. Even though he lost a game or two, the game he won was definitely his best.

BURTON MANLY SAFT

In his unending search for the finer things of life, Burt left behind two years of campus mischief far above Cayuga's waters and made the trip to Canoe U. with blue and gold stars in his eyes. His previous experience stood him in good stead with the books. Having the initials "B.S." how could he possibly do anything except major in the E.H.&G. Department. All of us soon learned that to ask him a question about one of our "reading" courses was to ask for an unending dissertation, erudite beyond comprehension but having little to do with the problem at hand. As a stalwart member of the Drum and Bugle Corps, he became quite adept at the thrice daily run from the top of the eighth wing to the Steerage where he joined the corps to play for his dinner. Burt's industry and keen perception will no doubt be his greatest assets in realizing the success of future endeavors.

ROBERT ALAN STANFIELD

Bob, known to many as "Bullet," "Bus Driver," and "Stan," came to Navy from Anaheim, California, where he gave up a carefree life of surfing and dating at Disneyland to become a Midshipman. He attended Long Beach State College for two years, where he majored in physical education, before entering the Academy. Perhaps his best qualities are his good nature and his willingness to help others whenever possible. In sports, Bob was a very active individual. During his plebe year he earned his numerals in Plebe Gymnastics. Winter found him on the company football team, and his contribution to the Battalion gym team each Spring, when he worked five events and claimed many first places, was appreciated very much. Active in company activities, Bob also found time to participate in Antiphonal Choir, Scuba Club, Gun Club, and NACA. Bob's ability to get along well with everyone, his eagerness to learn, and his loyalty to the service should insure him a successful career in the Navy.

JOHN HOWARD STEIN JR.

For John, a native of Baltimore and a veteran of Maryland weather, the transition from Baltimore Polytechnic to the Naval Academy was not a difficult one. He brought with him a love for the easy life, and promptly took up a four year dispute with the Bull Department to see if he would graduate. John swam on the Plebe swimming team, then devoted his efforts to intramural sports, where he distinguished himself as the muddiest man on the Batt. rugby team. If he weren't tinkling with his non-reg hi-fi, which caused many a race to the basement before formals, or playing games with the IBM computer, John was usually found practicing slope zero on the blue trampoline. John has high motivation toward the Naval Service, and ought to make a fine Naval Officer.

EDISON LEE WATKINS III

Who would have ever thought that this aging Southern Gentleman could fill a billet as the youthful pride of the nation, the Middie. Lee's academic prowess has left his classmates amazed: who else could go to bed at taps the night before three P-works, not having cracked a book, and come out with as many A's. There was only one stumbling block that Lee ran across—he tried to work a Navy P-work composed completely of sight solutions without referring to his nautical almanac, last seen sailing over Luce Hall. Possibly one of the greatest financial wizards since J. P. Getty, Lee, as Business Manager, should make a real profit for the Lucky Bag. Lee's pre-eminence as a chapel choir member was only surpassed by his avid participation in NACA. Lee balanced these activities by a strenuous attempt at squash, in addition to making the rounds of the ice skating rink on the inside of his ankles. Finally one must mention Lee's sinusoidal service selection: at this point, it seems certain that he will either become a cowboy or a fire chief, but no matter which he chooses, his amiable personality and dedication will be a definite asset.

DAVID WILLIAM WEBSTER

Dave, a native of Boston and a summer inhabitant of Cape Cod, graduated from Stoughton High School where he won three letters in football, basketball, and baseball. After a year at Columbian Prep, Dave came to the Naval Academy where he immediately put his athletic prowess to good stead as a member of the Plebe football team and in subsequent years as a member of the J. V. and varsity football teams. His athletic ability was in no way limited to football for Dave was a J.V. basketball player in his Youngster year and only a leg injury incurred during Spring football prevented him from playing on the baseball team. Yet Dave continued these sports for his company teams and, needless to say, was a more than worthwhile addition. Affectionately nicknamed "Alex" by his teammates after the professional football star, Dave didn't exactly break any rushing records during his three years of football, yet he became known throughout the Brigade as a hard worker and a tough competitor, and tackled everything with equal zeal. His energy on the field was surpassed only by his easy-going and friendly nature off the field. One of the most well-liked members of the class, Dave is earmarked for much success in his career upon graduation.

WILLIAM WALLACE WITHERSPOON JR.

Wally, or "Spoon", as he was known by many attended Bullis Prep for a year after graduation from Lewis & Clark High School in Spokane, Washington. From Bullis he hit the Academy shores with skis and parka in hand; only to find that there was no snow nearby and that the parka was non-reg, although neither of these facts really bothered him.

While at the Academy he was interested in the Foreign Affairs Club, French Club, Public Relations Committee and the opposite sex; sporting a little black encyclopedia instead of the usual little black book. Whichever branch he decides upon for a career will certainly be fortunate in receiving such a hard-working and loyal person.

THOMAS R. YOUNG

Undoubtedly the friendliest fellow around. Tom was Virginia's contribution to the twenty-first. Calling Richmond home he impressed all that knew him with his determination and drive in whatever he did. This better than average athlete provided the spark that made the intramural teams he played with some of the best in the brigade. Not the luckiest of his classmates, it is likely that Tom will be ever wary of a blind date. As a collector of nicknames he was unsurpassed being known by a different one to most of his many friends. Tom will be remembered especially for his ability to get along with everyone. This along with his many other attributes will make him of great value to whichever branch of the Navy he chooses.

Being an Air Force Junior and a graduate of Staunton Military Academy, Bill, sometimes known to his friends as "The Shank", was well acquainted with military life when he came to the Naval Academy. Although not a slash, he never had any trouble with academics. He is known for his ability with a guitar, which he is always willing to demonstrate at the slightest provocation. Although Bill's name appeared on various sports squad lists, Batt Rugby the most prominent, the majority of his afternoons were spent in the weight room in the Field House. In spite of a concerted effort to leave the "Extracurricular Activities" column blank, he finally joined the Scuba Club. His free time was spent trying to catch up on lost sleep or trying to avoid anything that resembled studying. His sense of humor and winning personality should prove to be valuable assets in his future career.

WILLIAM CRUICKSHANK DeFRIES

ELLIOTT KENNETH KUIIPO

MOKE DEMATTA

"Moke", as he is known to his friends, hails from Honolulu, Hawaii, where he graduated from the Kamehameha School for Boys. Coming from a military high school he had little trouble adjusting to military discipline at the Naval Academy. His previous training served him well during plebe year and saw him through the perils of four years of academics as well. Moke, a hearty sports fan, participated in numerous intramural sports and made a reputation as a fine competitor. With his likable, happy-go-lucky nature he has won the friendship of many while at the academy. His drive and enthusiasm should see him successfully through his career and the Naval Service will gain a fine leader and an ambitious learner when Moke receives his commission.

PETER JAMES DOLAN

Pete came to the Academy directly from High School and he counts the metropolis of Kutztown, Pa., as his hometown. Although a star man, Pete devotes most of his time to bridge, cars, the rack, and roller skating on cement dance floors next to the reflexion pool. After graduation, Pete hopes to attend post graduate school to study aero-dynamics. His humorous satirical comments attest to the fact that he never forgot the lighter side of life.

WAYNE CARLTON DURHAM

Wayne could be found most any afternoon swinging on "his" highbar over in the gym. However, the work paid off and he was elected Captain of the 1965 Gym Team. Wayne jumped into academy academics with both feet as a plebe, and you would have to go some to find a Supt's list he wasn't on. The only trouble was that he was hard to find anytime he had liberty. Wayne has decided he wants to be "paid faster" than the rest of us, so he picked Navy Air as his occupation. Being from Florida, he'll be right at home bouncing those planes off the landscape. Wayne is fortunate in that he has the ability to tackle any situation and come out on top. There is no doubt that Wayne's many talents will make him an asset to his country and Navy.

Dana entered the Naval Academy upon graduation from Walter Johnson High School in Bethesda. His father being a retired Navy Captain, "the Griff" knew what to expect from the service and what it would expect of him. A hard worker, he could usually be found with his nose in a book right up until lights out. His attentions weren't wasted, either, for he was a frequent enjoyer of superintendent's list privileges. His sincerity, good humor, and willingness to help will always be remembered by his classmates. Snow, sleet, nor hail kept him from the rugby field (except when he had something better to do), while wrestling, Foreign Relations Club, and a tremendous letter-writing activity occupied the rest of his spare time. A wish for success to a fine friend and classmate follows Dana into the service—and here's hoping that the green tinge he acquired during Youngster Cruise will fade before the Destroyers claim him once again.

DANA THOMAS GRIFFEN

JAMES SIDNEY JENKINS

The great state of North Carolina sent "Jenks" to Navy after an enjoyable year of study at East Carolina College. Jim immediately found the Navy life to his liking and entered all his tasks at the Naval Academy with boundless enthusiasm. His great determination to succeed marks him as a man who will not allow obstacles to stand in his path. Jim's greatest asset is undoubtedly his clever wit which could always be counted upon to find some humor in even the most distressing of situations. Jim was extremely popular with all his classmates as is attested to by the large number of them who had heard of or been associated with the "Jenks". When he wasn't busy studying Jim found time to represent the company on the football field and in the Lucky Bag staff. His fierce pride in his home state is adequately balanced with an overflowing desire to help others—two admirable qualities.

The "Jonce" arrived at USNA via NAPS and San Jose Junior College. An avid sports fan, he spends many hours extolling the virtues of Willie Mays and the San Francisco Giants. A direct representative of the California Chamber of Commerce, Jonce spends the remainder of his time selling the state of California. When not in the pad or bagging it he can be found following the fair sex. The Academic Departments pose no big problem and most of his free time is spent in free roaming bull sessions. An avid aviation fan, the "Jonce" seeks after wings of gold.

DONALD WILEY JOHNSON

SPIROS STEVEN KARALEKAS

Next to the reveille bell, Spike's voice is the most familiar sound in the yard. For four years he has been one of the most active men in the class, participating in everything from cheerleading and drumming to class policy making and organization. As head cheerleader Spike planned, organized, and directed the spirit of the Brigade to unparalleled success.

Speaking both Greek and French fluently, he has been called upon frequently to act as interpreter for foreign officials visiting Annapolis. Born in Boston, Spike has a natural political orientation. He is a member of the Supt's. List, a Social Studies Major, and a man of indefatigable energy.

Always giving his all for the class, Spike could be counted upon to get the job done. With an eye on the U.S. Senate, Spike plans to retire to politics upon completion of his Naval career.

RICHARD WILLIAM KROM

Hailing from a junction in Indiana called Roann, Dick graduated from high school second out of a class of eight. He found academics here at Navy to be little or no challenge and found himself wearing stars for three years. After plebe year, he discovered that the call of the pad would be the greatest challenge he was to encounter. A capable athlete, Dick was number one miler on the batt. track team for three years straight. During the winter he could be found watching the company heavy-weight football games from the sideline. Fondly referred to as "The Sloth", his favorite pastimes included eating, sleeping, and writing to girls. Dick's keen mind will give Nuclear Navy a fine and capable officer.

Before turning to the banks of the Severn, Bill spent a year at the University of Toledo in the ranks of the Pershing Rifles. His validation of several subjects enabled him to devote more time toward obtaining a major in chemistry. On Wednesday afternoons of Youngster year Bill could be found busy at work in the organic chem lab while the remainder of the Brigade marched in the weekly p-rade.

When not reclined in the horizontal position, he engaged in battalion rugby, a sport in which he became quite proficient. He will also be remembered for his relentless efforts on the batt wrestling and the company cross-country teams.

Bill's future holds in store a career in the Navy upon graduation.

WILLIAM JAMES LAZARUS

FRANK LEWIS MIXNER

Destined to become a navy man, Frank enlisted in the Naval Reserves during his senior year at Middle Township High School. After a year at Columbian Prep, he came to the Naval Academy to pursue a career as an officer. Truly a devoted and persevering worker, Frank was able to put his name on the Supt.'s List during his second class year, when he was able to trade his Foreign Language course for such "Navy" courses as Weapons, Navigation, and Leadership. On the athletic field he was always an outstanding and very aggressive competitor. He especially excelled in soccer and lightweight football. His congenial personality has made it easy for him to be constantly surrounded by friends. The town of Stone Harbor, New Jersey, can well be proud of Frank, their "true son of the briny deep"; and the Naval Service will surely be gaining a fine officer when at last he tosses his cap "to those we leave behind".

EDWARD GEORGE MONINGER JR.

A dyed in the wool Yankee, Ed hails from Short Hills, New Jersey, a suburb of the only city, New York. A member of both varsity baseball and the state championship golf team in high school, he took active part in student government and dramatics. Psychological testing conclusively indicated that he should attend neither an engineering school nor a military academy, so naturally he turned down a scholarship at Brown Univ. in favor of USNA. Brown's loss being Navy's gain, Ed decided that Navy Line offered the best career. At the Academy Ed's interest in history led him to a major in that department by the end of Second Class year. A foreign cruise with the French Navy further broadened his perspective. A keen competitor in company soccer, football and baseball, Ed could always be found encouraging any and all Brigade activities. Undaunted by occasional reverses in his running battle with the Skinny department he exploited the reservoirs of femininity of D.C. to brighten his weekend socializing. His unswerving loyalty and high ideals will make Ed Moninger a valuable member of the Naval service.

ROBERT JAMES NORMAN JR.

Being from a Navy family, Bob had traveled quite a bit before coming to USNA. He is especially pleased with his present home in the Panama Canal Zone and has never missed an opportunity to return there over leave. Bob's interests include company cross-country, rifle shooting, and being a "fearless" member of the Y.P. Squadron. He has adapted well to Academy life, and has learned how to take full advantage of the little spare time available (in the pad). He never misses a chance to have a good time, but his conscientious and dedicated attitude toward the Navy will pave his way for a career as a successful officer.

Hailing from Duluth, Dick made his first journey to the East when he came to USNA in '61, after completing a year at the University of Minnesota at Duluth. The year of college made Plebe year academics a snap, and he continued to excel during the following years, as evidenced by his continuous appearance on the Superintendent's List. Any afternoon in the fall and spring, Dick could be found out on the Severn rowing with the varsity lightweight crew team; numerous canoe trips of years past in the North Woods may have contributed to his ability as an oarsman. During the winter months he spent his afternoons in the squash courts. After graduating from the Academy, Dick hopes to draw his flight suit and parachute in Pensacola and embark upon a career in Naval Aviation. The winning personality and professional competence which he showed here will undoubtedly carry him far in his chosen profession, and the best wishes of his classmates will follow him wherever he goes.

RICHARD LINNELL PIERSON

FRANCIS DAVID SCHLESINGER

Dave comes from a Marine Corps family and has lived in many places throughout the United States. He won a Presidential Appointment which indicates his ability to cope with academics. He is a conscientious student and can always be counted on to go out of his way to help others. His ability as a student is verified by the stars he wears on his collar. Dave's love of sports and golf in particular takes much of his free time. He was one of the gay members of the Brigade Championship Cross Country Team. He always has a cheerful word and a bright smile which tempered with a great personality makes him an enjoyable person to be around. Dave's likable disposition, strong determination, and keen mind will assure him of success in any field he chooses to enter.

MICHAEL ROBERT SCOTT

Trading Wilmette, Ill., and the presidency of New Trier's class of '61, for a laundry number and a size too small dixie cup, Mike's first accomplishment was talking his plebe summer roommate, Roger Staubach, into trying out for the football team. From there he moved on to greater things. As a plebe he took up running and, at one point in his career, paced a company team to the Brigade Championship. Study hours and weekends always found Mike hard at work preserving his "Rugged and Easygoing," image. Preferring his banjo to his slide rule; operation of "Scott's Combined Travel Agency, Counseling Service, and Current Affairs Seminar" to studying; and eating, sleeping, or dragging (in that order) to anything else, he has most of the world under control and is working on big plans to acquire the rest of it in the near future . . . if he can remember where he left his shoes. Always thinking big (why not spend Christmas in Europe or next weekend in Denver?), Mike will get what he wants from the future, and is going to leave his mark on the world in the process.

ALAN EDWARD SIEBE

Al was a native of Cincinnati, Ohio, before coming to Navy. Appointed directly from high school where he stood at the top of his class, he has continued in the same tradition at the Academy. He has been a permanent member of the Superintendent's List and earned stars all four years. Al is an enthusiastic gymnast and represents Navy on the parallel bars. However, in between work outs, he still manages to find time for his favorite sport—dragging. Liberty hours never found Al in his room. He likes to play golf during the little spare time he has, and he led his company in pistol competition second-class year. His ability to accept responsibility and carry out orders in a quiet, sincere and effective manner will make him a great asset to the Fleet and a loss to the Academy.

ROGER JOSEPH SMITH

Roger came to the Naval Academy after a year at La Salle College in Philadelphia. With a headstart on Plebe year academics he found time for company sports and, to his dismay, the rigors of Plebe year. But with Plebe year gone, Roger found companionship with the magic machines; the computer center in Ward Hall, his home away from home. Time was reckoned relative to those weekends with his one and only of which he never missed one. Roger could often be found pondering over the daily racing results. His love for the sport of kings gave way only to that weekend visitor. His competitiveness on the athletic field and in the classrooms showed a willingness to strive for his goal of leadership in all his endeavors. His sense of humor, especially keen during the early waking hours, kept both him and his classmates laughing through many a long and dreary study hour. From experience Roger has learned that success is spelled with four letters: W-O-R-K.

Coming aboard from an all-Navy family, "Ski" followed in the footsteps of his father, a retired CPO, and his brother a graduate with the class of '61. Arriving at the Academy from Trenton, New Jersey, with intermediate stops at Great Lakes and NAPS at Bainbridge, Md., Don has continued his outstanding performance in whatever areas he has chosen to compete. Moving from the President of his student council and all around leader in high school, to boot camp at Great Lakes where he was honor man of his class, through NAPS to his present standing as a star man and striper, Don has the requisite qualities and capabilities of a true leader. Athletically, Ski is a fiery competitor, always giving more than his best for plebe and J.V. soccer and plebe baseball on the varsity level, and pacing the fieldball and softball teams on the intramural level. While at the Academy, Don's drive and ambition have earned him the respect of all who knew him, and while away (usually on one of his trips to Trenton) his partying prowess was well appreciated by his classmates and the many young lovelies he escorted. Ski's all out desire and untiring efforts coupled with his excellent professional background will be a real asset to this nation's Navy.

WALLACE RALPH UTLEY

The son of a Naval Academy graduate, Wally enjoyed the life of a Navy junior so much that he decided to enter the Academy.

He spends much of his time studying in his field of interest, nuclear engineering. When not studying he can be found sleeping or participating in battalion rugby, one of his favorite sports. He became a key figure on the rugby playing field during his second class year. Wally was also a colorful competitor on the batt basketball and company cross-country and volleyball teams.

Following graduation Wally is looking to pursuing a career as a Navy line officer.

GORDON ROLLINS WHITE JR.

Gordy hails from Baltimore, Maryland, where he attended the McDonogh School. After spending an additional year at Bullis Prep, Gordy entered the Academy with the thought of varsity sports taking up a good bit of his time, but unfortunately he had to forego his desires on the athletic field and concentrate on work in the classroom. However, Gordy got off on the right foot Plebe year by playing on the Brigade championship softball team. This keen desire for success was heralded by the winning of the coveted "Navy N"—a black one in this case. An easygoing fellow who seemed to have the worst time holding on to females, Gordy or "Skip" as he is otherwise known has taken fair advantage of Maryland's many race tracks and established himself as an ardent follower of the "nags". Endowed with a keen personality and ability to make friends quickly, "Skip" should have no trouble achieving his lifetime goal—that of being a successful individual.

From the beginning of plebe year, "Foobs" was noted for his mental prowess, as attested by the stars that decorated his uniform. However, he still found time to participate in the Chapel Choir, NAFAC, and somewhat overzealously in intramural sports. "Foobs" came to the academy from Harrisburg, Pa., after a year at Elizabeth College and a year of construction work. Although, he didn't need to try hard to get by, he always put in that little bit of extra effort that made him stand out. Because of his zeal, or in spite of it, and his easy-going, even nature he was well-liked and will always be remembered for his strongest profanity—"Cotton pick"! He aspires to a career in the air and will be a credit to whichever service he chooses.

CHARLES GARY BLAIZE

ROBERT FREDERIC COOK

When Cookie left Colorado Springs to come to the Naval Academy, he brought with him an amazing ability to find the easiest way of doing things. An overzealous interest in sports participation led to indecision on his part. Consequently, he resigned himself to being an active member of the radiator squad. Cookie's witty and somewhat sarcastic humor always lent itself to a most inspiring conversation. Plebe year presented certain barriers to the fulfillment of his more predominate love—parties. However, by youngster year, Cookie's motto became: "I'll find a party or make one!" Cultivating the gentlemanly art of bagging it, he stepped into his own trap and was captured by a "Moose." To be certain, Navy Air will have to conform to the casual way, which is undoubtedly Cookie's way.

Over the four years and especially during second class summer Gary proved to us that his home, the gulf coast of Mississippi, is one of the most fun-filled places around. Some of us will long remember those station wagon trips from Pensacola to Bay St. Louis. Gary brought his athletic ability with him and was quite an asset to his company in soccer and lightweight football. Although he had a couple bouts with the Academic Department he always managed to come out on top. Gary has an exceptional ability to make friends. Anyone who knows him will attest to the fact that he is one of the most agreeable and easy-to-get-along-with guys to come out of the class of '65. He should do very well in whichever service he chooses.

THOMAS ROBERT GATLIFFE

After two years at Rockhurst College in Kansas City, Tom decided to become a sailor. "Gat", earning stars youngster year and every year thereafter, found academics at the Naval Academy to be no problem. He is one of the top men in his class. Second only to his talent in Academics is his ability as an ocean sailor. His love of the sea is evidenced by his avid interest in sailing. In between the fall and spring sailing seasons Tom was one of the more stalwart members of the company heavyweight football squad. In his spare time Tom reads on a wide range of subjects. Tom's interests and career at the Naval Academy show that he will be an outstanding Naval Officer.

FRANCIS LINUS GUNTHER

The Iowa State NROTC unit's loss was USNA's gain as Bill entered the Academy replete with quick wit and enthusiasm that marks so many of his dealings. Plebe year was unable to suppress his ability as a radio announcer, brought from Iowa and later developed fully at the Academy. Mastering this, Bill turned to a variety of sports, concentrating particularly on Battalion Rugby. When not at these endeavors, he could be found assimilating enormous quantities of information on every imaginable subject or discussing any of many topics wherever his experiences, quick mind and strong opinions were appreciated.

Bill fought a tireless battle against the executive department second class year, managing to hang on until the year's end and his slate could be wiped clean. Profiting from his experience, Bill's exuberance has been tempered by this ordeal and he has added caution to his many other assets. A master of character parts, Bill has had us convulsed with laughter innumerable times with his seasoned, humorous anecdotes. Wherever he roams, Bill's razor sharp mind, enthusiasm, and ability to "get the job done with the speed of summer lightning" will be of great value.

Skip, as he was known by his classmates, came to the Naval Academy from the land of sunshine, girls, and beaches—Southern California. Born and raised in Riverside, California, he welcomed the opportunity to become a man in blue and see the rest of the world. Perhaps most of us will remember him for the hot lead trumpet that he played in the NA-10, as well as his contributions to the group known as the "Salvation Army Band" which played for outside morning meal formations every Spring. Always interested in intramural sports, Skip could be found playing football or soccer in the Fall and Winter sets, but as soon as Spring came he confessed to be a dedicated member of the radiator squad. His cheerful personality and willingness to do a job well won him many friends on the Severn and will take him far in the Navy.

WILLIAM JOHN HANCOCK

LLOYD HARRISON JR.

Bringing a passion for literature with him from Union College, Sonny launched into a series of alternate and overload courses here that would impress even the most adamant of Naval Academy critics. A quiet, yet forceful person, Sonny added quite a bit to the company whether it was knowledge of the classics, loopholes in the Reg book, or a series of metaphors that would make your hair stand on end. Sonny made a formidable opponent in the almost nightly discussions, arguments and debates. Clinging tenaciously to his individualism, Sonny would take an opposing stand on any issue and usually convince his audience of its merit. An avid sportsman, Sonny was devoted to varsity soccer until his eligibility expired. Not one to let this stand in his way, he channeled his talented footwork to the operation of the pedals in a modified Jaguar. The stutter of the typewriter with Sonny at the helm, exhorting it to spell correctly and type faster will echo in my mind for years to come. Whether it was a letter, a term paper (one of many) or a request to the Admin. office, it always came during the late hours of evening. Sonny's individualistic approach and perseverance will carry him a long way up the ladder of success.

A native of Erie, Pennsylvania, Terry brought three years of fleet experience and some fairly liberal ideas from Penn State and the University of Idaho. His free-wheeling vocabulary and graphic gestures marked him as an asset in any of the frequent discussions. Academics have never seemed to be a problem for Terry and as a result much of his time has been spent sifting through novels and professional literature. Terry's taste in sports varied considerably throughout his four years from intramurals to the varsity level. The Hammer throw however, proved to be the most challenging. Away from USNA Terry enjoys skin diving and water skiing. Terry's enthusiasm and outgoing personality have brightened many a dismal day at Navy and have made him an invaluable friend. His spontaneous wit and vivid imagination only add to his ability to entrance a group by telling a story or expressing an idea in his own unique manner. These traits will give Terry a valuable insight throughout his career.

JAN MICHAEL JOBANEK

Coming to us directly from Alexandria, Va., where his parents now make their home, Mike's heart lies in the Great Northwest. Dexter, Oregon is the family's real home and Mike considers it God's Country. Mike is a true "World Traveler," having seen much of the world on his own since he has been at the Academy, but he always speaks most about the timber country of Oregon.

Because of his physical resemblance to a bear and due to his habit of hibernating during the winter months, Mike acquired the nickname of Smokey early youngster year. Though he is known to sleep at some of the oddest times, especially lectures and during study hour, Smokey does put in quite a bit of time on the books. He strives constantly for better grades and a higher Q.P.R. On weekends when most mids are dragging or partying, Smokey can always be found where the fishing is good. On his many travels he always makes it a point to have his fishing gear and swimming suit along. If no rod and reel is handy he will don his scuba gear and spear the fish. Mike's athletic endeavors have been mainly in batt and company sports. The heavyweight football team has seen his power on the line and batt track could not do without his strong arm to throw the shot.

Most people call him "Smokey," some "Jobs," some Mike, but all like and admire him. He can always come up with a logical if humorous solution to any problem and always has a smile and a good word for everyone.

WILLIAM DALE KLOPFER

Dale came to the Naval Academy by way of Seton Hall Prep and Stevens Institute of Technology, both of which are near his home in Denville, N. J. During his two years of civilian college life, he joined the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity and took an active interest in various campus activities. He has likewise participated in extracurricular activities here at USNA, as much as his heavy academic load would allow. He served as a member of the Ring and Crest Committee and in the Catholic Choir. Having had previous experience in lacrosse, Dale played on the plebe and battalion teams. He also played on the plebe and company squash teams. Outside of Academy life, Dale has a keen interest in flying and has obtained his civilian license. His scholastic abilities, interest, and dedication will undoubtedly serve him well during his Naval career.

After High School in Morristown, New Jersey, Ed went to Bullis for a year, before hitting the shores of U.S.N.A. He was always interested in sports around the Academy, especially in squash. Making sure that the "Freshmen" were in good physical condition also took up its part in his physical program.

Ed has breezed through academics for the past several years after squeezing by the Academic Department plebe year. Whichever branch of the service Ed decides upon after graduation will surely receive an outstanding person. His jovial nature, warm friendship and willingness to help out in any way possible will stand him in good stead for the years ahead.

EDWARD BERNARD McCAFFREY JR.

Mac came to old US-NA straight from the mess decks of the nuclear-powered submarine, Skipjack. He played Plebe soccer and later aptly supported our company soccer teams. "Mild Mannered Mac" was also a standout in company lightweight football, always to be found in the heart of the action on the field. Most of all Mac was noted for his dexterity with the six-sided pencil. This unorthodox method of his successfully pulled him through a wide assortment of multiple choice quizzes and finals. Also among Mac's noted abilities was his excellence at the card table. Never let it be said that he failed to bid a hand to its utmost. He believed in setting his goals high. Mac's outstanding personality and quick wit form a combination that will win him friends wherever he goes.

Jim's family has every right to be proud. He came to the Naval Academy with every intention of doing his best. Four years of frustration and hard work haven't been able to destroy this motivation. After the plebe football season, he went on to win three letters in varsity 150# ball. Each spring Jim can be found playing tennis with his one-and-only, who is, incidentally, his CIC officer during general quarters on the knockabouts, or tripping down the lacrosse field. His scholastic and extracurricular records prove him to be an active, contributing member of Brigade. He has left his mark. He has been an inspiring influence to all his associates. He will be an exceptional career officer and a credit to the Naval Academy.

STEPHEN VICTOR MLADINEO

Being a Navy Junior, Steve had no problem adjusting to Naval Academy life after coming to the Academy directly from Bothell High School of Bothell, Washington. Once here, he found academics no great problem, frequently being on the Superintendent's List while participating heavily in the overload and majors program. In addition to the time spent studying, Steve could often be found playing many kinds of sports including a number of intramural sports, notably basketball and volleyball. To fill the rest of his time, he managed to fit in a great deal of sleeping, dragging, and cribbage playing. He could always be counted upon to rustle up some sort of chow as any fourth classmen will corroborate. With his care-free attitude and happy outlook on life, Steve should go far in his chosen career.

"Mones", coming to the Academy directly from Jordan High School in Long Beach, California, where he had an outstanding academic as well as athletic record, met with as much success in his undertakings on the banks of the Severn as he did back on the Coast. Although a consistent member of the Superintendent's List, Wayne finds much time to devote to his bridge game. Bubbling over with personality and humor, he can generally be found during study hours spreading cheer throughout the company area. Having recently become a guitar enthusiast, he is just now realizing his musical capabilities. Wayne has a combination of quick humor, intelligence and personal pride which make him accepted wherever he goes and which will enable him to become a fine Naval Officer.

WAYNE JOHN MONI

MARK MICHAEL MUHSAM

MARK ALAN REIN

Ever since arriving here from Poly Prep Country Day school, Mark has been fighting a losing battle with the blue pad monster. Most every weekday afternoon he can be found held prisoner by this villain. This losing battle doesn't carry over to the hardwoods where Mark has been a varsity basketball stand-out for Three years. His other attributes include his sharp wit and funny stories about his escapades with basketball and his favorite sport, girls. Mark's success with the latter has earned the nicknames of "the Colonel" and "D. J. Juan". As far as academics go Mark found out plebe year that he and they don't get along so being the amiable sort he has stayed away from the books as much as possible. Upon graduation Mark's easy-going manner and light spirits as well as his gargantuan appetite will be missed around here.

"M3" or "Mush", as he is known to his friends, came to USNA after graduating from Walnut Hills High School in Cincinnati, Ohio. He found the Academy's Plebe year bearable due to his violin playing and "entertaining" songs. Glee Club, Chapel Choir and Musical Club Show have served to satisfy Mark's musical inclinations. Academy sports include ocean sailing, company squash and that favorite character-building sport, fieldball. Summer cruises aboard the square-rigger "Eagle" and the U.S.S. Enterprise held many rewarding moments for Mark, especially on the streets of picturesque Brussels. Always a social fellow, his adventures in Norfolk after the '63 V.M.I. game shine like a silver chalice. His enthusiasm and determination to succeed should lead to a successful career after graduation.

DEAN J. RICHMAN

Hailing from northern New York, Dean naturally brought with him his avid interest in hunting and guns. Despite the rigors of military life, he pursued his hobby at the academy by becoming vice-president of the gun club and could usually be found on Saturday afternoons across the river shooting skeet. When not writing that special girl back home and keeping ahead of the skinny and steam departments, Dean found time to make considerable contributions to his company and batt. sports programs. His high school gymnastics experience was a welcome addition to the intramural championship team and naturally qualified him as an expert on the "blue trampoline". Dean also was an active member of both the Naval Academy Christian Association and the Officer's Christian Union. Always ready to lend a helping hand, Dean's friendly and empathetic attitude won him a host of friends. If Dean's hopes are fulfilled, the Marine Corps will be gaining a fine and determined officer when he dons the "Marine Green".

RICHARD CHARLES RUBEN

Born and bred in Augusta, Georgia, Skip made his first journey north to join the ranks of the men in blue. Since his entrance into the Academy Skip has successfully outwitted the Executive Department and held his own academically despite a brief encounter with the Steam Department Plebe year.

Shields especially enjoyed the afternoon athletic periods being an avid competitor in Company Cross Country, out of season Rugby or steaming down the Severn with the YP Squadron.

Extracurricular activities took up much of Skip's free time. Every Sunday he lent his voice to the Catholic Choir and attended the Neuman Club meeting.

Being a firm advocate of the theory that an adequate amount of sleep is a vital necessity for one to put forth his best efforts, Skip has been known to devote an extra minute or two to the pad each day.

Skip's fine sense of humor and good natured personality that have made him very popular with his classmates will serve him well in the Fleet.

After Poultney H.S. Dick carried his philosophy of hard work and inquisitiveness on to academy life where he has excelled in all aspects of academic, athletic and professional life. When not dragging his O.A.O. he can be found hanging from the rings in the gym or in the pad with the latest addition to his library.

The "Whistler", as he is affectionately called by his friends, can be heard solving the ills of the world or expounding the virtues of his favorite habitat, the mountains and streams of Vermont where he has been known not to shave for three weeks running and not come in-doors but to sleep and then only occasionally.

Although not a high "greaser", Dick has excelled in all his practical training and cruises and has gained recognition from his associates as an outstanding future officer. He is certain to succeed in all his endeavors no matter what the future brings in the way of a military vocation.

WILLIAM PIERCE SHEALY

ROBERT JAMES SNELLING III

Bob, who hails from a western Pennsylvania town named New Castle has not had much trouble getting through the academy academically and his grades have improved to the point that he is near the Supt's list every time. He has had struggles with the big blue monster called the pad very frequently however, but he always seems to lose those struggles.

He has lots of musical talent and has displayed it in the chapel choir, the Glee Club, the N.A. 10, the Naval Academy dance band and in the productions of the Musical Clubs show. Bob while on cruise and at Bancroft Hall has been a jazz fan extraordinary. He has been seen in many jazz spots from New York to New Orleans to Tokyo with numerous escorts.

Bob has made the last four years enjoyable for everyone here with his winning smile and his musical talents. Whatever field he chooses he is sure to be a success.

Phil Tower, affectionately known as "FORTRAN" by his compatriots of the old 22nd Company, blew in from St. Joseph, Michigan, one hot humid day in June of '61. Fortunate enough to be in the Color Company plebe year, Phil found the academics comparatively easy sledding compared to the onslaught of the upperclasses. Undaunted, he weathered the storm, and pressed on to Youngster Year with his 3.7 average. Never one to be held in by the requirements of a single major, Phil took multitudinous overloads in all departments, though it may be said that his true academic love was that of "Show and Tell," in the computer courses. Consistently standing in the top 5% of his class, whether or not he studied, Phil proved the truth of the Reef Point which states, "Allah does not detract from the allotted hours of man those hours spent in the pad." Although strange incantations blended with exotic fragrances rose from his Buddha, he was an energetic participant in sports, and his leanings were toward soccer, fieldball, cross-country, and badminton in the intramural program, while he heavily favored sailing, kite flying, bowling and a fair game of tennis (which he lost consistently to his roommate) in the realm of individual endeavor. The stock of Academy Vellum Inc. has undoubtedly risen over the four years, as Phil has singlehandedly endeavored to eradicate the national debt through volume of stamps purchased and letters sent back to Michigan. Though a frequent inhabitant of the 'brary, Phil's sharp wit and hearty laugh have made him many friends at the Academy in the course of our stay in historic Annapolis. His willingness to help others coupled with his burning drive to excel will make him a fine officer.

PHILIP WILLIAM TOWER

JAMES EDWARD WESTON

Jim came to Crabtown from the banks of the Rocky River. In high school he was a member of National Honor Society, and an All-league football and basketball player.

Here at the Academy "Jimbo" played two years of varsity football before he retired for good to the blue trampoline. Academics posed no threat, as he found time during his first and second class years to overload. In his spare time Jim could be found in the work-out room, or out on the rocks, "catching a few rays."

Jim developed his musical capabilities during his spare moments. This enabled him to be a member of the chapel choir and he would often be found playing his guitar and leading his classmates in singing at the songfests.

Jim is looking forward to a fine career in the Navy, and we have no doubts of his capabilities to become an outstanding Naval Officer.

WILLIAM FREDERICK WILLIAMS JR.

Upon graduation from Edgewood High School in Edgewood, Maryland, Bill came directly to the Naval Academy. His happy-go-lucky attitude immediately stood him in good stead with the upperclass, and plebe year was not too unbearable for him. He excelled academically his entire time as a midshipman and stars and Superintendent's List were a matter of course, even while participating heavily in the overload and majors program. His interests, however, were not confined to academics. He became Editor-in-Chief of the 1965 Lucky Bag and was a member of the Varsity Debate Team. Bill was always an asset to any intramural athletic team. Even with all these time consuming pursuits, there was seldom a weekend on which Bill was not dragging. Whatever branch of the Navy Bill chooses, he will be sure to perform outstandingly.

After coming to the Academy from Fenwick High School in Oak Park, Illinois, Tom quickly established himself as one of the leaders of the class. He excelled in academics, earning a history major, rarely missing the Supt's List, and was an active participant in company sports. In high school one of Tom's many interests was the theater, and he continued to use his abilities at the Academy giving remarkable performances as a leading actor and, in his last year, directing the Masqueraders company. Tom was Chairman of our Ring Dance and shouldered the responsibility with his characteristic enthusiasm and drive. But to list Tom's achievements is still to leave much unsaid about his character. He is popular and successful not merely because of what he has done but because his work has been characterized by his likeable personality, sense of humor, and sincerity. He is industrious, responsible, and determined, but with a ready and infectious smile. There's a certain gleam in his eyes, and quality about him, that mark him for success.

THOMAS ALLAN DAMES

EARL WILLIAM FERGUSON

HARRY PONTER FULTON JR.

Fergy's entrance into the Naval Academy after his brother had started at that school on the Hudson caused for a truly non-partial family in the Army-Navy rivalry. His calling to the sea can be traced back to many years of pleasure on the waters in and around his home state, Delaware. Weekends at Navy were meant for one thing in Ferg's eyes, dragging. His musical ability with the guitar and banjo have greatly enhanced his success with the fairer sex. Contesting with the academic departments has been a minor irritation to Ferg's way of life, but he has never let them get too far ahead. His primary interests lie in literature and the French language. In the athletic field, Ferg is one of those varsity soccer studs who can use his feet better than most people can use their hands. As is his nature, he takes earning Navy's highest athletic honor, the "N*", in stride and never mentions it. Ferg's easygoing personality and quick smile have made him a popular member of our class and should help him go far in the future.

A native of Northfield, New Jersey, "Weenie" arrived at the academy with many favorite hobbies, the most outstanding being the ability to sleep anywhere and anytime, which he has pursued while at U.S.N.A. Since academics were never any problem, he has found time to take up a new hobby, that of chasing the fairer sex. While at Navy, he has been a standout athlete, playing softball, volleyball, and company heavy-weight football. Weenie's tall, skinny frame has in no way hindered his ability to make friends. Although he has a "bag full of tricks", and loves to fool around, his sense of responsibility and interest should make him a credit to the service.

CHARLES DEWALT HAMILTON

Chuck has lived most of his life in Greer, South Carolina. He came to the Academy after spending a year at Farragut Prep School. Sports are his first love and although he has excelled in several sports, golf, rugby, and sports car racing hold most of his interest. Not content to spend all his free time with sports, he has participated in NACA, Masqueraders, and the French Club. Chuck will always be remembered for his sense of humor and pleasant smile. These combined with his sparkling personality and sincere dedication will help him win friends, and be a success and credit to the Service.

LELAND WARREN JOHNSON JR.

Lee comes from a military family and has lived in many different places since his beginning in Trinidad, of which he is very proud. Physical conditioning is a watchword in his life and he constantly works hard to stay in the excellent shape he is in. Being a distance swimmer on plebe and varsity teams in his first two years here and an able and enthusiastic combatant in the Naval Academy's newest sport, Rugby, have also aided his program. Lee's interests range from foreign affairs to outer space. He has actively participated in the Foreign Affairs Club and the Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference. Also, extra science courses will help to prepare him for the coming age. Studying for him, like for us all, comes hard. However, hard work and determination have given him almost constant Supt's list grades. Lee is well liked by his classmates and has been affectionately named the "Bomber" by some of them. He is service-oriented and should do very well, not only here at the academy but in his chosen career.

KURT T. JUROFF

Kurt Juroff, affectionately called Giraffe by his many friends, hails from Osceola, Indiana, where he graduated from high school with honors, both scholastically and in the field of sports. His ready wit and easy going nature have provided his roommates with many laughs and fond memories. It is impossible for discontent to rear its ugly head in a room with Kurt. The main reason for this being his size and strength which tend to make one rather cautious.

Kurt is also an avid sportsman and seems to be equally adept at anything he does, be it waterskiing or football. His other interests include classical music, plays, and last but not least, girls.

Outstanding scholastic ability has already earned him the distinction of wearing stars, and should enable him to excel in post-graduate math. Kurt is devoted to a service career, and cannot help but excel in his every field of endeavor.

JOSEPH JOHN KELLY JR.

Joe came to NAVY via South Philadelphia High School. During his four years by the Severn, he made many new friends and was well-liked by all. Academics never gave him much trouble, and he always worked hard for those Supt.'s List weekends. "Kels" was a stalwart member of the company fieldball and softball teams. During second class year, he developed a strong affinity for the blue trampoline. He passed many hours playing his guitar and singing, and he even tried his hand at writing a few songs. On the weekends his attention turned to the fairer sex. The "Luck of the Irish" failed when Joe drew a sub out of Norfolk for first class cruise. He always put forth a maximum effort in everything he tried. This Irishman is sure to be a valuable addition to the fleet.

Hank came to the Naval Academy from Honolulu, Hawaii, but in body only. His love for surfing, skin-diving, and fishing kept his thoughts close to home and he always headed straight back to the islands as soon as he got any leave. Studies never presented much of a problem to "the pineapple", so he spent most of his time on the ocean sailing team, company fieldball team, dragging, or listening to an extensive record collection. His love for a good time, his quick sense of humor, and his likeable personality all made Hank a popular classmate and insure his success as an officer in the Navy.

HENRY YOUNG HI KIM

LAWRENCE MICHAEL KOCISKO

Larry came to Navy from Cleveland, Ohio, after spending a year at New Mexico Military Institute. With his ready wit and "protruding" personality he is one of the better known members of the class. Somewhat active in sports, he spent four years acting as a stopper on the Navy line and taking up half a squash court. One could always recognize "wee Larry's" room by the large size mound under the blue blanket. Linus has nothing on him. In spite of his affinity for the pad he managed to maintain a high QPR, Supt's list for four years, and keep a certain someone back home happy. Since his military bearing is marred only by his rotund appearance he should make a tremendous splash in the Fleet—or a contribution to the port list at least.

EDWARD KRISTIAN KRISTENSEN

Ed calls his home Munster, Indiana, and came to the Naval Academy via Bullis Prep. Known by his classmates as "Frog" he has been quick to win friends and impress the Academic Department. Starting a little slow, Ed showed his determination and stamina in academics by being on the Supt's list his last two years of school.

Ed is also an avid sportsman and quick to pick up any new sport. He was a member of the Varsity football team for four years and also excelled in Company field ball and squash.

Ed is devoted to a service career and cannot help excel in anything he undertakes. He will certainly be a success and credit to the Navy.

Ralph, who hails from Medford, Oregon, was always eager to describe the rugged beauties of his mountain valley home. His main hobbies have been athletics (Company football and soccer being his favorites) and enjoying life. Ralph was able to consistently out fox the Academic Department, placing his name regularly on the Superintendent's List and wearing stars his last two years. Like a wise fisherman, Ralph believed in seeing all the fish in the ocean and dated girls from the four corners of the country. Ever ready for an intelligent conversation, to share his great sense of humor, cheer up the down trodden, or whatever the situation demanded; Ralph was always counted as a positive asset to any gathering. A hard worker and a constant competitor, Ralph is destined for success in whatever field he should choose to enter.

RALPH SIDNEY LOBDELL

John, or as he is more frequently called, Merrymount, hails from the green hills of western Pennsylvania and a small town called Warren. Graduating from Warren High School, he narrowly missed entering the Academy with the class of 1964 and had to mark time for a year at Penn State. While there he studied (?) basic engineering and was a member of the glorious NROTC.

One of John's biggest problems at the Academy has been trying to get people to spell his name right. Some of the different variations include, "Marrymount", "Marrymont", the above mentioned "Merrymount", and "Marymount." The last is by far the most common and after fighting with it for many years, John has given up and just tells everyone that the "U" is silent.

John, taking the "... go down to the sea in ships" seriously, began ocean sailing his youngster year and has participated in both the Annapolis-Newport and Bermuda races.

He makes friends easily, rarely forgets a name, and knows at least 700 of the struggling members of the "experimental" class—1965.

JOHN ALLEN MARYMONT

SEABORN MONTGOMERY McCRORY III

Ernie is a natural for the navy. After his birth in Long Beach, California, in 1943, his first home was a cabin cruiser. From California he moved to the state he calls home—Washington. It was from Seattle and the shores of Lake Washington that Ernie ventured to take his place at the Naval Academy.

Ernie has varying interests. Naturally, coming from God's Great Country, his first love was the water. This includes fishing, swimming and water skiing. His next love was running. Although he was never great at running, he persistently ran the mile for fun and to "keep in shape". During his second class year he became known for his running the mile around Thompson Field at eleven o'clock at night—a time when others were thinking of sleeping.

Academics never produced hardships for Ernie. He arrived at the Academy after graduating from Bothell High School where he stood fourteenth in his class. His desire to study has enabled him to be a constant member of the Superintendent's List.

Of greatest interest to Ernie in the academic field was Spanish. He took great pleasure in studying the language, history and the culture of the Spanish speaking people. This interest enabled him to spend his first class cruise in Colombia as an exchange officer to the Colombian Navy.

Ernie's academic determination and drive will enable him to enjoy a fulfilling career in the Navy.

ERNEST REESE LOCKWOOD

"Jack" came to us from Miami Springs, Fla., where he graduated first in his class at Miami Jackson High School. Studies never presented problems to him as he breezed to academic honors on the Superintendent's List. He was always willing to aid those not as proficient as he and helped many a floundering student "see the light". Along with his good nature and jokes he will most be remembered for his weightlifting and company soccer activities. A certain airline stewardess in D.C. also occupied much of his time. "Jack's" many academic talents and fine disposition should make his future career a credit to the naval service.

Jim hails from Alton, Illinois, where he graduated from Marquette High School before coming to the Academy. Pike has always managed to keep good grades without really hitting books, due to the fact he has had a strong affinity toward his pad. He enjoys handball, golf, and frog-gigging, the latter of which he does at home in the marshes of the Mississippi River. His easygoing manners, jovial attitude, and quick-to-laugh spirit, has made for him many dear friends during his four years on the Severn. Whether Jim makes the Navy a career or not, his future that lies ahead will be blessed with success and happiness.

JAMES BURNS McPIKE

JOHN RAYMOND MICKELSON

KENNETH ALFRED MOORE JR.

Ken came to the Academy right out of high school where he had starred at both football and baseball. Haddonfield, New Jersey's loss was our gain. In his desire to do everything possible for his company and battalion Ken played battalion football, which he sparked to a Brigade championship in his second class year, and company softball, which also won a Brigade championship. Ken also brought with him a talent for Spanish which stood him in good stead throughout his two years of Dago and enabled him to get one of those coveted foreign cruises. Ken's high standing in academics has allowed him to broaden his horizons by taking a little bit of everything to get a well-rounded background.

Born in DeWitt, Iowa, raised in California from the fifth grade through high school, and educated in Annapolis for the last four years, "Mick" has had a taste of the mid-west, the west and the east—sort of an all-American boy. Should you see him on the athletic field you might think him all-American at that—being both end on the varsity football team and midfielder on the lacrosse team. On the sports field he has a quick temper and a nasty disposition but off the field you couldn't find a more happy-go-lucky guy. He is quick to make friends and is known throughout the brigade for his crazy antics and wild nature. Everyone knows his carefree ways, his friendly greeting, his "salty" cap and his "just a little dusty sir" shoes. As for the next few years you can find him in Florida for he plans to fly those new jets. After that be it Navy or civilian line, with his personality, good looks, "receding hairline" and quick wit he is bound to be a success.

CHARLES ALAN ROACH

A long time resident of Jamestown, North Carolina, "Buggsie" was characterized by his quick wit and good sense of humor. Arriving at USNA from one year at N.C. State, "Buggsie" took plebe year in stride. Although hampered by a bad knee, "Buggsie" enjoyed being on the athletic field, his main interest being company football and softball. While not "sweating" academics, he did well and also found time to relax in a good "bull session." His quick wit and likeable personality have helped make life here more entertaining. On weekends "Buggsie" could be found along the seawall with his fishing pole and a good tale about the one that got away. His perseverance towards a problem and cheerfulness will stand him in good stead. We wish this member of the Class of '65 the best of everything in the future.

ERIC PETER MORRISSETTE

After spending the first part of his life as a Navy Junior, Eric finally decided to settle down and proudly began to call the Blue Hills of Massachusetts his home. Coming to the Academy from Boston College High School, Eric quickly adapted himself to the unique life of a midshipman. After whipping the steadfast academic departments into forced submission, he was thereafter able to take them in stride down the path of least resistance employing, in the right spots, a little hard work and determination. He enjoys participating in any type of rugged sports, his first two loves being rugby and track. His excellent concentration and mental acuity has enabled him to become quite proficient with the chess board. His excellent voice has enabled him to add a great deal to the Catholic Choir. His tremendous sense of humor and his easy to get along with attitude has allowed him to easily make and keep friends wherever he goes. With these attributes and his dedication to always do a good job, Eric is pointing toward a very fruitful career in the Navy.

Elden came to Canoe U. already experienced in the discipline of a military school. Perhaps it was the strict life at Northwestern Prep. or Pillsbury Military School that developed in him the ability to make the absolute best of any circumstances. Here is the "life of the party". Formerly a member of the Teenbeat dance band, Elden has a knack with guitars, and a complete repertoire of swinging songs. With him comes a memory crammed with jokes, if a little short on circuits and numbers. But Elden gets along well academically too. Even the marine instructors bow to that talent so often associated with the Blarney Stone. It was his gift with words which hooked him the job of helping Adm. Hull create a publication to commemorate the great times we had on first class European cruise.

It must have been back in his hometown of Fargo, North Dakota, that Elden learned to love hunting, swimming, and water skiing. But he'd find a way to enjoy doing anything. He'll do well in whatever efforts he undertakes, and probably have more fun along the way than most.

ELDEN L. PLOOF

ANDREW MICHAEL PRYDYBASZ

"The Baz" spent a year at Penn State before coming to Canoe U. from Muhlenberg Township High School. The Nittany Lion's loss was our gain, as Andy quickly became one of the best-liked members of the Brigade. He listed Rugby as his favorite sport, but also excelled in 150# football and soccer. Andy disappointed the young loves of Florida during aviation summer by spending all his free time with his first love—a fishing pole. "Alphabet," as his name dictated he must eventually be called, discovered the joys of photography during 2/C year, and his slides provided many enjoyable moments of leisure for the gang. He was also an active member of the BAC and constantly on the Supt's List. An unwary visitor to the room, making an unwelcome remark, was liable to find himself in the shower, as Andy wasn't one to take any guff. However, his good nature and sense of humor always rose to the occasion, and one had to like him. Andy's conscientious nature and dedication, plus the fact that he's the kind of guy that men like to follow, point toward a successful Naval career.

RAYMOND ABNEY SANDERS

Ray was born into the military in San Antonio, Texas, and now both his heart and home reside in Lufkin, of the same state. His father being in the Army, it seemed sure that he would follow in his footsteps by graduating from the New Mexico Military Institute, but as fate would have it he has spent the last four years on the Severn. His determination and hard study have carried him through the academics. Work as he does he still manages to compile record time in the pad. Being older than most he is respected and looked to for leadership. His attitudes, ideals, and goals in life will make him an outstanding officer and a credit to the Naval Academy.

GEORGE HARRY SUDIKATUS JR.

George comes from Van Nuys, California, where he graduated valedictorian of his Notre Dame High School class. George, an Air Force junior, has consistently made Supt's List and has a star average. In addition to being a diligent student, he is very interested in Oceanography, forensics, and electronics. Being on the debate team for four years has enabled him to win a great many awards and trophies. Everyone will remember his pipe smoke filled room covered with a myriad of wires and electronics equipment. George will always be remembered for his pleasant disposition and easygoing attitude. Always alert and ambitious, he has been a credit to the Brigade and will indeed, be an asset to the Navy upon graduation.

Doug, or "Bish" as he is known to his classmates, can be called a true son of the South. A little bit of Georgia transported to this northern extreme of the old C.S.A., he brings a little bit of that southern sunshine into even the gloomiest of Maryland days. He is a fierce competitor, be it in the classroom or in a crew shell on the Severn, a glutton for academic punishment and a smooth guy to have around when you want to set up your girl's best friend with an afternoon escort. His true loves seem to center around history, crossword puzzles, Chunky candy bars and dancing the Scratch, not necessarily in that order. Bound for success in any endeavor there is only one direction for Doug and that is up.

ROBERT BOLLING BRYANT

EDWARD BERNARD BURROW JR.

Hailing from Jackson, in the hills of Tennessee, Ed came to the Academy by way of Marion Institute. During his tour at Marion, he followed his favorite pursuit, baseball. On coming to Navy, Ed provided dependable catching for the plebes and became a consistent performer for the varsity. He also found time to sing in the Antiphonal Choir and be a mainstay on the company football team. Ed has the dubious honor of holding the record for the most "Dear John's" in a four year tour. However, he remained unshaken and was always willing to give it another try. His dependability and determination to succeed endeared him to all those who knew him and will prove valuable in the future.

A native of Williamsburg, Virginia, Bo came to U.S.N.A. after a year at Columbian Prep School. While in high school he excelled in football and track, and continued his participation in these sports on the battalion level at the Academy. He was proud to play on the Brigade Championship football team. His many interests included photography, classic and sports cars, personal conditioning, collecting books, and letter writing. Having overcome his greatest obstacle while at Navy, the French language, Bo went on to spend part of his first class summer leave in Paris, France. He will be known by his classmates for his quiet and easygoing ways. Out of his love for the sea and ships, Bo looks forward to a rewarding and successful naval career.

WILLIAM JAMES CRISS

Bill came to NAVY from Mingo Junction H.S. in Ohio via Bullis Prep. He successfully survived a rigorous 24th company Plebe year, aided greatly by his sincere desire to improve and his cheerful personality. It was this latter quality that soon made him the most popular man in the company, and while he was the butt of many jokes, (he was the unanimous selection for Ex. Squad Cdr, Tecumseh) there has been no question about the respect that his leadership has earned him. From the time he gave his first come-around as a member of the Plebe Detail Bill showed that he demanded high standards in others as in himself. Academics have been an obstacle, but Bill's gotten by—choosing rather to excel as one of Navy's best and most knowledgeable sports fans. As a member of the PRC and a sports broadcaster for WRNV Bill has done much to keep up the spirit of the "4100." Bill's hard-to-define ability to lead men effectively while at the same time to maintain a high degree of popular support are sure to continue to bring him much success and many friends.

THOMAS BURGESS CROWDER

Tom started his plebe year by bracing up a NROTC three-striper at an away football game, and since that time his humor has not faltered. Few of us have not had at least one day brightened by his boundless wit and friendly manner.

Before joining us, Tom was a Congressional Page and previous to his exposure to Federal employment he attended Haywood County High School in Tennessee—where he learned to appreciate some of the finer things of life.

Two of his retained likes are winning cross-country races—as his contributions to two Brigade Championships can attest—and pretty girls—as anyone knows who has ever seen him on a weekend.

Anyone who enjoys life to the extent that Tom does is bound to a bright future.

Matt, the “baby” of our class came to us from Loughlin High School in Brooklyn. His birth date of June 7, 1944, made him the baby of '65, but how many classes can boast a 6 foot 2 inch—210 pound baby?

His youth seemed to have no effect on his progress at the Academy however, and his social life certainly wasn't hampered. Easy-going and always ready with a smile here in Bancroft, Matt never let the rigors of Academy life get him down, not even the Skinny Department. His tales of cruise indicate that his summers were not spent in a painful manner.

Matt also used his athletic ability for the benefit of company football, volleyball, and softball teams, and his plebe indoctrination system included compulsory knowledge of every sport from table tennis to sports car racing.

Matt plans on a career in Navy line, having shown a definite affinity for the ground during second class summer. However, it is the tin cans' gain and the air arm's loss.

MATTEO JOSEPH D'AMICO

GEORGE LAWRENCE EGGERT

Young Eggs entered the Academy directly from Lancaster High School in the heart of Ohio football country. As soon as academics started, he quickly hid his National Honor Society pin that he had earned in high school, but he has since managed to become one of the outstanding students in “F” recitation group. His interest in sports stayed with him for the entire four years at the Academy and he was a stalwart member of a Brigade Championship football team. “Chubby Cheeks” was no slouch in the girl department either, as he spent the majority of his weekends out on the town. He has managed to win many friends at the Academy with his quick wit and fine sense of humor, and he should be an undeniable asset to the service and a success in later life.

Tom Galbraith came to us from Tacoma, Washington, and like many other westerners, he still swears by the good "west coast" life.

But he doesn't seem to mind the East Coast very much either as evidenced by his progress at the Academy. He is a person who has gained success in studies without 'sweating it' too much, showing special proficiency in the Bull Department.

Tom played Plebe and Varsity golf for four years and was one of the mainstays of the twenty-fourth company's cross country teams which won the Brigade Championships three years in a row. Tom says he runs cross country for fun, but we all know he plays golf in order to prepare himself for the Corps.

Graduation climaxes his four year running battle with the Academic and Executive Departments and the system in general—and he has emerged the decisive victor.

TOM GALBRAITH

SCOTT BOWMAN HARRIS

Hailing from the "Land of Pleasant Living," Scott came to Navy to begin his career from McDonogh School in Baltimore, Maryland. Wearing a uniform was nothing new to him, having come from a military high school, with a year of study at Bullis Prep. Sportswise at Navy, Scott continued an excellent high school record by participating in battalion football, where he anchored the perennially strong Sixth Batt line, and in battalion track heaving the shot. Weekends as an upperclassman, Scott could always be found dragging his pretty blond "O.A.O." Besides his girl, Scott's interests lie in sports cars, sailing, and personal conditioning as an avid weight-lifter. The academic grind was not easy for the big Baltimorian, consequently many nights were spent burning the midnight oil. He provided a wealth of professional knowledge to the plebes, especially in aviation and sports, and will long be remembered by his many friends as a guy who had fond liking for a good time. Upon graduation, Scott looks forward to a rewarding career in Naval Aviation.

JACK HUNTER HAWVER JR.

After spending a year at Vallejo Junior College basking in the California sun, Jack achieved one of his highest goals and entered U.S.N.A. An ardent sun-worshipper and lover of the opposite sex, he never could get used to the East Coast. During his four years at the Academy he never did adapt to the weather but he enjoyed more success with the opposite sex, a fact many a Maryland Co-ed will attest to! A versatile athlete, "Velvet" excelled in such intramural sports as tennis, handball, and lacrosse. When not actively engaged in sports he could always be found pursuing his next favorite sport, girls. A smooth operator with a long list of girls, Jack could be counted upon to provide the needy with a drag. Although engineering courses were not his favorites, Jack survived the attack of academics with his characteristic determination and good humor. These qualities along with his fine sense of responsibility and attention to duty will make him a welcome addition to the service.

Mark, who hails from the Lone Star State left behind an outstanding record in academics and sports to join the ranks here at Navy. An ever present pair of stars and sports participation can attest to the fact that he has done as well at the Academy. Although ever busy with overloads, studies, or reading letters from his O.A.O., one could always find him helping others in their constant battle with the academic departments. Known for his good natured disposition, clever mind, and quick wit, he will undoubtedly make a success of anything he attempts.

MARK ANDREW HOPPER

In the summer of 1961, Wellesley, Massachusetts, sent one of her outstanding young men to USNA. After four productive years at Wellesley High School, Bart continued to excel at Navy. Disdaining idleness, he was always on the move, participating in such activities as varsity 150 lb. football, varsity baseball, and intramural cross-country and tennis. B. J. took a genuine interest in the affairs of the Brigade and could often be found serving as an honor representative as well as a member of the BAC and the class improvement committee. Bart was fanatical about getting "his work-out" and was in excellent physical condition; he had to be to keep up with his hectic love life. Always looking for just the right drag, he could often be found sweating it out in May even though he was probably the only man in the academy to start planning for June Week in July. Bart always managed to come up with the big date however; even though there were some trying moments. Being well-motivated for a career of service to his country, Bart will surely be as successful in the fleet as he was at USNA.

BRADFORD JEALOUS JR.

DENNIS JOY JOHNSON

After meeting the requirements at Beaumont High, Tom left the mighty state of Texas to join the blue and gold on the banks of the Severn. His four years at Navy were very active by anyone's standards. Tom tried out for Plebe baseball but a shoulder injury ended his hopes for a varsity career. He then turned toward intramural cross country, where he led his company to a brigade title, and basketball. At the same time, he was making his mark in the academic and aptitude fields as his marks and stripes first class year clearly showed. Despite this active schedule Tom managed to find time to sleep and he always had alarm clocks in the room to wake him up. Tom's easy going manner and willingness to help a friend in need will always be remembered by those who knew him. These traits will enable him to make many new friends in the Fleet.

THOMAS JACKSON HOWELL

It was the Navy's gain when the twin Johnson boys left Indianapolis. Denny headed to Annapolis, and brother Don headed for the NROTC unit at Purdue. Denny, a real sharpshooter, aimed for the 4.0 at the academic complex and for the bulls-eye at the rifle range. He could be counted on for an outstanding score on both targets, and came away from the rifle range as captain of the varsity squad for 1965. Out-of-season Denny could be found at volleyball or softball, and early risers could sometimes catch glimpses of DJ2 as the sunrise tennis club manned the courts. Denny could be found during study hour answering the questions of those who knocked at the door. The Weapon's Department found his interest in computers sincere enough to warrant a trip to Stanford University during Christmas leave, 1963, and promptly assigned him a research project into the complexities of Adaptive Logic. Judging from his performance at the Academy, Denny will be at home wherever he goes in adventures with the Naval Service.

Johnny, a Navy Junior, came to the Naval Academy from a long succession of varied home towns ranging from Hawaii to England. With a remarkable ability to make himself at home, coupled with a quick "anyone for bridge?" and a friendly manner, Johnny quickly adapted himself to the Academy and its ways. One could generally find him contemplating his current OAO, listening to classical music, debating philosophy, playing squash or occasionally cracking his books in a valiant effort to keep one step ahead of the academic departments. Johnny's outgoing personality, quick wit and humor undoubtedly will carry him far in whatever he attempts.

JOHN CLAYTON LEHMAN

ROBERT BRUCE LISKA

EDWARD FRANCIS McCANN JR.

Ed, coming from a Navy family knew all about the game from the start. His humor and wit was a constant source of amusement to his friends, and plebe year never slowed him down even a little bit. Ed was an active member of WRNV for the duration. As D. J., chief engineer, and program director, he was one of those who brought good music and entertainment to the Brigade. A ham, operator, and an avid ocean sailor, Ed's talents were diversified enough to include good grades with all of his other extracurricular activities. A convertee from the Social Humanities group, Ed became an adept computer operator overnight. No matter what the future holds for Ed, undoubtedly it will be funny.

Bruce came to Annapolis from Oregon State University, where he had to leave the exciting fraternity life and his top position in the Navy ROTC unit. He remains an ardent fan of Oregon State to this day, but Navy sports enthusiasts now recognize him as "Navy's Number One Fan." Bruce's enthusiasm is spread over many interests, ranging from a good steak to his Saturday morning sports show on WRNV. If looking for his specialties, one could find them in the talented manner in which he sings tenor in the glee club and in his dedication to light-weight crew. Two seasons of each year find him in the bow of a crew shell, while in the winter he keeps in shape by helping win the brigade cross-country championship. Sports are important to Bruce, but anyone can tell you how friendly and considerate he always is, never lacking for a good word or a humorous outlook. In the Navy, as at the Academy, Bruce will quickly establish his high standards and set a goal which can be reached by few.

CLEMENT THOMAS MEEHAN JR.

Clemmie, as he was affectionately known by his many friends was a typical Philadelphia Irishman. His love and knowledge of sports was almost astounding. Very few plebes ever stumped him on a carry-on question. Clemmie's ability and love of winning stemmed from stern academic and athletic training at North Catholic High School and Drexel Institute in Philadelphia. His natural ability was put to good use on the Sixth Batt. football team, being one of the fastest sprinters. His favorite sport though, was basketball, and many spare hours were spent on the courts. Clem's love of sports didn't keep him from his books, i.e. his Edgar Rice Burroughs' books. Clem's name could always be seen on the Supt.'s list, his favorite subjects being in the Skinny Department. Clem's professional knowledge came from rugged plebe training, and this professional knowledge was invaluable in indoctrinating the plebes. Clemmie's jovial personality, easygoing manner, and love of the Navy should be the foundations of a successful career in the service.

LEON PETER OKUROWSKI JR.

Okie came to us after a year at Columbian Prep from the Keystone State in hopes of finding his way into the ranks of the "Big Blue Team". During Plebe Year he was a member of the Plebe Football Squad, but during Youngster Year he turned his efforts towards Varsity Lacrosse. With his natural athletic ability he quickly adapted to the game but an injury ended his varsity career. Okie was always surrounded by friends due in part to his having two pretty and eligible sisters, but mostly to his warm personality. Being a well-rounded guy he is a stand-out with the trumpet and has participated in many musical organizations including the Concert Band, Catholic Choir, and the Glee Club. His future looks bright as does the Navy's who will find in him a hardworking and capable officer.

JOHN COMERFORD OWENS

The "Big O" hails from Charleston, South Carolina, where he was raised on a steady diet of athletics and pretty girls. Perhaps the lure of the sea from Charleston's Battery was too much for the pride of Bishop England High School, but regardless, he decided to cast his lot with the Blue and Gold. John is well known around the Academy as the Varsity's winningest tennis player, an army killer in squash, and as the 24th Company's foremost obtainer of "Gouge." John assumed a less vigorous attitude toward studies than that displayed on Navy courts, but was seldom caught with his Q.P.R. down. A sharp dresser and a wicked dancer, with a hawk's eye for the girls, John always managed to find a party while the rest of us brooded behind the walls of Bancroft. Youngster Cruise inspired John to don the Navy wings of gold upon graduation, and it looks like a twenty year contract, at least. His winning habits, loyalty to co-workers, and dedication to success, that made him so valuable as a teammate in his undergraduate years, will make him even more valuable in the Fleet.

JAMES RICHARD ROUSE

Jim came to the shores of the Severn from Flomaton, Alabama. With the turmoil of plebe year behind him, he was able to devote more time to studying and reaped great results as he won his stars at the end of youngster year and wore them throughout his Academy career. Besides having a liking for bull overloads, he could also be found giving freely of his musical talents to the Chapel Choir and to the Drum and Bugle Corps. His athletic ability was also demonstrated, as he was a stalwart on the company soccer, football, and softball teams. We know that Jim's varied background will make him a valuable asset to the Navy.

Carl, a typical easygoing Pennsylvania Dutchman, came to the Naval Academy after a year at Hershey Junior College. Being very interested in sports, he participated enthusiastically and was a mainstay in the intramural program. Music played an important part in his life here at the Academy, and he was a member of both the Protestant Chapel Choir and the Glee Club. Making long lasting friends was never a problem, and his quick mind paved the way in many a friendly "Bull" session. He never found the academics a real problem. Carl's real love is Destroyers, and his industrious leadership qualities will undoubtedly be an asset to the fleet.

CARL RODNEY SPANGLER JR.

STEVEN JAMES WHITE

Fresh from a year of studies in his beloved archaeology at Cameron Junior College came yet another member of the Class of 1965. Steve knew well the sense of excitement offered by the tornado heartland of Lawton, Oklahoma, the sense of beauty that Mt. Scott presented on Easter morning, and most important, absolutely nothing about USNA. But he used well his love of the social sciences to master the academy's Bull courses while waging constant war with Steam and Skinny. Plebe and JV 150 lb. Crew were the extent of his varsity athletic endeavors, but numerous intramural teams knew him as a spirited competitor. Labeled by his friends as "Prairie D. Dog," or just "Dog" for short, he left his mark from Plebe year in the pages of the 1963 edition of Annapolis Today. His mom, dad, and sister kept a running account from his none-too-frequent letters; and yet they, like the rest of us, knew that be it in the Navy or whatever his chosen field of endeavor, his associates will have an ambitious, fun-loving, and dedicated southwesterner in their midst.

DOYLE EUGENE WINTERS

After spending a year at Ohio University and refusing an offer from Case Institute of Technology, the "Blue Knight" from Zanesville became a welcome addition to the Class of 1965. Doyle took academics in his stride but must have fallen in love with the IBM computer for there is where he devoted his afternoons. His academic ability was only surpassed by his wholehearted interest in extracurricular activities and sports. Whether it be in the handball courts, on the cross-country course, or on the bridge of a YP, Doyle's enthusiasm helped drive his teams on to victory. Perhaps his greatest love was the saxophone which was demonstrated by his participation in the NA-10 playing alto, tenor, and baritone, and by his welcome contribution to the Musical Club Shows. Doyle's determination, perseverance, ability to get along with others, and friendly manner will make him a tribute to the Naval Academy and to whatever branch of the service he enters.

Rich, being a Texan, has the typical good humor and zest for living for which that state is famous. He manages to always look at the bright side of life, and this attitude has enabled him to make it through even the dreariest days at Navy with a smile on his face.

A natural athlete, Rich varied his athletics here at the Academy, giving his support to the company on the lightweight football, fieldball, volleyball, and softball teams.

With a high degree of native intelligence, the rigors of the Academy's academic life have proved to be no problem and have left him plenty of time for his two great loves of life, pretty girls and fast sports cars. Typical of his carefree fun loving outlook on life, Rich's desk has never been adorned with the generally accepted conventional picture of an O.A.O., but instead, pictures of a bird-cage Maserati and his actress idol Ann-Margret.

Wherever his career in the Navy will lead, it is certain that his sense of humor, and fine competitive spirit will serve him well and help to make his career a success.

NORMAN ARLON DEAN

Norm hails from Whittier, California. Entering the Academy from high school, his above average size and the fact that he was an ocean sailor singled him out for a little extra consideration plebe year. Having passed this hurdle, Norm has moved up in the world to become president of the Presbyterian Church Party and vice-president of the Portuguese Club. In the afternoons he can be found studying, swimming, sailing, or catching up on the sleep that he has somehow misplaced. Whether dragging or not, Norm can be often found weaving in and out of the weekend sailors in his canoe. With a ready smile and a cheerful greeting, Norm has been instrumental in pulling many of his classmates out of their occasional ruts. Whatever branch of the service he selects, Norm will be a great asset to the service.

PAUL STANLEY BLOCH

Paul, the number 2 son of the Bloch family, left the big city of Chicago to serve the Blue and Gold in the small city of Annapolis. An honor graduate of J. Sterling Morton High School in Berwyn, Illinois, he attended the University of Illinois for a year before coming to Severn's shores. He found his new home in the Naval Academy Sailing Squadron where he quickly earned a yawl command. He was also very active as the varsity rifle manager. "P.S." has endeared himself to the Coca Cola Company for being their prime consumer of coke. Anywhere you find Paul, a coke will not be far away. "The Block" quickly proved his ability and has always been at the top of the striper list. He was no academic slouch either, always being a year or two ahead of his classmates with numerous validations, electives, and overloads while always making the Supt's List with stars. His friendly manner and winning personality will take him far in his career.

BRIAN JOSEPH DOHERTY

With a dream in his heart and a great will to succeed, Brian came to Annapolis after a year at the University of Notre Dame in Indiana. His athletic interests were mainly in the areas of crew and rugby. However, when not making points on the athletic fields, Brian was invariably scoring in the academic departments. A star and Supt's List man for all four years, Brian was the salvation of many a classmate who had academic troubles. In addition, his sharp wit and radiant personality won him many friends. We will all do well to take a chance on his success ticket, for Brian has what it takes to go places. The Naval Service has gained a truly fine officer and gentleman.

EDWARD ROBINSON FICKENSCHER III

"Fick" as he has come to be known in the Academy came to us directly from Severn Prep School. In his four years at Navy he has played hard and worked hard to excel in Co. volleyball, batt. lax. and sub-squad, and except for a slight setback in Youngster Bull, academics. He is known for his ability to argue about anything with anybody (usually about the Navy). Besides all these amiable qualities "Fick" has a sincere deep, desire to become a successful Naval Officer (an attribute he acquired from his father). With his determination and sense of fair play "Fick" will boost the morale of any ship in the Navy.

WILLIAM EDWARD FITZPATRICK JR.

Known to all as "Fitz," Bill came to the Academy from the South Shore of Long Island with an Irish smile that would make even Erin blush with pride. A standout basketball player and high jumper for Bishop Loughlin High, "Fitz" brought these talents with him to USNA. When leg injuries forced him to the sidelines Plebe Year, "Fitz" channeled his interests to a new field, sailing. Academics never posed a problem for this "South Shore Hardguy" as can be attested by his constant appearance on the Supt.'s List and his acquisition of a major in political science. During his spare time "Fitz" could usually be found in his pad reading a good novel or just in the pad in a solemn state of slumber. "Fitz's" easygoing personality blended with his quick wit should prove the perfect combination to make him a success in whichever field he chooses in the Navy.

EDWIN JOHN GALE

Ted will always be remembered by his classmates as a conscientious individual but yet one who is always present when a good time is to be had. Hailing from the state of Vermont he has had the opportunity to enjoy a variety of winter sports, the one being of major interest to him, skiing. Ted boasts of his ability to remain footloose and fancy-free, a rebel amidst conformity, but those who know him well realize this is not a permanent condition. With his mature outlook toward life and his commendable ability to make friends, he is certain to be a success in all his future endeavors.

THIRTY-SIXTH COMPANY

SIXTH BATTALION

Hailing from Manitowoc, Wisconsin, on the shores of Lake Michigan, Don came to Navy from Manitowoc's Lincoln High School. After a year of searching "Wax" found his place at USNA in the form of his cartoon in the LOG. Beginning with simple one picture drawings, WAXER '65 quickly proceeded to fill one or two page spreads, then finally taking over as Humor Editor. His quick wit and wry humor (and guts at facing the censor) made the LOG issues some of the best ever. Of course it takes more than cartoons to graduate and after some trouble with plebe dago Don fought back, earning Supt's list and later stars. After a flying start in wrestling, Don settled down to the confines of the squash courts and soccer fields. Wherever he goes we know a radio playing rock and roll will not be far away, this being one of his insatiable passions. His future CO's had better be careful, for if they anger WAXER, they're bound to find themselves lampooned in a cartoon on the wardroom wall.

DONALD ARTHUR HALLWACHS

PAUL E. MARSHALL

Micro . . . The young Southern Gentleman found his way into our Sacred halls via Centenary College deep in the heart of Louisiana. His days as a cadet in the Salvation Army have made him a natural for a service career. His uninhibited imagination has provided many a pleasant hour both on leave and while trying to pass away the hours within these walls.

All five foot four inches of "Micro" are often seen bouncing around the athletic field in the afternoon as Paul is a stalwart of battalion sports. His enthusiasm for any job that he tackles makes him a natural leader both on the field and off. His pleasant off centered smile has won for him many life long friends who will be ready at a moments notice to join him in another harmonious brawl. The fleet that receives this bundle of energy will indeed be blessed with a great officer.

JOHN THEODORE MacDERMOTT

A native of Plainfield, New Jersey, Ted came to the Academy directly from high school. Academics proved no obstacle for him as he had little difficulty consistently maintaining a Star and Supt's List average. His academic prowess centered on Mathematics, the field in which he majored and hopes to pursue in future study. A great competitor, Ted could be counted on to excel with any racquet, but tennis proved to be his athletic forté. His quick and ready wit was always present to add a spark to any conversation. Ted's demonstrated abilities in academics and leadership can only lead to a great future for him, whatever he endeavors.

"Pear" came straight to Mother Bancroft from JEB Stuart High School in Falls Church, Virginia, carrying on the family tradition at Navy. As a mainstay on the plebe wrestling team, Gay was able to demonstrate a fine natural athletic ability.

Somehow making it through plebe year, Gay was then able to capitalize on his easygoing, devil-may-care personality. Although not an academic slash, he never had to worry about his studies, always managing to put forth an amply rewarded concentrated effort at the end. Very outgoing and friendly, and unhindered by time spent studying, Gay could always be found in friends' rooms in the middle of a bull session. A constant four year smile and natural good naturedness has won Gay many friends and launched him on his way to a career in Naval Aviation.

GAYLORD SWAYNE PARRETT JR.

"Sapito", well known for his quick wit and ready smile, is a constant source of entertainment to his many friends. Fighting uphill against his name, Charlie was very popular with the academic departments, proving that writing letters and managing sports teams beat studying any day. Charlie has a tremendous respect for the Navy and leans toward both flying and line. His interest in and knowledge of the Navy and Navy life will stand him in good stead in the future. A product of the Sunshine State, "Sapito" speaks Spanish well and was a constant source of gouge for people with less ability. Wherever he goes, there is sure to be laughter and the word "Sapito" in the air.

CHARLES NIM SAPP JR.

RICHARD JACKSON SELMAN JR.

John brought to the Naval Academy a rare combination of personality, natural ability, and a sense of humor. No matter what the undertaking, he has been successful. Whether captaining the 150 lb. football team or winning a literary writing contest, he has attacked his goal with unusual enthusiasm and ability. Besides being All-League in football, he was a standout boxer and the leading scorer on the company fieldball and the battalion lacrosse teams. Although John usually made the Supt's List, his real academic interests lay outside the basic curriculum and he channeled little of his energy into the mechanics of steam and skinny. John was one of the most popular members of our class and his easy-going Southern temperament and subtle wit will always be remembered by his classmates. With these qualities, Quiz is assured of the same measure of success throughout life as he has enjoyed during his stay at the Academy.

JOHN NOLAN QUISENBERRY

Dick, being a Navy Junior, has lived in many places, the most recent being Charleston, South Carolina. He attended the Frankfort American High School in Frankfort, Germany, where in two and one half years he acquired a fancy for all forms of German culture. Dick's present interests include flying, and playing tennis, a game in which he is an avid competitor. Much of Dick's time is spent in campaigns against the "Skinny" Department, and the high cost of living. Dick has high hopes for Naval Air, and to this end, took Airborne training at Fort Benning, Georgia. Dick will always be remembered as one of the best runners on the Twenty-third Company winter Cross-country team. His subtle sense of humor, and dedication to what he believes will make Dick a well-liked and successful officer.

SIXTH BATTALION

"Furdy" took the big step to the Naval Academy from Valley Regional High School in Deep River, Connecticut. While at V-R Fred was a member of the varsity soccer team and has played soccer in the intramural program at the Academy. Fred has an unquenchable thirst for knowledge and has read many books by the shower light after lights out. Fred sings in the Glee Club and the Protestant Chapel Choir. He is also a good artist and could be observed sketching on weekends and on nights when the next day's academics were not too rigorous. Fred will earn the respect and admiration of his subordinates and seniors because of his intelligence, character and his will to improve his mind and the minds of those associated with him. The future is made for intelligent men and Fred will find it easy to obtain a prominent place in it.

FREDERIC CARLTON SWAN JR.

RAYMOND ANTHONY THOMAS

LYNN MICHAEL TRAVIS

Soft spoken and easy going, Mike is another member of the southern contingent here at U.S.N.A. Hailing from Arkansas he is endowed with copious quantities of that southern hospitality and given a body of water and some fishing gear he is really in his glory.

During his tour at Navy, Mike came to love two departments more than any others. Between touching hot leads together in Second Class Skinny Lab and those numerous encounters with the Executive Department he managed to stave off the usual boredom of academy life.

Being both a good man to go on liberty with and a real demon in the classroom, Mike's magnetic personality and desire to succeed should lay the world at his feet.

Ray was born into the Marine Corps at Camp LeJeune, North Carolina, and upheld the tradition of service juniors in traveling throughout the South and East. He found it hard to call anyplace home, but finally settled in his birthplace long enough to graduate from high school there. His acceptance to the Naval Academy fulfilled a long-held desire to follow the man he most admired—his father. Battalion gymnastics and varsity and winter cross country received a shot in the arm because of Ray's active participation in them, and he provided points enabling his gym team to win the Brigade championship two years in a row. Ray always maintained a comfortable lead over the academic departments, and was not at all opposed to spending weekends with his OAO. If ever a friend needed a drag, all he needed do was see Ray—it was secretly suspected that he kept files. When it came to hobbies, Ray's "Leatherneck" collection and his knowledge of Corps history stood alone at the top. In fact, when the words "Marine Corps" and "dedication" were mentioned, the name that came to mind was Ray's. The Corps will receive in Ray not only an officer dedicated to upholding its ideals, but one who is cooperative, sincere, and understanding.

RONALD EDWARD VOELKEL

Ron or "Folksy Voelksy" came to the Naval Academy from the Queens, New York, by way of Brooklyn Technical High School. In spite of his scientific and technical background he found history especially to his liking and could always be counted on for a bull session on one or many historical topics. Ron became especially well-read on subjects relating to the Second World War and the Korean War. Classical Music, Jazz and Folk Music were all to his liking but he was particularly enthusiastic about the big band sounds of the Swing Era. During his four years at the academy he was an avid hand ball player and held down a high position on the battalion hand ball team. With his exact and thorough manner of getting things done Ron should be a worthwhile contribution to the officer corps.

ANDREW J. WALDRON

The Naval Academy has seen few such Midshipmen as Andy Waldron. Endowed with the rare ability of being able to learn the most difficult subjects by osmosis, he spent most of his study hours with a book clasped tightly to his head (separated only slightly by a soft pillow). No stranger to the Supt's List, Andy was also a standout on the athletic fields: he quarterbacked the company heavyweights, spiked the volleyball team, left-fielded the 23rd company softballers, and played forward on the championship basketball team. But even without Andy's accomplishments in academics and sports his easy-going personality, his friendliness, and his infectious laughter would have established his position as one of our most memorable classmates. As one of our revered Skinny profs wrote in evaluating Andy as one of his most promising young students: "Andrew is quiet, unassuming, hard working."

As a navy junior hailing from Kwajalein in the Marshall Islands, the Naval Academy was the logical extension of Hank's way of life. After a year in the Air Force spent at NAPS Hank discovered the better service and enrolled at Canoe U. With his attraction for the water he took up plebe crew and soon had worked his way up to the first boat. But a yearning for the open seas took hold and the next year found Hank as an ocean sailor, working his way up to command of the "HIGHLAND LIGHT" first class year. Devoting much time to sailing has not kept Hank from pursuing intramural sports, where he was a top runner on the brigade champion company cross country team for three consecutive years. The rugged outdoors type, Hank is no slouch in the girl's department either, never without a pretty face at his beckon. Academics have posed not so much a threat as a challenge, with Hank ultimately coming out on top. It is this determined drive to meet any challenge that should take him ever upwards in a career in nuclear subs.

HENRY THOMAS WILLIS II

ROBERT FRANK ZITZEWITZ

Zitz, being a Navy Junior, is much at home anywhere in the world, but claims as his present home Newport News, Virginia. He is the fourth in his family to come to the shores of the Severn. Before him have been his uncle, father, and brother. He started his career at USNA playing soccer, and although several stays in the hospital have kept him from making the varsity, he has been very active in J.V. soccer, and has made great contributions to company fieldball and volleyball. Zitz loves women, paperbacks, scotch, and bridge; hates studies; and can't stand anyone who won't say his name right. With his sharp sense of humor and his easy manner, Zitz will make a fine officer and will be a credit to whichever branch of the Navy he selects.

FALL SPORTS

The fall season found Navy dividing four sports with the Cadets and ending a streak which was the longest Navy one on record. In the soccer NCAA championship, Navy rolled over all its opponents including Army for the sixth year in a row. Dick Hulse and team captain Paul Daulerio got the goals that sank the Cadets. The Navy harriers ran past Army for the third straight year by placing seven men in the first ten finishers. Greg Williams and Bob Sermier finished in a dead heat for first place.

The Mighty Mites dropped a real close contest early in their season to the Cadets in a game that was primarily a battle of defenses.

In Philadelphia, Army ended a Navy five year winning streak and handed us an 11-8 loss. An injury riddled Navy team made a very valiant effort but was stopped short twice in the final period. For the first class playing in their final regular game, it was quite a disappointment and for those of us in the brigade it was a shock for we had never seen a loss.

PENN            8

This year's football season began on a rather dull afternoon at University Park, Pennsylvania, but the Navy team was determined to make up for the disappointing weather. In a regionally televised contest, Navy avenged a loss of two years ago, whipping the Nittany Lions 21-8.

A battle of strong defenses, this game could have ended a scoreless tie, but two Navy interceptions and a key fumble recovery deep in Penn State territory led to the Navy score. Penn State was sloppy in much of its execution, but the Navy defense made it look even worse. Most notable improvement was seen by fans in Jim Taylor at tackle and Duncan Inghram in the defensive backfield.

This game, however, began the long string of Navy injuries as four players were put on the sidelines, including Roger Staubach and Taylor, who would be out for the season.

WM. & MARY

6

When the grads returned the weekend after Penn, the traditional romp over William and Mary was not as easy as advertised, due to the growing injuries. Coach Hardin had many of his regulars on the side lines.

The first three periods of the game were quite close, with Navy leading mainly on depth and defense. With the possibility of a defeat still in the air, Roger was sent in and quickly we had three more touchdowns and the rout began in earnest.

That the team was going to have difficulty without key personnel due to injury was easily apparent in this game. We were on defense most of the day and the defense set up all but one score on fumbles, interceptions, and behind the line tackles. Whether or not the defense could keep it up against stronger teams was one question, but more important was the hope that the offense would come up to its hoped for performance.

Outstanding efforts in this game were turned in by Kip Paskewich, who got away from linemen twice for two long runs for touchdowns, and John Mickelson, who thought he was playing defense until substitution rules allowed him to catch a touchdown pass.

MICHIGAN

21

Michigan was the first really strong team on the Navy schedule, and they more than lived up to their pre-season ratings. That we had beaten them soundly the year before was just more fuel to add to an already strong fire. When our longer injury list was added to the ledger, Navy entered the game a decided underdog.

The team gave a good account of itself as can be witnessed by checking the statistics, for despite being shutout for the first time in many years, our total offense was nearly the same as the Wolverines'. Even more significant was the number of interceptions and fumbles we recovered as well as the five times we almost scored. When one watched the same Michigan team in the Rose Bowl on New Year's Day, it was a wonder we stayed as close to them as we did.

Practice is always necessary

NAVY 0 GEORGIA TECH 17

Navy returned to playing under the lights for its next encounter as we faced the Yellow Jackets of Georgia Tech before a friendly crowd at the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville. The injury list was now so large that only half of the first unit expected to see action. Still sitting in a hospital bed in Annapolis was Roger Staubach, whose ankle was so bad he could hardly walk.

Again it seemed that the defense would have to do the job to both the fans at the stadium and those of us in the field house watching the game on closed circuit television. The offense sputtered four straight times with only one first down coming to our side in the first half. A couple of errors by the secondary led to Tech scores and the picture was definitely not happy.

A new Navy team came onto the field in the second half as three times in a row they got the ball and marched for yardage on a combination of short passes and good running by Kip Paske-wich and Pat Donnelly. But it seemed that Tech would only let us get so close and then close the door, for we never reached pay-dirt. The game ended with a Navy shutout for the second week in a row.

CALIFORNIA 27

Next it was off to sunny California and a game with the Golden Bears, who were also having offense problems despite an All-American at quarterback in the personage of Craig Morton. With all the injuries, the Navy team had been reorganized into an offensive and defensive platoon in the hope that we could score early and break our opponents spirits.

Captain Fred Marlin got our first points in three weeks by kicking a field goal when our second drive of the day came up short. Our defense unfortunately let down somewhat, and at the half, California led. At the start of the second half, we got a safety and our first touchdown in three games. Morton, however, began to get protection and hit for two touchdown passes. We had lost again.

PITTSBURGH 14

A pitchout to Griffin by Roger.

Rough on the stomach but good yardage

A trip to Pittsburgh to play the revenge hungry Panthers was next on the schedule. We felt we had possibly received a bad call leading to a tie for the opposition.

Two blocked field goal attempts by Fred Marlin and another that was short did not help our cause, but overall it appeared that we had become adapted to our new style of play. More important, the offense seemed to be back in gear as the defensive team was on the field less than half the time for the first time in four weeks.

NAVY 0 NOTRE DAME 40

Powerful Notre Dame, which had been running over opponents regularly all season by big scores, was next on the schedule. With the injury list still long and Staubach the only regular member of the starting backfield at the beginning of the season available for duty, it promised to be a long and hard game.

The tight Notre Dame defense.

Marlin and Wong offering protection

Notre Dame showed early that it was a team to be reckoned with, especially with their subway alumni which had come from New York City for the game. The Navy defense did well in containing Notre Dame's first efforts, but our offense again could not get moving.

John Huarte and Jack Snow got together on two long touchdown completions in the second quarter, breaking our back effectively. From that point on it became a decisive loss for Navy in addition to being another shutout.

Trouble coming.

The calm before the storm.

NAVY 22
MARYLAND 27

Perhaps heartbreak would be the proper word to describe the game with our traditional rivals from College Park. As is standard in Maryland-Navy contests, this game was a battle from start to finish. For most of the game, the picture was favorable until, with just seconds remaining, Maryland completed a scoring toss which proved the final margin of victory.

NAVY 27    DUKE 14

The game preceding Army proved to be our final victory for the season. Not only did we handle Duke well, it looked like a turning point had been reached on the road to Army. The team was sharper all around. Fred Marlin got his longest field goal of the season while Roger Staubach got the season's most total offense as well as the season's longest punt, a beautifully executed quick kick. The team's and the Brigade's spirits all rose with this contest both in pride over the victory and in anticipation of the final game of the year.

NAVY 8 – ARMY 11

The Army game this year was, as always, rated a toss-up. Both teams gave their maximum effort in the attempt to bring home a victory. The game's operations began with a tremendous blitz by the Army line that was to prove to be the rule of the day. With the game only fifty-three seconds old, a swarm of Cadets stopped Roger Staubach in the end zone, giving the Cadets the first two points of the game.

One last march-on

Tecumseh ready for battle

Little maneuvering room

A quick breather

This safety seemed to light a spark in the Cadets which didn't flicker until near the end of the second quarter. In this second quarter, Army got its second score of the day on a 53 yard touchdown march using two inside reverses from a double wing-T with John Seymour breaking away for runs of 16 and 32 yards. Stichweh then passed five yards to his end Champi for the score. Barry Nickerson, the Cadet kicker, then missed the point after touchdown attempt.

Changing the Score

A holding penalty started us on our only scoring drive. We made four successive first downs with Pat Donnelly doing the yeoman work of personally getting each one. He was hurt carrying for the fourth one and had to be taken out of the game. Staubach then took over with two passes carrying us from the 24 to the 3. Then youngster Tom Leiser put us on the scoreboard with 25 seconds left in the half. One of the most spectacular plays we'd ever seen then followed on the conversion. Gambling for two and the tie, Roger passed the ball with two Cadets hanging onto him to Phil Norton, who was surrounded by Army defenders. Making the impossible catch of an impossible pass, Norton tied the score.

In the third quarter, neither team threatened seriously with a Navy field goal attempt from the 33 failing as the end of the quarter. Army then took the ball on their own 20 and started the game winning advance. Stichweh started the drive with a 17 yard burst followed by a 33 yard pass to Champi. In a few minutes, with Seymour carrying the ball, Stichweh had set his team on the 3 in position for the winning field goal. Nickerson then put the ball through the uprights giving Army the victory margin. We then came back and mounted a drive to the Army 28, but there it died. Army linemen again poured through, throwing Staubach for a 24 yard loss.

Thus ended our attempt for "Six and Even." However, after the game we had nothing to be ashamed of. Our team had played an excellent game to be beaten only by a little more spirit and determination from the Army side. In the 1966-67 season the Navy cry will be "Two and Even."

150 LB. FOOTBALL

The 1964-65 Lightweight Football Team

This season was also a rebuilding year for the Mighty Mites under Coach Jack Cloud. Most of last year's front wall on both the offensive and defensive units was graduated taking with them a top fullback.

Relying heavily on youngsters, the team easily won its opener over Cornell although sustaining a few costly injuries. These injuries plus a stout Cadet defense were all that was needed to hand the team its first and only loss.

Captain John Quisenberry led the team through the remaining four games without defeat as the 150's ran up sizeable scores against every opponent.

SOCCER

The 1964 edition of the Naval Academy Soccer Team, captained by Paul Daulerio and coached by Mr. Glenn Warner was the most successful team of the fall season. Playing a tough regular season schedule, the booters came away unscathed, including a well earned 2-1 win over arch rival Army.

The early part of the season presented many problems for Coach Warner, for he had to replace the nation's leading scorer for three years, Karl Kaesar, and the complete backfield, which was the key to the previous season's long shut-out string.

Coming in to take up the slack were men like Earl Ferguson and Bob Brown. Myron Hura once again had an outstanding year, even moving back to fullback to lend his outstanding play to the defensive effort. Goalie Bob Johnson was another key man in our victory path, using his size and quick reactions to come up with the impossible save, even on penalty shots.

By far the highlight of the season for the whole team was the winning of the NCAA championship on an icy field at Brown University. A victory over St. Louis University was the clincher as well as sweet revenge for the loss to St. Louis in the previous year's elimination. Returning home to their second Tecumseh Court welcome, the team showed that Navy spirit which enabled them to win the large trophy they so well deserved.

CROSS COUNTRY

Navy's Harriers had by far one of their most successful seasons in several years, losing only one dual meet to IC4A champion Georgetown University and winning the Heptagonal Championship.

Captain Forrest Horton led one of the shortest teams ever seen by Coach Jim Gherdes, but size really played a big part in the Navy success. Only one man in the top seven runners was over 5'10", and as a result, most opponents felt we couldn't keep up over tough five mile courses. However, our small men showed that endurance and speed make up for size and that a small frame makes those hills much shorter. With eight dual meet successes and a big victory over Army, this team was the second most successful this fall with even more promise for next year.

BASKETBALL

As always, Coach Ben Carnevale and assistant Dave Smalley sent a small but determined Navy team on to the court against some of the top teams in the east and still managed to come away with a break even season.

Navy Captain Larry Mack led the team in defense while second classmen Chris Reddington, Bill Radcliffe and Gene Parchinski and firstie Mark Rein did most of the scoring. With Mack and Reddington at 6'4" the tallest of the first eight men, Navy really had trouble on the boards, leading to a few games which really looked bad due to cold shooting.

Perhaps the best game of the year was the Duke game played in Baltimore's Civic Center. The Midshipmen forced the ACC champions into overtime before bowing by a thin margin. Navy played no less than six teams on its nineteen team schedule that eventually played in post season tournaments.

Prospects for next season are exceptional as three starters and all of the junior varsity return. Also, help will be provided by several outstanding members of a plebe team that had an almost perfect season.

Coach John Higgins was forced to rely on a young team with graduation losses badly hurting last year's team. Captain Bill Fries was always a strong contender in the back stroke with Tim Beard. The beginning of the season was difficult, with five losses being broken only by two victories. As the season drew on, its conclusion brought more assurance and poise to the team with only the loss to Army marring the last five meets. With an experienced group returning, Coach Higgins can look forward to an improved season next year.

WRESTLING

Coach Ed Perry's grapplers started off the season like world beaters and then the tough matches came and somewhere the team lost its early season spirit. Opening with a win in the Coast Guard Invitational where second classman Wayne Hicks was voted outstanding wrestler of the meet, the team proceeded to pin losses on Cornell, Syracuse, and VPI.

Then an illegal hold in the heavyweight bout of the Temple match cost the team a victory, and desire seemed to wane a little. A close loss to Lehigh followed and Navy spirits dropped more. After a loss to Maryland, the team did manage to bounce back and fight their way to ties with Penn and Army.

FENCING

This was a rebuilding year for Coach Andre Deladrier, who had lost six of his nine letter winners to graduation. Considering these losses, Captain Norm Fluhrer led his team to a very respectable season. After losing close ones to Pennsylvania and Princeton, Navy easily handled Cornell and Brooklyn. After losing a squeaker to Columbia, New York University and Penn State were our final victims. Thus with good development, the fencing team managed a 4-4 season even with its rebuilding pains.

SQUASH RACQUETS

In a sport not seen in too many schools across the nation, the Navy men gave a good account of themselves this year. Coach Art Potter's racquet men captained by John Bishop ended the season with a 7-3 record and a much improved underclass aggregation.

Only three first classmen Bishop, John Owens, and Lloyd Abbot are leaving in June and thus there will be ample opportunity for improvement.

Navy opened with its usual northeastern tour in which four matches were won in three days. Then came Princeton, the best team on the Navy schedule. The Midshipmen gave a good account of themselves in a 3-6 losing effort. Only a Penn State victory and the loss to Army marred the remainder of the season. Captain John Bishop won the Maryland State Championship to end his career as a Navy Squashman.

RIFLE

Despite the setbacks of graduation losses and time lost to construction of a new rifle gallery, Coach Kendall Barber's rifle team approached a perfect season. Captain Dennis Johnson and first classman John DeThomas formed a solid nucleus for the team as the only returning lettermen. As the season proved, this team's eye was too sharp for everyone except Army. With the return of experienced shooters, next year should be even more successful for Navy's marksmen.

Tom Harding takes aim

PISTOL

With only a loss to Army to mar its seven match season, the pistol team of Coach Bill Geil lived up to its pre-season billing. Led by team captain Tom Harding, it swept through the season relatively easily with the closest match coming at the hands of the Coast Guard Academy. With continued development, next year promises to be an even better season.

Captain Wayne Durham

GYMNASTICS

Rule changes and inexperience combined to give Coach Chet Phillips' gymnasts a long winter. The Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastic League revised the format of meets in an attempt to match programs throughout the nation. Despite yeoman work by Captain Wayne Durham, Navy lost three in a row quickly to Syracuse, Springfield, and Temple. After a victory over the Merchant Marine Academy, Pittsburgh and Penn State proved to be too strong for us. After a win over Pennsylvania, the loss to Army left us with a relatively dismal 2-6 record.

INDOOR TRACK

This year's edition of the indoor thinclads of coach Jim Gehrdes and Al Cantello was a story of victory through depth. Captained by star hurdler Courtland Gray, the team had few individual stars at the start of the season, but it developed into the best winter team very quickly.

Maybe the biggest surprise this year was the two mile relay where no less than seven men ran at various times during the year. But in an event we had previously rarely won, we lost only twice. John Wright, Bill Wright, Gary Dimmig, Frank Keller, Greg Williams, Pete Logan, and Buzz Lawlor all combined to make this one of the team's biggest achievements.

Standout performances were also turned in by pole vaulter Mike Brown, high jumper Ed McLyman, 100 man Bill Wright, two miler Greg Williams, broad jumper Bill Bliss and 600 man Jim Prout. Notice of improvement to come in later years was given by several youngsters.

The year was nearly successful, with a six and two dual meet record made better with a second in the Heptagonals and a fifth in the IC4A championships.

BOXING

Once again, Head Coach Tony Rubino's boxers put on an exhibition well received by the Brigade. He and his assistant Emmerson Smith took the letter winner aspirants and turned out boxers who gave their best in their attempt to win the coveted "N." Once in the ring, skill was a factor in the victory in each weight class, but aggressiveness and determination seemed to be the most important factor in each boxer's win.

GOLF

At the beginning of the season, Coach Bob Williams' Golf team had good prospects for an excellent season. As the year proved, Captain Dave Coniff led his team to a very good 8-3 season with close losses to Penn State, Maryland, and Army being the blemishes on a perfect record.

The loss to Army was typical of these close losses. This match went down to the last twosome which came in tied. On the nineteenth hole, we then lost to a birdie. With a great deal of experience gained, next year's team should carry on this year's good record.

BASEBALL

The baseball team had trouble getting underway this year despite some brilliant individual efforts of its team members. Perhaps most outstanding in everyone's memory was the no hit pitching of Pat Graham. Coach Joe Duff had as one of his bigger pre-season worries the cold bats of the previous season. Initially, this season looked as if the old problems were continuing. However, after the Harvard game, Captain Roger Staubach and his team had a mid-season win skein developing. The last four games proved to be our undoing with Navy dropping three of these last four including the loss to Army.

CREW HEAVYWEIGHT and LIGHTWEIGHT

It looked like another year as a bridesmaid for the heavyweight crew of Coach Paul Quinn. Captain Doyle Borchers and his oarsmen seemed destined to finish second all year. However, after a win over Wisconsin to give them the spirit they needed, they went on to a complete sweep of the IRA regatta in Syracuse.

Coach Ralph Christy's lightweights had trouble most of the year. However, Captain Dick Pierson and his fellow oarsmen gave their all in every race, doing their best to bring home victory.

LACROSSE

Coach Bill Bilderback's Lacrosse team was the really bright spot of the spring season. Led by Captain Brian Lantier, the Navy stickmen went through an undefeated season to cop the national championship for the sixth consecutive year.

The season started on a close but prophetic note with a rugged victory over the star studded Mount Washington Lacrosse Club. From that point on, life became smoother with no opponent coming closer than the six point spread which Maryland managed. The sweetest victory was the crushing of Army on home territory. All American Jim Lewis led the attack in this game as he did all season.

TENNIS

New tennis coach Harvey Muller was faced with an almost complete rebuilding job this year. His only returning lettermen were Captain John Owens and firstie John Nelson. With these problems, the tennis team did its best to put together a good season, but the obstacles were just too high. After victories over Colgate and Syracuse, the opposition became too tough with a string of eight losses being broken by only two victories. With the experience gained by this year's young team, next year should be an excellent one for Navy.

DINGHY SAILING

The sailing team enjoyed a winning season under the tutelage of Coach John Ward and Captain Bob Champoux. After moving from sixth to second in the Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate Sailing Association fall ratings. This spring, the picture remained bright with skippers Dick Stiles and Sam Snyder doing excellent jobs. In almost all respects, the dinghy sailors did a very creditable job this year.

OCEAN SAILING

The Ocean sailing team is that little known group who brave the bitter cold and waves on the Chesapeake Bay representing the Naval Academy in big boat sailing circles. Starting when the ice is just out of the river, these sailors practice and tune themselves and their boats to a high pitch.

This year, an old event under a new name provided a highlight for the season. With our past President's brother in attendance, the John F. Kennedy Memorial Regatta was won by Harvard. Next year, the team will be doing its best to bring this trophy back where it belongs.

SHIELDS SAILING TEAM

The Shields Sailing Team uses five 30 foot racing sloops presented by Cornelius Shields through the Paul W. Shields Foundation to train and race up and down the East Coast. This year's team, under the captaincy of Chris Pilger, did a very fine job of proving to sailing circles that the Naval Academy trains men qualified to handle even vessels under sail. Since its start in 1963, the Shields Team has been constantly improving. With a nucleus of trained personnel, next year's prospects for Naval Academy Shields Sailing look even brighter.

TRACK

Coming off a successful winter season, Coach Jim Gehrdes' track team was seeking to improve last year's disappointing 3-4 record. Captain Carl Jackson proved his worth in the discus while Courtland Gray more than pulled his load in the hurdles. Kip Paskewich carried the sprinting workload for the thinclads. The season's greatest victory was the final one over Army. This close to the career of the first class was the best any of them could have desired.

NUMBER "12"

The famous shiftiness in action

The start of another probably spectacular play

When talking about our classmate Roger Staubach, it is hard not to use superlatives. An athlete such as this comes along very seldom, and when an athlete like Roger is combined with the gentleman Mr. Staubach, the picture becomes almost unbelievable except for those of us that actually knew him. Despite the fame and notoriety that went with his football exploits, Roger always remained the same nice guy that he had always been. Thus, it was with a great sense of pride that we the Class of 1965 sat through our Prizes and Awards Ceremony and watched "Number 12" receive permanent recognition. Never again will that number grace a Naval Academy football player out of respect for our classmate and friend, Roger Staubach.

FOUR

"So this is it!"

Four years filled with both tradition and change. On one hand, the tradition seemed almost overwhelming at times, and yet it was something on which to rely. From almost the day we entered the Academy, change assaulted us from all sides.

In academics we found changes in procedures and courses. In the midst of growing pains, the Academy found our class to be useful subjects for experimentation. And yet, as a result of this experimentation, we managed to gain much of the best from the old and the new. We also have had the satisfaction of establishing new traditions as results of this academic experimentation.

Professionally we also found many changes in the old traditions. We found ourselves "mixed up" at the end of Plebe year as well as being the subjects of new cruises around the continental United States. We also broke in the second class Academy summer sessions.

Physically, the changes in the traditional structures were also monumental. We saw Bancroft Hall renovated as well as breaking in the seventh and eighth wings. During our tenure, the proposals for a new science building took firm root and the new enlisted barracks were put under construction.

Change then has been the theme of our Four Years. And yet, this change has been taking place in the midst of a search for meaningful tradition. This then, in pictures, has been our "Four Years."

THE YARD

The first view . . . and the last.

NO! Not that gate.

For four years, we daily observed the changes which were wrought at the Naval Academy. The difference between the yard as we knew it, our plebe summer, and as it was at graduation, was particularly noticeable. We moved into the brand new 7th and 8th wings of Bancroft Hall when the Brigade returned for our plebe year. This made it possible for all the other wings to be completely rehabilitated before our graduation. Thus, as well as being the largest dormitory in the world, Bancroft Hall became one of the most habitable.

First stop on a Naval Academy tour.

The museum gained a new wing, and rehabilitation of the academic buildings was begun during our stay. Plans were made for a new Science Building, to be named after Nobel Prize winning Academy graduate, Albert A. Michelson. The new building will greatly improve the facilities available for the new academic programs being introduced.

One of the most beautiful buildings in the yard is the Naval Academy Chapel. Built in the shape of a Celtic Cross, the cornerstone was laid in 1904 by Admiral of the Navy George Dewey. # ACTIVITIES

FIRST CLASS OFFICERS

The First Class Officers had cognizance over the Honor Concept throughout the year. They were the official representatives of the class at various activities on the East Coast. In addition, several class activities were implemented by them, including the Beat Army Dance at the Army-Navy Country Club and the Mayo Beach Party in the late spring. They also saw to the formation of the Class of 1965 Constitution and the Publication of the Class Directory. The officers this year were: Tom Dames, President; Spike Karalekas, Vice-President; Ed Orr, Secretary; and Hugh Thompson, Treasurer.

HONOR COMMITTEE

The Brigade Honor Committee served as the key organization in the implementation of our Honor Concept. Besides handing down decisions on controversial problems, it heard all of the cases referred to it by the class honor committees. This year the Brigade Honor Committee accomplished much toward insuring the validity of the phrase "an officer and a gentleman."

BRIGADE HOP COMMITTEE

So many people go to hops without really thinking of all the many arrangements necessary to make a hop a success. The Brigade Hop Committee this past year did a tremendous job in coordinating all the hops including a combination Costume Hop—Pop Music Concert which was a Naval Academy first. Larry Leovic and his entire staff deserve a “Well done” for having done such an outstanding job in making this past year’s more enjoyable, more satisfying, and just plain fun.

RING DANCE COMMITTEE

The Ring Dance Committee was charged with a very important job—that of making the traditional Ring Dance a success as this is the biggest social event of a midshipman's career. Although it did rain slightly during the dance, the Class of 1965 Ring Dance with Billy Butterfield and his Orchestra will long be remembered by all.

SCUBA CLUB

John Klocek and the scuba club spent many hours over in the Natatorium learning the skills necessary to become qualified scuba divers. This is an activity which is very rewarding to the novice.

FOREIGN LANGUAGES CLUBS

The foreign languages clubs are designed for the purpose of enabling midshipmen to pursue the language of their choice. The clubs host many distinguished speakers at dinners, and they sponsor such activities as field trips and foreign films.

BRIGADE ACTIVITIES COMMITTEE

The Brigade Activities Committee, under the leadership of Chairman John Bromberg, made great strides in raising the morale and spirit of the Brigade during the entire year. It sponsored pep rallies, made floats for the football games, and held Brigade-wide contests during the "Dark Ages."

CHEERLEADERS

This year's cheerleading squad was the most popular of recent years. The Cheerleaders handled all of the rallies and introduced the most exciting march-on ceremonies ("Welcome Home Alumni, let's beat William and Mary"). The squad headed by Spike Karalekas supported all the big blue teams on the field and produced some real fine rallies.

PUBLIC RELATIONS COMMITTEE

During the Academic Year 1964-65 the Public Relations Committee established its prominence and reached an all-time high in the coverage of sports at the Naval Academy. In affiliation with the NAAA, the PRC, under the directorship of Paul Reason, provided complete coverage of all Navy sports for the national news media and the Brigade.

RECEPTION COMMITTEE

Co-Chairmen Jim Huff and Tom Eversole and their staff were assigned the duties of providing arrangements and accommodations for visiting athletic teams at the Naval Academy. A look at the records reveals that our teams were victorious in a considerable number of home contests . . . maybe there is a behind-the-scenes reason for this.

DRUM AND BUGLE CORPS

On the parade field and at football games the Drum and Bugle Corps provided the Brigade and the public with outstanding arrangements of show tunes and marches. They appeared in the Cherry Blossom Festival as well as many other functions. George Stewart and Harry Teasdale shared the spotlight as the Drum and Bugle Corps Commander.

MIDSHIPMEN'S CONCERT BAND

The Midshipmen's Concert Band, under the able direction of George Stewart, worked hard all year in an effort to provide interesting concerts for the Brigade, and in addition it made a number of trips to local colleges including Penn Hall and Hood College in order to present concerts there. Some of the well-remembered selections featured throughout the year were excerpts from "1812 Overture," "Hello Dolly," and a special arrangement of Al Hirt hit-parade songs.

NA-10

This past year the NA-10 made a fantastic improvement over years past. It's completely new library of music included arrangements used by Stan Kenton, Count Basie, and the Modern Jazz Quartet as well as some originals by the band members themselves. The NA-10, with leader Mike Butterfield and musical director Bruce Valley, performed at hops almost every weekend of the year at and away from the Academy, it provided the music for the Musical Clubs Show, and it presented a number of well-received concerts to the Brigade.

DIXIELAND BAND

Skip Gunther and his USNA Dixieland Band, a newly formed Dixieland combo, appeared at pep rallies, football games, and smokers, and it was featured in concert with the Midshipmen's Concert Band throughout the year. Wherever they went they were a big hit with the ol' Dixie two-beat.

SPIFFIES

Under the leadership of Steve Sharp and Ray Wilkenson, the Spiffies performed at all of the Costume Hops, many smokers and participated in the Musical Clubs Show. A truly professional rock an' roll band, they were noted for their good danceable beat.

MASQUERADERS

This year the Masqueraders presented "Monserrat", a drama in two acts by Emmanuel Rabler. John Burns played the title role with Andy Sekan as the treacherous Col. Izquierdo. The play was directed by Charles Jones.

MUSICAL CLUBS SHOW

The Musical Clubs Show, under the direction of Tom Eyer-sole, presented "Only Yesterday," a musical comedy written and directed by midshipmen. The theme centered around a step-by-step progression from the music of the river boat era to the modern A-GO-GO sound of today. Miss Robin McDowell and Bruce Kallson played the leads representing a never-meeting couple who grew young with the passing of time. All-in-all, the music ably provided by the NA-10, the comedy, and the fun had by all made for a delightful show.

GLEE CLUB

The Glee Club, presided over by Skip Lane, had a very successful year as evidenced by many of the trips it took including the Pan American Union in Washington. In addition, a number of concerts were presented to the Brigade during the year. Made up of the best talent of all the choirs at the Naval Academy, the Glee Club is truly a top-notch group.

CATHOLIC CHOIR

The Catholic Choir practiced every Sunday morning at 0700 and then sang at the 0800 Mass. Trips this year included performances in New York City at the St. Patricks Cathedral, the National Catholic Shrine in Washington and a concert at Trinity College in Washington. Ernie Ambort did a fine job as President of the choir.

CHAPEL CHOIR

In conjunction with the women's choir at Hood College, the Chapel Choir presented the annual performance of the "Messiah" during the Christmas Season this year. Other performances of the choir included trips to Washington and Philadelphia. Dave Bell was this year's Chapel Choir President.

ANTIPHONAL CHOIR

The Antiphonal Choir presented Chapel-goers with a unique experience each Sunday. Few churches anywhere can boast of having a responsive choir in the rear of the church. Trips to Washington and elsewhere are proper evidence that the Antiphonal Choir with President Bill Covington, is held in high esteem wherever it goes.

WRNV

The radio station run exclusively by and for midshipmen, WRNV always is broadcasting on the right frequency to set the mood. During the day it's popular music and at night during study hour it's likely to be folk music, quiet jazz, or just nice background music. Johnny Webber and his DJ's always seemed to be coming up with something new in radio enjoyment.

LUCKY BAG STAFF

The 1965 Lucky Bag Staff turned out the 1965 Lucky Bag—a project which took four years and then some to complete. It was a lot of hard work and involved a considerable loss of sleep at times, but in the end we feel that it was all worthwhile. We leave it to you to judge whether or not we were successful in our work. Bill Williams, the Editor-in-Chief, picked a staff with many talents and interests: Lee Watkins, Business Manager; Phil Reed, Advertising Manager; Roy Algren, Managing Editor; John Bloomer, Photography Editor; Andy Fahy, Circulation Manager; and Skip Gunther, Al Kasper, Steve Mladineo, and Mark Muhsam, as the Section Editors.

TRIDENT SOCIETY

The Trident Society is a "holding company" for the Trident Magazine, the Trident Calendar, the Reef Points Committee, and the Christmas Card Committee. Through these media the Society endeavors to fulfill its function as the arts and letters organization of the Naval Academy.

TRIDENT MAGAZINE

The Trident Magazine is published seven times yearly to promote professional knowledge and literary and artistic endeavor in the Brigade of Midshipmen and to stimulate those inquiring minds that highly value the Navy as it appears in literature and art. This year's Editor-in-Chief was Bob Andretta.

TRIDENT CALENDAR

The Trident Calendar is the 'official' calendar of the Brigade. This year's issue sold more copies than any one other issue ever has before as a result of the many hours spent by Charlie Stephan, Editor-in-Chief, and his staff.

CHRISTMAS CARD COMMITTEE

The official U. S. Naval Academy Christmas card is always handsome and this year's was no exception. Cris Pilger and his staff did a fine job in producing and distributing the cards.

LOG MAGAZINE

This year the Log staff printed ten issues and revised the Drag's Handbook. Don Pilling edited the Drag's Handbook as well as found time to be Salty Sam. Jon Amerault and his staff successfully attempted to bring more humor and short stories plus essays involving midshipmen's opinions on various items of interest to the Brigade.

SPLINTER MAGAZINE

The Splinter Magazine covers varsity and intermural sports stories as well as includes a Humor section and a Special Features section. Nick Paldino, Editor, and his staff felt that this year's issues were bigger and better than ever before.

FOREIGN RELATIONS CLUB

With a large boost in support during this year, the Foreign Relations Club has hosted a number of speakers in the military, academic, business, and diplomatic realms. These programs, along with visits to various colleges and two Washington Embassies, helped to develop an important awareness of the problems in the world today and their interacting and multiplying effects. Art Czerwonky was this year's President.

NAFAC

The Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference this year hosted representatives from more than fifty colleges across the country. The topic this year was to discuss the economic and political problems of Africa. President of NAFAC, Phil Barr felt that various discussion panels decided on some appropriate resolutions.

AUTOMOBILE COMMITTEE

The purpose of the Automobile Committee is to enable First Class midshipmen as a group to finance and purchase automobiles at the most reasonable rates possible. Additionally, the Auto Committee, this year, initiated the publication of "Rods and Rails," an automobile "gouge" which gave answers to many questions initiated by an automobile ownership.

ART AND PRINTING CLUB

Remember all of those posters around the Yard, especially during the football season? Well, the Art and Printing Club is the group responsible for it all. This group spent many long hours in their little printing room making poster after poster—and then some more. They deserve their fair share of credit for helping to increase the roaring spirit of the Brigade.

SAILING SQUADRON

Every day of the fall and spring, in fair weather or foul, midshipmen raced their boats on the Severn and the Chesapeake, gaining practical experience in every phase of sailing from marlinspike seamanship to racing tactics. During the summer the squadron went out into the Atlantic on either the Newport to Bermuda race or the Annapolis to Newport race.

Commodore Clyde Bingham, Mark Davis, Steve Allman, and Herschell Hughes

YP SQUADRON

Almost any afternoon of the fall and spring will find the YP Squadron sortieing out of the Severn and onto the Chesapeake Bay. The sole purpose of the squadron is to familiarize the midshipmen with the various aspects of naval operations afloat. This year's schedule included weekend trips to Baltimore and Norfolk with the added attraction of liberty there.

A book the size of the Lucky Bag is of necessity the product of many people. It has been my good fortune and pleasure to work with a dedicated group these last three years in the production of this, the 1965 LUCKY BAG.

To the Taylor Publishing Company and Mr. Fred Koger and Mr. Henry Wittich go thanks for the layout and printing of the book.

Much of the photography credit must go to Mr. Harry Horton of Apeda Studios. The excellent paintings for the divider sheets were most graciously done by Mrs. Myrto Horton.

Particular thanks must go to our officer representative Cdr. Harold F. Tipton who sweated through the production with us and helped smooth the way a number of times.

Finally, to the staff which gave of its own time and effort to produce the book itself, goes the credit of a publication of which they can be justly proud.

For ship propeller shafts against salt water or fresh, Ankorite 387-F is unsurpassed. It cannot break down under hydraulic pressure because its interior is impervious. It has a resilient Ankoprene synthetic rubber core which is bonded to the inner braids with a water-tight binder. A portion of the liquid may be absorbed by the soft outer braid interspersed with soft lead wires, permitting a durable, low friction contact without impairment to shaft surface.

Ankorite 387-F is also excellent for circulating pumps, high pressure hydraulic apparatus, hydro-turbine shafts, and water works pumps. For high or low pressure; temperatures to 200°F. Sizes 1/4" and up. Furnished as ring packing or in coil form on reels.

Any car that is this responsive, obedient and satisfying to drive simply has no right to be this good looking.

It's pure car, this 1965 Bonneville, but not everyone appreciates a swept-hip perimeter frame and all those mechanical things. So we sculpted a quick, bold Pontiac look for the watchers while we engineered a quick, nimble Pontiac car for you drivers. Responsive? Just order our new Turbo Hydra-Matic with our lean new Trophy V-8. Obedient? This car goes where you point, stops when you say. Satisfying to drive? We don't know which'll please you most: our even smoother Wide-Track ride, Bonneville's utterly elegant interiors, or knowing only one other fine car outsells this most luxurious Pontiac. Alumni of the Naval Academy are to be found today in positions of responsibility and leadership in every major element of our society—in the military, in industry, in education and in government. A cohesive, enlightened and dedicated alumni can accomplish much in providing the vital leadership, military and civilian, which is required today, if this country is to meet the challenge with which we are now squarely face to face.

A Salute to the Class of 1965

Ever since the original Curtiss Bi-Plane in 1913, the U. S. Navy and Curtiss-Wright have worked together to keep our Navy's defenses strong. In 1965, as for the past 52 years, Curtiss-Wright is proud to be associated with the U. S. Navy. Today, in the age of aerospace, we continue to work to help strengthen our Navy's striking forces with aircraft propulsion systems; missile components; structural ribs, periscope tubes and control simulators for nuclear-powered submarines as well as VTOL aircraft and training simulators for sea and air.

On this, the 10th anniversary of nuclear-powered vessels, we pledge our support in new technological advances to the Class of 1965, and look forward to our second half century in service to the U. S. Navy.

Can you tell who owns the 1965 Falcon?

Here's a test we think you'll have some fun with. Pair the people on the left with the Ford Motor Company cars pictured below. But remember, people's tastes in cars are wide and varied. That's why we at Ford Motor Company make 72 models available in our eight great car lines. From Mustang to Lincoln Continental there's a car to suit everyone. See what we mean by visiting your Ford or Lincoln-Mercury dealer. He's got a car just right for you, too.

ANSWERS:

Granny Garntz—this durable grand old lady made Comet—the World's Durability Champ—her personal choice. Calloway Gribbs—nothing but the private world of a Thunderbird would do—pop art sales have never been better. Jeremiah Van Allen III—what else but a Ford Galaxie 500 LTD for a scion of the times. Moira LaTour—"Make mine Mercury," says Moira, "now that it's in the Lincoln Continental tradition." Tex Kincaid—he's really from Hoboken and doesn't drive but likes to stand near a Continental. Farley Fastback—he's no hot rod, likes gas savings instead, up to 15% greater fuel economy in the '65 Falcon. Harriet Harassed—a mother of six needs plenty of room and a Fairlane 500 wagon fills the bill. Mervin Milton—Merv found the Mustang hardtop hard to top.

If you'd just spent fifty miles twisting down a mountainside in this '65 CORVETTE, you'd be taking the words right out of our mouth about its new 4-wheel disc brakes.

Praise comes easily to Corvette's big caliper-type disc brakes. They're fade-resistant, heat-resistant, water-resistant and fuss-resistant.

Adjustment and maintenance? What adjustment and maintenance? These discs can get along swell without much help.

All this peace of mind is standard equipment on all '65 Corvettes. But even this doesn't complete the improvements.

We've added the new 396-cubic-inch Turbo-Jet V8: 425 bhp at 6400 rpm with 415 lb-ft of torque. You can order it, or a 300-hp, 350-hp, or Ramjet fuel-injected 375-hp V8.

As for appearance, it's brushed up. Smooth new hood, magnesium-style wheel covers, new grille design, functional front fender louvers and a revised interior.

We didn't change all those lovely items you can specify, like 4-Speed fully synchronized transmission, cast aluminum wheels, and Positraction.

All in all, Corvette for '65 adds up to a lot more car in every way. Which we think is the best possible reason for changing it.

Is it fish or foul play?

Sorting out real target information from the rest of its watery environment is one of the most complex problems of antisubmarine warfare.

This year ITT was named systems manager for the new Atlantic Undersea Test and Evaluation Center (AUTC) that will be the principal U.S. Navy facility for checking out ASW weapons systems. AUTC will be an "inner space" range, the first capable of precision tracking in an underwater atmosphere of great distance and depth.

Soon the whole range of ASW problems—detection, classification, pinpointing and destruction—will be examined in a controlled, yet authentic, marine environment.

AUTC will be 100 miles long, 20 miles wide and 6,000 feet deep. ITT will lace this ocean area with hydrophones and other sensitive instruments, erect tracking gear to permit thorough underwater evaluation of such advanced ASW weapons as SUBROC and ASROC.

ASW is not new to ITT. World War II's HUFF-DUFF system that pinpointed U-boat radio transmissions, no matter how brief, was an ITT development.

In 1957, after solving the problem of high density storage of multi-channel analog information, ITT developed equipment to record underwater acoustical environments. Now, ITT sonar simulators using tapes of actual conditions can train up to 10 sonarmen at once.

Currently, ITT is developing DINAH, an advanced underwater detection system based on electro-magnetic principles.

Once upon a time there was a king called Golden Gate

Now, the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge is king. It has the longest single suspended span in the world—60 feet longer than San Francisco's Golden Gate. The Verrazano-Narrows, with a 4,260-foot main span, connects Staten Island with Brooklyn and thus all of New York City.

This magnificent bridge, with cables and roadway by United States Steel and its American Bridge Division, required 160,000 tons of steel. And here are other statistics: 145,000 miles of wire. 1,048 suspender ropes. 2½ miles of 20-foot-wide Cyclone

Fence for the catwalks. 36,250 gallons of paint for the finish coat.

Aside from all these things, the Verrazano-Narrows took skill and imagination, because this bridge was one of the most challenging construction projects ever undertaken.

Millions of people have traveled across bridges built by U.S. Steel in New York City and throughout the country. In years to come, millions more may cross even bigger bridges still to be built by U.S. Steel. But today, the Verrazano-Narrows is king.

gives Navy another winner!

A-4E Skyhawk is setting new standards for compact carrier-based aircraft. It is one of the latest products of a Navy-Douglas team that has been turning out top performers for forty-two years.

This potent jet combines the latest advances in aerospace and ordnance into a versatile unit that packs the punch of a World War II battle cruiser, yet is able to fit easily into a carrier elevator without folding its wings.

In true Navy tradition, it can score from close in or far out and has the rugged dependability that comes through best when the going gets roughest.

Baseball's annual All-Star Game. World Series. NCAA football. And AFL pro games. The Rose Bowl Game. Chrysler Corporation brings you the widest possible radio and/or TV coverage of America's great sports events.

We do it, of course, to reach the right people—the action-minded men and women of America—with the latest news about Chrysler Corporation's 1965 cars. Plymouth. Dodge. Chrysler. And Imperial.

But there's another reason: we think sports help make Americans the kind of people we are—and Chrysler Corporation the kind of company it is. Vigorous. Competitive. On the move.
